IWEITTEN FOR THE DISPATCH.1

The activity that pervades the industrial trades in this section has never been so marked as at present. A tour among the manufacturers in this section engaged in the iron and steel husiness reveals a most healthy condition of trade, at least so far as the production and con amption of these articles is concerned, and a consequent activity at every mill and furnace, except where the shortage of gas interferes:

The flurry in railroad and financial circles throughout the country has no doubt | 36,000 tons. created some distrust among buyers, and lessened the demand, as well as inconveniencing some local manufacturers; but merchants are a unit in the opinion that this is only temporary, and assert that valvues are on too solid a foundation, and the legitimate demands of the country too great to be seriously effected by the operations of

There is now an echo of complaint from some pig iron makers against the low prices ruling for all grades of pig iron; nevertheless, the output for the number of furnaces in blast is as large as it ever has been. A Bright Outlook for Next Year.

Well-posted iron men are of the opinion that prices will advance, and base this belief not only on the great consumptive demand of the country, but upon the natural reaction from the present abnormally low range of prices.

The year just drawing to a close has been that prices will advance, and base this be-

The year just drawing to a close has been one of the most prosperous in the history of the trade in this vicinity. Mills have all been favored with plenty of business, and the general conditions existing throughout the year, until very recently, have maintajued prices at a very satisfactory level. e are now near enough to the close of 1890 to estimate the production at about 9,000,000 tons, with unsold stocks on December 31 estimated at 350,000 tons, or 4 per cent of the production. The outlook for the coming year is none the less promising. From pres ent indications, the consumption in 1891 will be between 10,000,000 and 11,000,000 tons. The amount of railroad building and car construction, the heavy demands for structural material for building purposes, the activity among foundries, machine shops, and engine builders and boiler makers, as well as the usual demands of the country for iron promised for the year, all warrant the prediction that the incoming year will prove one of the greatest in activity and profit, alike to mill owners and wage-

The fuel question is now uppermost in the minds of Pittsburg ironmakers. According to recent reports, there are 14 mills here (not including McKeesport) that have changed back to coal in the puddling furnaces, although in two of these some of the furnaces are yet working on gas.

Furnaces Changing From Gas to Coal. In these mills there are 454 puddling furnaces, while the total number of furnaces in Allegheny county, including McKeesport, is 1,152. At the National Tube Works Company, McKeesport, every department of the four rolling mills is again using coal. About 15,000 bushels are being consumed daily. The company intend erecting a coal elevator on the river bank near their works, in order to transport the coal from the barges to the mills. They recently erected at their No. 4 mill 15 double puddling furnaces, and these will now have to be torn down, owing to their not being adapted to the use of coal; either natural or artificial gas must be used in these furnaces.

At the Clinton Mill, on the Southside, five double puddling furnaces are standing idle, while the single furnaces are using coal. At the Republic Iron Works, on Twenty-fifth street, Southside, they are still in a condition of gas shortage. The new puddle forge, consisting of 14 double puddling furnaces, will have to be torn down. The old forge, comprising 26 single furnaces, is back to coal, and a part of the finishing department is likewise back to

It is thought that the recent gas strike by Jones & Laughlin, whose mill adjoins there, will urge the Republic to try for gas. At Howe, Brown & Co.'s mill, on Sixteenth street, coal is being partially used. In the Millvale mill the puddling department is equivalent to 36 single furnaces, but only 21 of these are built single. At this mill there are two quadruple furnaces, being about the only furnaces of their kind about Pittsburg. one turn the total output of one of these furnaces is about 12,000 pounds, while of a single furnace it is 2,500 pounds The Pittsburg Forge and Iron Company is using coal in all their pudding and scrap furnaces, and artificial gas in their heating department. About 7,000 bushels of coal will be required daily at this mill. At the Lockhart Iron and Steel Works, Chartiers, the puddling lurnaces have been changed back to coal, as has also the puddling department in the Soho mill of Moorehead, McCleane & Co. Lindsay & McCutcheon and Chess, Cook & Co. are now using coal entirely. The consumption in these mills is almost 10,000 bushels per day. Experimenting With a New Gas Process. At Painter's mill in the West End, 16 puddling lurnaces in the new forge were on last week, and 44 off owing to the shortage of gas; in the old forge 24 furnaces are idle and under repairs to resume coal during the week.

The firm is experimenting with the Archer process of fuel gas. The new fuel is Lima crude oil, but, judging from the former report of the change back to coal, the process must be unsatisfactory. Regarding the Archer process, an authority states that it has a poor future; that it would cost more than natural gas, and nearly double the price of coal. It is understood that the La Belle Steel Works, of Smith Bros. & Co., in Allegheny, also the United States Iron and Tin Plate Company, Lunden Steel Company, Duquesne Tube Company and the Pittsburg Tube Company are experimenting on this process.

At the American Iron Works of Jones & Laughlin, the puddle furnaces that were changed back to coal when the gas gave out, are now being returned to gas, the company having struck two wells of their own tha turnishes them more than an ample supply of gas. The works are now running full in all departments, with the likelihood of continuing so throughout the winter. The old wells have been plugged and reserved for possible future use.

In the Upper Union Mill of Carnegie, Phipps & Co., Thirty-third street, there is pail considerable trouble on account of the gas shortage. During the last month the puddling department has been making only from two to three heats per turn, but the finishing department is working full, turn-ing out about 275 tons of finished iron and steel per turn. Owing to the lack of gas, about 35 men at this mill are idle.

At Oliver Bros. & Phillips, lack of gas has made it necessary to fall back on coal in the puddling department. Of 42 jurnaces, 28 have been changed, as far as we can large and these are ming the slock and Versed in It.

New Steam and Slack Process New Steam and Slack Process.

This is the same process as is used in the entire puddling department of the Vesuvius Mill, of Moorehead Bros. & Co., and the Kensington Mill, of Lloyd, Son & Co. This process is the newest substitute for fuel in puddling furnaces, and it is claimed its cost is only one-half that of gas. The jurnace used is the same as that used for coal. It is charged with slack coal, and the combustion is forced by the introduction beneath the grate bars of superheated steam. The bars A New Gas and Superheated Steam and grate bars of superheated steam. The bars are so placed as to admit steampipe openings, so arranged that there is a constant blowing upon the bed of slack. By this force the combustion is made so complete that there is very little smoke and cinder. A kind of water gas is produced by the de-composition of the steam, but there is said to be a total absence of moisture.

Park Bros. & Co. are building an eight and ten-inch natural gas main from the Wildwood field to their Black Diamond Steel Works on Thirtieth street, costing $80,000, in order to insure a sufficient supply for their works.

It is thought that by the first of the year all the mills now undergoing a change to coal will be in a position to run steady. Operations during last month were greatly interrupted by the withdrawal of gas from the puddling furnaces, and the production of muck iron during the month was not over 36 000 tons.

Sundry Repairs and Reopenings. Furnace D, of the Edgar Thomson plant of Carnegie Bros. & Co., at Braddock, was blown out recently for relining and general repairs. At the Soho furnace of Moorehead & Co., all repairs have been completed, and the furnace was lighted early this week. On the 1st inst., the large furnace A, of the Monongahela Furnace Company's plant, near McKeesport, controlled by some officials of the National Tube officials of the National Tube Works Company, was blown in in the presence of many invited guests. The Edith Furnace, in Lower Allegheny, has been leased by this company. It has been casting on the present lining since October, 1888, with favorable prospects of continuing another year. When that time comes it will be blown out and dismantled and built up as No. 3 to the two new Monorarchell.

are now three furnaces not in blast, two of which are being relined, but will be ready some time during this month and 22 are casting 4,300 tons daily. The 11 furnaces at the two plants of the Carnegies' produce exactly one-half of this.

THE CARNEGIES BREAK THEIR RECORD. Carnegie Bros. & Co. are placing 35 Roney stokers in their Edgar Thomson mill. On the 5th instant these works again broke their already remarkable record of rail-making, turning out 1,441 tons in 24 hours. The best previous record for the same time is 1,417 tons. The rolling capacity of the mill is now less than the converting department, and will be brought up to the increased recoverements.

The Allegheny Bessemer Steel Company, recently purchased by the Carnegies, resumed operations under the new management on the 25th ult. The output for the present will be steel billets.

The Oil Well Supply Company has also recently made extensive improvements on their Twenty-first street ahops, a new furnace and heavy hammer having been added. It is understood that this latter company is backing the lessees of the old Continental Tube Works and the Elba Iron Company in their management. They have agreed to take all the product of the mill, but owing to the damage by fire to the works on the 8th inst., operations were suspended until last Monday.

Two new heating furnaces have been placed in the plate mill department of the Vesuvius Iron Works, of Moorhead Bros. & Co., which will increase the capacity of that department by 110 tons daily. Ground was broken on the 9th inst. for the erection by Carnegie, Phipps & Co., at the old Poor Farm site, Homestead, of their new 36-inch beam mill, which will be the largest in the world, and will take some months to complete.

The contemplated move among the furnacemen in the Mahoning and Shenango Valleys to shut down on January 1, unless the coke combine reduces the price of coke from the present rate of $2 15 to about $1 35 or $1 50 per ton and the railroads agree to lower their freight rates, it seems, will be carried out unless the relief they ask for is granted in the meantime. granted in the meantime.

Excessive Coke and Freight Rates

Excessive Coke and Freight Rates.

There has been an agreement signed by them to this effect. At each furnace only enough coke is being bought to run until January 1, with the expectation of going out of blast at that time.

The production of pig iron of valley furnaces is estimated as 90,000 tons per mouth, Bessemer predominating. On this basis they consume about 125,000 tons of coke per month, and the revenue to the railroads from these industries is estimated at near $200,000 per month. It is almost too at near $200,000 per month. It is almost too early in the fight to forecast the probable outcome of it. Coke operators say they outcome of it. Coke operators say they have not given the matter much thought. Their agreement with the cokers remains in force until February 12, 1891, and they say it is not likely there will be any reduction made before this time. Local iron men think that the move on the part of the valley furnacemen is a very bold one, and while they may succeed in banking their furnaces, yet the loss of output by the idleness that will be necessary to remedy the so-called evil will probably amount to as much as the difference would foot up in ten years.

Very best of beer and the result shows that it is becoming known. You may depend upon it that Pittsburg will make a better showing next year than the past in her increase in the brewing business."

Following are given the figures of the increase in the consumption of beer all over the country, as compiled for the Western Brewer. According to that journal it shows a marvelous ingrease. The sales for the six months ended October 31, were 17,119,670 barrels, against 15,066,091 barrels for the same mouths of 1889. This is an increase of 2,053,879 barrels, or more than 13 6-10 per cent.

CHAPTER V. Scott passed the night walking up and down his bedroom unintermittently but softly, so as not to awaken Catherine in the adjoining chamber. His thoughts went back to the days when the dead and more dearly-loved Catherine was alive and young. He lived over again certain evening, when Catherine Eames, 17, and radiantly pretty, was radiantly happy likewise; for her two lovers had come up to supper, and it was easy to see from the dark glances and bitter speeches that passed between them, how jealous each was of the other, and how much both aspired to her

Catherine did all she could to foment their bad feeling. If she gave David a sweet bad feeling. If she gave David a sweet smile, she straightway touched Michael's hand by accident as she dispensed her hospitality; if she laughed one moment at Michael's half-malicious jests, the next she had turned to David, and with pretty pleading eyebrows and bewitching ways, he knew how without a word to get her laughter pardoned.

The unfortunate young men suffered torments; but instead of tracing the origin of their pain to Catherine, where it was due,

It contrasted Michael's handsome Irish face with David's Northern fairness, and so en-hanced and equalized the good looks of both, that in point of beauty alone it was impossible to decide which deserved the preference. The stormy wind, rattling at the door, mingled with Catherine's light words, and set Michael quoting:
"Fate and fortune come without knecking," said he, "Give us your answer can-didly to-night, Catherine; for who can tell if in three weeks' time we shall be here to receive it? You, as you say, may stop down there at your aunt's altogether, or a sudden whim may seize me to take ship to the antipodes, and never be heard of again."

"In that case," cried Catherine, "my answer can be of no importance to you."

"Oh, it would be something to meditate on in the watches of the night!" he answered, and his blue eyes drew hers and held them fixed for one pensive moment upon his own. A deeper color came to her

"You will both come again and see me in three weeks' time," said Catherine, "when I shall be back from auntie's? and then—perhaps—I may——" She paused to smile coquettishly at one and the other.

The wild gusty December wind rushed at the cottage, and shook every door and window with violence, as though seeking to force an entrance; the log fire crackled gloriously up the chimney, and red reflections played over the cozy house-place and its four occupants—upon Eames, who, with folded hands and head drooped back, dreamed
