The Religious and Moral Welfare of the Population Cared For.

One of the most interesting communities in Western Pennsylvania is Ford City. A town that is built, owned and exclusively controlled by a manufacturing corporation can searcely be said to be a social experiment, for there are now several such places," in the United States. But at this time Ford City may be considered a social curi-

It is passing through the first stage of evolution. After a career of little more than two years, it has reached a point where its society has begun to develop; where results are commencing to come from the far-sighted policy of capitalistic economists; where the workings of corporation government in a monopolistic town may be observed.

A Pittsburg lady, recently visiting a relative at Ford City, happened to mention that in her garret at home she had two castoff overcoats for men, which she would send to him, and that he could give them to persons whom he thought would need them for the present cold weather. The young man

"There is nobody here who is need of anything like that."

What Called The Dispatch's Attention. It was this remark that led a staff correspondent of THE DISPATCH to spend a day at Ford City within the past week. The town is in Armstrong county, 40 miles from Pittsburg and 4 miles below Kittanning. It has a population of perhaps 2,500 souls, and the entire place is owned by the Pittsburg and trame, and are far superior to the tenements usually found in company towns. The company owns every one of these many hundreus of dwellings. They will not sell a single one, but all are rented on the most reasonable terms-from $5 to $20 per month. The company owns all the public buildings, including the hotel, stores, halls and postofice. Included in these are reading rooms, gymnasium and offices for the use of

The Company's Religious Work. He is much liked, and seems to have great influence with the people. Every night for several weeks past the church has been crowded to overflowing, and the interall of this the plate glass company has had a part. The church is a beautiful brick building. In all Pennsylvania outside of the large cities, a more complete sanctuary cannot be found. The windows are of an in amphitheater form, the chandeliers are cas, and the whole is finished in expensive This church was built and entirely paid for by Mrs. Captain Ford, wife of the under of the Pittsburg Plate Glass Works. Adjoining it a parsonage for the preacher was built and paid for by her son, Mr. Edward Ford, president of the company, These two buildings were then given by Mrs. Ford and her son to the Pittsburg Conference of the M. E. Church, wholly free of debt or

Why the Corporation is Benefited. The company is now done with the properry, and to all intents and nurposes pays no more attention to it. But what has been the result thus far of their liberality? Well. every member of that church is a workman in the glassworks, for nobody lives in the town except plate-glass workmen. Every one of the 75 persons converted in the present revival is either a workman in the fac tory or a member of a "workman's family, Nobody will deny that as a consequence of the conversions the people directly interested will become better workmen-more conscientious-and that is a term of which employers thoroughly understand the valu

tion of the congregation has been with the

There is also a Catbolic church in the town. The company presented the ground, He is Suspended for a Lap Order, Almost on which the priests erected a modest building. Their congregation is small, but the priest is also doing good in his way, and etter workmen are the result. The policy of Armstrong county judges a few years ago in re using to grant liquor licenses was one of the chief things that decided the venerable Captain Ford to purchase two tarms from Mesers Graff and Montgomery, below Kittanning, and build the town which this article is describing. Temperance a Controlling Factor,

He argued that the company would have less trouble with their workmen in a place where liquor could not be had. He believed they would do better work, and use their own salaries to better advantage where there was not the temptation to loaf in saloons. In the course of time, as the society in

Ford City developed, means were invented by some of the people to get their stimulants. Beer clubs were organized, and for a time they smuggled in the town all the liquor they wanted. The plate glass company declared war on these clubs, and by refusing to rent them buildings gradually reduced their membership. Three months ago President Edward Ford gave notice to the last remaining beer club that unless they disbanded within three days the building they occupied would be torn down over their heads. They disbanded, and now there is no liquor at all in Ford City. the Opera House Bowling Alley and Gymnasium there is no poolroom or bar.

The company donated the school house also to the township on condition that school should be taught there nine and ten months, instead of six months, as usual in the coun Living is Very Cheap There.

The reading room is fairly well patronized, and altogether the spiritual and educational demands of society have not been neglected by a great corporation, as they so often are. The people of Ford City live well. That fact very forcibly impressed the writer. The best of meat sells at from 5 to fore the company would rent the butcher & store room they made him agree to sell meat former associates and friends. One Thing is Yet Lacking. There is only one thing that Ford City is not yet possessed of. That is a cemetery. Thus far there has been no need of one. The people are remarkably healthy. Among the esidents there is absolutely no contagious disease, and the two physicians have very little to do. As a great many of the workmen, who live here are foreigners, with large families and continental ways of living, this fact impressed the writer as wonderful. Inquiry failed to show a single serious sanitary fault in the whole history of the town. One woman had a theory that the phenomenal health of the community was due in part to the large amount of copperas used in the manufacture and finish of plate glass. This may or may not be the case, but certainly the public health is also benefited by the warm, roomy and substantial houses provided for the people, and also by the plenty-fulness of food as a result of cheap prices. THE LIVING IS WONDERFULLY CHEAP

At any rate, the company has not as yet had occasion to add a graveyard to their unique city on the shore of the Allegheny.

The Canal Commission Holding Quiet Meetings in Capt. John A. Wood's Office -Preliminary Report Made to the Governor-Preparing the Final Report. On the dead quiet, the Ship Canal Commissioners are holding sessions these days at Capt. John A. Wood's office, Wood and Water streets. The preliminary report has been made to the Governor, and the Commission is now at work on the final one to be made to the Legislature. The length of the session is at present indefinite, though an adjournment will likely be taken for Christmas. The Commission has been at work over 13 months, and has held more than that many regular meetings, beside some special ones. All proposed routes have been carefully considered and the one recommended will be that of the Beaver and Shenango Valley. Mr. Goodwin states that reasons therefor are convincing. It is the intention of the commissioner to have its report published in venes, so that all will have an opportunity to examine it carefully. It is thought it will receive more attention than if simply

A DISPATCHER'S BAD BLUNDER.

Causing a Wreck. CHICAGO, Dec. 23 .- There was a threatened strike of train dispatchers on the Chicago and Erie Railroad yesterday, on account of the suspension of Train Dispatcher C. C. Hunt, of Huntington, Ind.

When the fact became known, the other dispatchers demanded his reinstatement. General Superintendent Merrill explained to them that the suspension was for good cause, and under circumstances which generally result in absolute dismissal. Scott had issued what is known as a "lap" order; that is, providing for two trains or the same track at the same time from which a collision might have resulted, had not the man who followed him on duty rectified the order. The men recognized the justice of the action taken, and the threatened trouble

Hull, who was convicted of siding and abetting him in the embezzlment, were to-day sentenced by Judge Butler in the United States District Court to five years' imprisonment each in the Eastern penitentiary. Bard was eashier of the bank and Hull was one of its depositors. Bard allowed Hull to overdraw his account to the amount of almost $40,000. When the defalcation could no longer be concealed, Bard made a consession to the bank's directors. He was arrested and pleaded guilty. It was mainly upon his evidence that Hull was convicted

Mr. Johnston is known to be a good iresser, and for the past week he has been wearing an overcoat and seal cap that made him the envy of many people. This overcoat and cap Mr. Johnston placed in his office while he was at work trying cases in the Criminal Court. Shortly before noon yesterday some miscreant entered the District Attorney's office and purloined the aforesaid coat and cap. When Mr. Johnston decided that his appetite craved dinner he discovered the robbery, and a vigilant search was made, but neither the thief nor the garments could be found. The tipstaves of Criminal Court, under the marshalship of Tom Pender started out on the trail, but returned at 4:30 empty handed. The result of this was that | Childs picks it up and cuts its head off with Mr. Johnston missed his dinner and had to go home in an overcoat and hat borrowed from Charley Fagan.

THE NEXT CONGRESS. HIS CROP OF SNAKES.

Genuine Reptile Farm in the Southwest Well Cultivated. Day before yesterday I met a man who is probably the only bona-fide snake charmer in America, says a writer in the New York Star. He has been in town seeing about placing his fall snake crop. It seems very odd to hear him talk of "my crop of snakes," but he means every word of it, for he has genuine snake farm in the Southwest.

The farm proper consists of a pen som 25 feet in diameter. In the center of thi pen is a raised platform, accessible in safety from the outside, on which visitors can promenade out of reach of the deadly fangs. In the woods and wild swamps surrounding the place legions of moccasins, cotton-mouths, rattlesnakes and copperheads are found. These wilds are the seed bins from which at times Mr. Childs draws to replen-ish his farm. At one side of the inclosure is a rabbit warren in which live some 50 or 60 bunnies. Their number, however, is constantly changing. They never die of old age. They are the lood of the snakes. Between 500 and 600 reptiles are in the farm at present, and most of them are in-tended for this fall's slaughter. Only the larger ones are used, as they yield a greater amount of oil, skin and rattles than the small ones. Mr. Childs expects to harvest 800 ounces of oil this season, and has made his price $2 per ounce. Aside from the oil, he will have a handsome crop of rattles and tanned skins.

When an ounce or so of fresh oil is desired, Mr. Childs enters the pen and either whistles with his lips or uses a flute. The snakes at once glide out of their holes and gather round him, making a peculiar purr-ing sound with their rattles to denote their pleasure. Selecting the largest and fattest, in Her Hearth.

Dorothy in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.] A certain wise old lady said to the writer recently: "I always judge a woman by the hearth she keeps. Show me the fire she sits by, and I'll tell you her character." She was right, as you will know if you think a minute. From time immemorial the cheery Hays, Maggie Murr, selling liquor without | hearth has been a symbol of home and its comforts, but when it is disorderly, unswept or choked with ashes, it ceases to be a joy or a luxury. The room may be poor, and the fire a tiny one, but if the dog-irons are bright and erect, the poker, tongs and shovel marshaled side by side in military order, the hearth swept clean, the bricks as red as scrubbing brush can make them, and the fire blazing cheerily, the scantiness of the furniture will not matter and home will seem the dearest thing on earth. By the way, will anything ever take the place of the old open fire-place? Beside it the furnace in the cellar is an abomination, and the grate is a new fangled make-believe.

MANY SURPRISES IN

Members From the Wayback Districts. Who Will be Notable

BY REASON OF THEIR ECCENTRICITIES WASHINGTON, Dec. 23 .- The next House will have among its members some whose presence will add a picturesqueness to the assemblage. A considerable number of the new members who will represent districts heretofore strongly Republican are men who were nominated without any idea that they would be elected, and whose election was as great a surprise to themselves as to anybody else. In some cases very different men would have been nominated if there had been any apparent chance of election. A number of prominent Democrats, who declined nominations, now deeply regret the fact. A few of the new members from the West are men whose education extends scarcely beyond an ability to read and write. A Demogratic member of the House, who is a prominent campaigner, was telling the other day of some of his experiences on the stump in the West. "I was to speak in the town hall at Blank," he said. "A large assemblage filled the hall. The leading Democrats of the place occupied seats on the platform. There was a committee of leading citizens, bankers, merchants, members of the board of trade, and the like, to receive and introduce the speakers.

A VERY MODEST CANDIDATE. "I made a speech of about an hour, calling upon the Democrats in particular, and all good citizens in general, to vote the Demo-cratic ticket and send the Republican who was misrepresenting them into retirement. While I talked there was a man in the gal lery upon whom my eyes rested, probably because he leaned forward and listened with particular interest. There was nothing about him personally to attract attention, and his place was among the less important element of the meeting who were crowded promisenously in the gallery.

"After the meeting was over I walked out of the hall with one of the committeemen, and as we got to the door we ran into some one. My companion turned, and, seeing who it was, said in an indifferent, half-apol ogetic sort of way: 'Oh, this is Mr. Jones, our candidate,' and then, without stopping to exchange eyen a passing remark, led me on our way, while the candidate lost him-self in the crowd without attempting to cultivate my acquaintance. I merely had time to observe that he was the very modest, but deeply interested individual, who had sat in the gallery."

THEY ARE STRANGE STATESMEN. Not one of the three new men from Nebraska is personally known to either the Senators or the Representatives now holding seats in Congress from that State. Rvan the Democrat, from the First district, is a bright young lawyer, who, while he has not yet gained any prominence at the bar and has not been long in the State, is a collegebred man, and has the gitt of eloquence, McKeighan is the man who has been re-ferred to as a ne'er-do-well, who immigrated to Nebraska from Illinois.

Kem, who beat Mr. Dorsey, the rich and brilliant young banker who now represents that district, claimed the votes of his fellow citizens as a Farmers' Alliance candidate, upon the ground that he had been a farmer never made more than $500 in any year during that time; that he was the father of six motherless children, and that he had a mortgage of $1,500 on his farm. In his the property of destroying the tetanus speeches to his admiring constituents he advocated the confiscation of all railroads and their operation by the Government for the benefit of the farmers; the hanging of all bankers who charged farmers more than 6 per cent interest on loans, and the destruc-tion of grain elevators whose owners charged farmers more than a cent a bushel for the storage of wheat.

Ignorant, forlorn and without money, h came out of a sod-covered but and got the votes of his fellow citizens, and will represent them in the next House. THE SUCCESSOR OF CANNON.

The man who succeeds "Joe" Cannon is a wealthy man now engaged in the brokerage business, but he is said to possess some peculiar characteristics which will make him suitable successor to the tame of Martin, of Texas. He has seen more of society than has Mr. Martin. He has been a soldier and bears the title of Colonel. Just at the close of the war he captured a fort down in Florida, which, it is said, had already been de serted by its defenders.

During his campaign some of the news. papers advocating his election published great two-page cuts depicting the capture of fort, in which is represented one man on the earth works, far in advance of the rest, with a revolver in one hand aud a sword in the other, casting defiance and de-struction into the ranks of a fleeing foe. In big white letters across the hero's back is written the name "Busey." Mr. Busey has but one eye and can see very imperfectly out of the other. One of his peculiarities is said to be a fear of being abroad in the dark. It is said that he is never known to go out or his house after night-fall.

THE LEADER OF THE ALLIANCE. The leader of the Alliance in the next House, and probably in succeeding Houses if the Alliance membership increases, will be Livingston, of Georgia. He is a tall, rawboned old farmer with a keen eye and a glib tongue. He is fairly well educated, and is very bright and shrewd. He has un-bounded confidence in his own ability. He thinks that with but a small chance he can devise legislation which will cure all the ills the farmer complains of. He believes that he possesses those states man-like qualities which will enable him to assist in bringing about an economic millennium. He is a man of very positive convictions and has a fund of information con firmatory of these convictions.

A GENTLEMAN IN TRUTH, One New Yorker Does Not Forget That Negress is a Woman.

Every seat in the bridge car was occupied, when a negress got aboard the train, says the New York Herald. Her arms were fuli of bundles, and she appeared to be weary. As she tried to clutch a strap she dropped a package, and in stooping to pick it up stumbled. She would have fallen, too, had not a gentleman sprang to her aid. With an outstretched arm he helped her to regain her balance, secured the stray bundle and then led her to the seat he had just vacated.

The episode created a sensation among the passengers, all of whom were men.

As the unknown gentleman was leaving the car a friend was overheard to ask him:

"George, you are getting nearsighted?"

"No; why do you ask such a question?"

"Why? Because you gave up your scat to that negress, I think you are overstraining yourself in trying to be notite."

"Not at all, my dear fellow. I gave up my seat to her simply because she was a woman. I should have despised myself for remaining in my seat because she was black." spond to the Eurydice's signals of distress.

—Mrs. Harriet Worrell, said to be the champion chess player of the country, attempted suicide at College Point, L. L. by drinking a quantity of carbolic acid. She is still alive, but slight hopes are entertained for her recovery. She is the widow of Captain Worrell, a westby Englishman, who held a high place in Mexico during Maximilian's reign.

runs through the bull ring, or the retreats surrounding it. Mr. McKee was relating the story last night, and it runs as follows: "I had been sailing along for some time with my share of good fortune, but there came a day that changed my ideas of oil speculations. It was just two minutes to 11 o'clock one forenoon, and I was bidding one cent above the quotations in New York and Oil City, but did not get much at that. I felt it in my bones that something was going to happen and it did. The next time I got a look at the clock it was just eight minutes after 11 o'clock, and the market had jumped from 81 cents to $1 02. The first bound it crossed the 90 line, and I did not know whether I would be left with a pair of shoes on to walk out with or not. Fortunately, however, it slumped back to 90 again, and I breathed easier, though the experience cost me some money, more, probably, than any other man on the floor. ALL PRECEDENTS BEATEN. "Well, sir, I sat down after the hurrah was past and thought the matter over, and I concluded that old man Standard had en reaching for my back hair. Certainly, the doings of that brief period knocked out all precedents of the Pittsburg Exchange so far as my knowledge went, and I could not figure out a good reason for it, unless the moguls were trying to make a target of me, as had been done many a time in the history of the business with others, so I just quietly dropped out, and since then I have left the other boys to try and solve the problem. There is not much left in the business now, at all events in these parts, and there is no use for a man worrying his soul out for a dol-lar. The palmy days are of the past, and so I will try my fortunes in another direction."
