DESCRIPTION OF A NEW ORGAN.

An Interesting Budget of Local and General News Con cerning the Art Divine.

The second annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Music Teachers' Association will convene at Philadelphia to-morrow, with every prospect of affording a most pleasant and profitable experience to those who are present, and of further assuring the permanent success of an organization calculated to benefit greatly all musical interests throughout the Commonwealth.

A glauce at the programme below given will best show the scope and variety of the work ent out for the young organization. The absence of an orchestra is, no doubt, the reason why no choral features are present, and the absence of an orchestra is, of course, due to the non-solution of the financial problem which, in this connection, has been so perplexing to all like bodies. By next year, let us hope, this problem will be solved, at least in part.

Right here it is proper for THE DIS-PATCH, voicing the sentiment of musical l'insburg, to extend a cordial invitation to the association to hold its next meeting in the western metropolis of the State. Philaaclphia having twice opened her hospitable goors to the musical folk of the State, there is no possible doubt that the third meeting should come here.

A Desirable Thing to Do.

It is not too late, by any means, for any and every music-lover hereabouts, professional or not, to subscribe the modest fee of $1, as an active or associate member of the P. S. M. T. A. Whether you can go to Philadelphia or not makes small differonce on this score; the sum is trifling to each one, but it goes with many others to make the success of this admirable effore to advance the general musical interests of our grand old State. Moreover all assistance from our end of the State for the present meeting in Philadelphia will in all likelihood be returned with interest when the as-sociation meets in Pittsburg.

An Ancient Piece of Music

An interesting feature of the Christmas music at St. John's P. E. Church, Lawrenceville, was the ascription sung by the surpliced choir after the sermon. It was ndapted and harmonized by the organist and choir-master, Mr. Dan Dore Ezechiels, from the famous "Hymn to St. John," written in the year 770 by Paul, a deacon of the Church of Aquila.
This old hymn, or chant, played an impertant role in musical history. The words

Resonare fibris, Mira gestorum, Famuli tuorum, Saucte Johannes.

And it so happened that in the air of the hant the first syllable of each line but the last fell upon the successive tones of the scale, C, D, E, etc. After it had been sung or over four centuries the monk Guido Arctinus, dawned upon the musical horizon (if the narrow limits of the art in those days could warrant the term) and invented the modern system of notation by means of a staff, with lines and spaces indicating the poten, using the syllables from the old chant to designate the notes. The "ut" was changed to "do" for convenience and euphony and a seventh syllable "si" (derived from initials of the last line, S and I) and introduced in the seventeenth century, and thus the system has stood ever since. Our schoolboys and girls to-day owe their do, re, mi, fa, soi, la, si, do to this chant more than 1,100 years old.

Mr. Ezechiels, by the way, who arranged for St. John's Christmas service this hymn to that church's patron saint, and who is a comparatively recent acquisition to our mu-sical circles, is one of the graduates of the institution known as "The King's Twenty-two Pupils," in The Hague, Holland. The King does not do the teaching, but he does provide the funds for giving a musical education to a constant enrollment of 22 deserving students, who are put through a four years' course of abstruse musical lore quite unlike the curriculum of most conservatories. Mr. Ezechiels was there a invored pupil of the eminent Dutch composer, Marinus. Before coming to Pittsburg he was for five years teacher of music and scholarly musicians. His "Ossian" over-

A novelty for Pittsburg will be the steatorphone stop (customarily placed on the solo manual in four-manual organs) an exceedingly powerful register on high wind-pressure, and very useful in leading large bodies of singers. Besides the 24 mechanical movements, giving ample control over all resources, the instrument will contain 39 speaking stops, distributed as follows:

TSCHAIKOVSKY has addressed a letter to some Russian journals declining the public honors which it was proposed to offer him on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his appearance as a public artist. Perhaps 25 years is too short a period to justify shows of this kind—but, nevertheless, Tschaikovsky is the greatest and by far the most popular of living national composers, and if not now, he will some day deserve recognition in that capacity. Plenty of men have had jubilee celebrations who have deserved them less.—

MR. RICHARD ZECKWER, the enterprising director of the Philadelphia Academy of Music, has just received a Janko piano, the first one imported aside from the one used by Mr. Janko in his exhibitions. It is the first to Mr. Janko in his exhibitions. It is the first to come to Philadelphia. It will be set up in the Academy in a few days and Mr. Zeckwer and Mr. Leefson will make a special study of the new key-board preparatory to making the new invention a special branch of the institution. Mr. Zeckwer says the Janko piano is the instrument of the future, and that Americans will take to it with sufficient eagerness to warrant its being called the Yankee piano.—

THE college musiciaus and singers are on the threshold. On Tuesday evening the Harvard Glee Club will give a concert at Carnegie Hall, under the patronage of prominent society leaders, presenting a programme with the usual unique and rollicking features. On Saturday evening, January 3, the Princeton University Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs will give a concert at Carnegie Hall. The Princeton clubs are great favorites here—indeed Princeton is a collegiate suburb of Pittsburg anyhow. Their performance will contain more corners the performance will contain more grange than black, more light than shade, and as the clubs are larger and in better trim than ever, the con-cert will be a great glorification of Old Nassau.

A species of musical work that certainly deserves encouragement has been undertaken by a coterie of young girls still in their teens, who have formed a club meeting, as their title indicates, "Every Other Week." The meetings are Webster, who has evidently her full share of that gifted family's talent share of that gifted family's talent and thoughtfulness. Miss Webster is President, and Miss M. L. Wright, Secretary. The object of the club is musical education. At the first meeting, a week or so ago, the programme included a short sketch of Field, the playing of his B flat Nocturne, an analysis of it and another playing of the same. The sketch was by Miss Wright and the rest by Miss Florence Pier, daughter of the well-known attorney. After reading Miss Pier's analysis, it must be said to be a truly remarkable production for a miss of 14. Such intelligent, legical cultivation of art cannot but prove invaluable to all interested.

THE second concert of the Mozart Club, to be given on Tuesday evening at Old City Hall, will be the musical event of the week. Miss Genevra [Johnstone-Bishop, well-known here (though she did refuse $2,000 a year to come (though she did refuse $2,000 a year to come and sing in one of our churches), Miss Margaret Fraser, Mr. Harry B. Brockett and Mr. John A. Strouss will be the soloists to whom, with our leading chorus and a good-sized orchestra, under Mr. James P. McCollum, will be intrusted the performance of the greatest of all oratorios, Handel's "The Messian." For Iso years this master work has remained wholly unequaled, the subject of peculiar admiration, almost reverence, by all people where oratorio music is at all cultivated. On previous occasions the work and its history have been fully described in those columns. Nothing need now be added beyond directing attention again to the rare appropriatenesss of its performance at Christmastide, following the custom so largely prevalent. And, by the way, don't forget to stand up, if you want to enjoy the "Hallelujah" chorus to the utmost.

The Fourth Avenue Baptist Church, which possesses one of the largest auditoriums in the city, has contracted for a new organ, to cost altogether something over $8,000, which will be one of the largest auditoriums in the city. STEAMER ARRIVES IN PORT WITH SHIPWRECKED SEAMEN.

The Story of the Sinking of a Fishing Schooner and the Timely Rescue of All on Board During a Heavy Sea - The Wreck Happened This Month.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27. - Sixteen shipwrecked seamen landed here to-day from the steamer Elbruz, the captain and crew of 15 men of the American fishing schooner Gracie C. Young, wrecked at sea early this month. The Gracie C. Young sailed from Gloucester, Mass., December 1. She was bound for the Newfoundland Banks after halibut. Immediately after leaving port she en-countered severe weather, and on the fourth day out sprung a leak. The men were set to work at the pumps, but the storm increased and still further opened the seams in the vessel. Her foremast was carried away, and this mishap left the schooner at the mercy range in price from $25 to $38. In order to sell them quickly we have bunched the entire lot and offer you your choice for $18. Our advice would be to come as early as you can on Monday to get first pick. P. C. C. C., PITTSBURG COMBINATION of the seas. Great waves washed over the craft and swept her decks. The air was bitter cold, and the water froze as soon as it struck the decks. This impeded the work of the men, many of whom were almost frozen, and had to abandon the pumps. Only about half the crew were able to work, and their combined efforts could not prevent the water from gaining in the hold.

Captain Kenny McPherson, the commander, decided to abandou the vessel at the first favorable opportunity. The crew were kept at work day and night. A week elapsed and it was evident the schooner was sinking. The men prepared to abandon the vessel on the 15th, when smoke was seen on the horizon to the east. Signals of distress were run up on the main masthead and in two hours the Elbruz hore down on the sink-ing vessel and lay-to for the purpose of rescuing the crew. The schooner was provided with seven dories, and in these the 16 men put off to the rescuing steamer. All these small boats were hall full of water before they reached the ship, but all hands were saved.
