The Means by Which Many Workmen Are Securing Homes for Themselves and Families.

SMALL WEEKLY INSTALLMENTS

Secure Leans of All Sizes on Low Cates of Interest in Building and Loan Associations.

HUNDREDS OF MILLIONS IN THEM

And Wealthy Prople Semetimes Welcome the Adv antage They Afford.

Not all the money saved during the past year by the industrial class of people has gone into unprofitable investments or banks that pay no interest. The building and loan association is the wage worker's bank, and it is one that never fails, so far as the shareholders are concerned.

It is estimated that there are upward of 200 of these associations in Alleghenv county, with a combined membership of 100,000, and a united capital of not less than $200,000,000.

The amount of good these associations have proven to poor people during the present year cannot be estimated, and, as the old year lades into the dim past, they will look with gratefulness upon the opportunities afforded by the societies to save enough hardearned money to purchase their holiday goods, or to begin the new year by making the first payment on a home that is to shelter them in future years.

Home-Builders by the Score.

The wage workers in Pattsburg and Allegheny who have been enabled through the building and loan associations to buy and pay for homes, when other plans and sources of help had failed, can be counted by the scores. The followers of all the trades, Library Bobs Up Again. clerks, professional, and even commercial been "given their start," in the matter of laying in a stock of this world's goods, through the saving of 10 or 15 cents a week on each share held in some association.

Building and loan associations may be of various kinds, but the majority of them, and, in fact, the most successful are of necessity confined to two classes. The one, established many years ago and conducted on a plan which fixes both the value of each share of stock and the time in which it can be paid up. It is known as the serial plan, as a bribe. and members joining between the time when the series begins and ends must pay a sum proportionately equal to that paid by any of the other shareholders sines the beginning of the series.

In this, as well as in all other kinds of associations, shares mature when their par value has been paid in, but a whole series is thus matured at the same time. When the stock in all the series has matured the association ceases to exist. In other words, in the old associations the stock must all be Reform Church met last evening in their new taken at the same time, or the member must church at the corner of North Highland avenue. pay up all back dues from its commencement until the date of purchase. Some of the later associations have secured perpetual charters, and treat all shareholders as co-partners in the concern. This has become the most popular plan, as it effers special admers in the concern. This has become popular plan, as it effers special ad-to borrowing stockholders which canfit of those who are compelled to borrow, and the association that can reduce the cost of a to the lowest possible figure is the asso-on that will have the largest membership. To obtain a loan to an old association, a cars are usually required to bid for it egular meeting and the loan is awarded tighest bidder. The premum is dedu lion or added to it, as the case from the loan or added to it, as the case may be, and the borrower sometimes pays a high price for his money. But the more modern associations fix a premium for all loans, and usually at a reasonable figure.

However, the plan has very little to do with the success of the association or the benefit derived from it by the shareholders. There is not an association in Alberhemy county that will not willingly loan from 75 to 80 per cent of the face value of a piece of property on a first mortgage, while many capitalists refuse to give out over 30 per cent. Some of the associaas fix their premiums and rate of interest so low that by the time dividends are made the actual cost falls below 5 per cent.

Safety of Building Associations.

The safety of building and loan associations cannot be disputed. They are chartered under a special act of the Legislature, All have a rule prohibiting speculations of any sort, and loans will not be made on property outside of the county. This gives an opportunity of having all records of properties close at hand, and as each association has its own attorney, each association has its own attorney, these are examined before loans are given out. So, systematic has the arrangement of the associations become that no man weed lose money by being a share-holder. If misfortune overtakes a man or circumstances occur to render him unable to hinke his payments, he has the privilege of withdrawing what he has paid in, tegether with whatever dividends he may have been ranted. In this way, the association becomes bank with the assurance of absolute safety and the advantages of dividends added. and the advantages of dividends added.
The membership of all the associations is not confined strictly to the industrial class of people, nor are they the only borrowers. Mayor gourley assisted in the organization of the blodiera, one of the most successful associations in the city, and it has among its members some of the nost prominent politicians of the Seventh and Eighth wards.
The Arcanum is one of the prosperous associations, having been organized less than four years, and possessing assets to the amount of nearly $75,000, including over $60,000 in mortgages. This association has for members such rages. This association has for members such men as W. H. Duffell, treasurer of the Pitzs-burg and Western Railroad: Job Ablet, of the Standard Oil Company: F. H. Torrens, general agent of the Schenley estate; William R. Ford, ellector of delinquent taxes, and many other prominent citizens

Charles Reisfar, secretary of the Central Fourd of Education, is also secretary of the Fireside Building and Loan Association, which has among its members many of the city school teachers, who have taken this method of saving their funds. Henry Hunnesbagen, Mayor Wyman's clerk, and a number of other Allegheny politicians help to compose the shareholders of the Garfield Premium No. 2, and the National Premium No. 3.

The German population in Allegheny re enthusiastic over the plan for saving money afforded by building and an associations, and the German citizen who means to hold shares in one or more of them, it cafe to say, has an insufficient income to suport his family. is estimated that more than half the houses it during the past year are being paid for through these associations.

People join building and loan associations for all sorts of purposes. The number of women who become members is very large. The wife of a wage worker from the Seventh ward bought live shares in the Modern a few months ago. The other day she walked into the office on Fifth avenue and gave notice that she wanted to withdrik her money, saving to she wanted to withdraw her money, saying to Secretary McCrickert at the time, "I have be-Secretary McCrickert at the time, "I have be-come so tired of buying my household goods on the installment plan and paying two prices for the young folk.

them, I thought I would get on the other side of the tence this time and see how much I could save. I want my money to buy a parlor carpet with."

Saving Money for the Holidays. Mr. McCrickert said last night: "Besides the substantial benefit afforded people by our asso ciation, some people join for most peculiar pur-poses. Some start in a few months before christmas to save up holiday money. Others begin after the holidays to lay aside their vacation money. If a young man wants to take a trip to Europe he takes five or ten shares and pays a few months until he gets enough "But the real solid benefit and comfort de rived from any one of the associations by people who are compelled to toil for a living is inestimable and while times are prosperous the

WANTING A BOROUGH.

Reasons Given by Some McKee's Rocks People for a Change of Autonomy-Largest Unincorporated Body in the McKee's Rocks people still monopolize the attention of the grand jury, the objectors to the borough project now having their say. Their version of the matter has already been given in THE DISPATCH.

Those who want the borough assign a number of reasons why they think they should have it. In the first place, they set forth that the aggregation of people at the mouth of Chartiers Creek is the largest unincorporated body in the United States, and that it is subject to vicissitudes at the hands of tramps, toughs, etc., that many good-sized city governments are not called to encounter, on account of its being a railway center and located adjacent to the most popular nicenic grounds about these cities, where hard characters assemble and work their sweet will, without any daring to molest or make afraid. They say there is scarce a week that some citizen is not held up and robbed, and that store robberies and burglaries are of common occurrence. They say they have no police protection, and cannot have it without borough government.

They further say that the town is built almost entirely of wood, and there is no dire protection, nor can there be any while the objectors to a borough can control, as at present. They say that nearly all the poor want a borough, and those who do not are controlled by the manufacturers who are said to object on the controlled by the manufacturers who are said to object on the controlled by the manufacturers who are said to object on the controlled by Those who want the borough assign a manufacturers, who are said to object on he same ground as non-residents and large andholders—on the ground that a borough landholders—on the ground that a borough would increase taxation.

They say that every saloon keeper but one is in favor of the borough, and that he is under the influence of the manufacturers, and finally, it is contended that the tough element is opposed to the borough, and this is held to be one of the strongest arguments in favor of it.

SOCIETY CHAT OF THE TWO CITIES

The beauty and brilliancy of the first Assembly ball, held at the Pittsburg Clubhouse last evening, was so great that even the exterior of the brown-stone building seemed tinged with a rosy hue, and the interior was a shifting panorama of splendid magnificence.

The entire clubhouse was placed at the disposal of the guests, and in anticipation of the event, its last trace of masculinity had disappeared 'neath an abundance of fresh white crash and the lavish and artistic placement of tropical plants and hot-house flowers. The theater entrance was used, and the guests passed under the awning that, through long service at similar fashionable events, has become so thoroughly impregnated with the ethics of Pittsburg society that it occupies to the clubhouse the same position Sexton Brown did to Grace Church in New York, and is retained in spite of its antiquity and departed freshness.

THE SCENE IN THE HALL.

Once within the hall huge palms towering above mossy embankments attracted the eye, but it was only a casual glance they received from the ladies enveloped in their elegant carriage wraps and soft furs, as they hastened to the dressing room on the second floor. There, with the assistance of the chony-hued maidens especially skilled in the devices of the toilet, the outer garments were removed, dainty kid and silk slippers took the place of those of soft zephyr, the last delicate touch of the powder puff was given, the jeweled hands were encased in exquisite gloves, and with fan and flowers, milady, a vision of beauty, was ready to accompany he vision of beauty, was ready to accompany her essort into the assembly room.

From the depth of a tropical forest that occupied the platform and completely screened the musicians issued the entrancing music of Toerge's Orchestra, or a portion of it rather, as for this affair it was divided, part furnishing the dance music and the remainder stationing themselves in the hall adjoining the dining room, and playing for the gay promenades and through the support hour.

The dining room was heavy with the fragrance of the cut flowers that burdened the mantels and filled the window seats and the small square tables, with which the room was filled, glistened prettily under the gas lights with their coverings of shimmering satin damask, and their service of cut glass and silver.

BEAUTY AT THE BANQUET. The scene presented in the dining room when the gaily attired company was seated, and over their ices and cake were casting bright glances and quick flashes of wit, was one of remarkable beauty, and almost equaled the one in the ballcoom, when, yielding to the fascinating influence of a Strauss waltz, individuality was lost in one bewildering maze of rythm and motion. Until the formation for the cotillon, the patronesses were grouped together at the ex-treme end of the hall near the musicians treme end of the hall, near the musicians screen, which proved an admirable background for the outlining of their exquisite toilets. Effectiveness of dress was not confined to the patronesses, but extended throughout the entire company, each and every lady having apparently taken their costume for the first time from the tissue paper for last evening. In the assemblage youthful faces predominated, with just a sufficient number of mature ones to give dignity to the affair. Brides and those who are soon to become such, with young brides and visiting young folks from distant cities, formed the company. the company.
Until 12 o'clock the floor was occupied by the merry round dancers, after that the cotilion, and it was decidedly well onto daybreak when the last equippage left the portals of the clubhouse, that had added another triumph to its long list in the social line.

ALUMNI AT A BANQUET. united Around the Social Board.

"I never knew this parlor to look so perfectly lovely," said a charming little lady at the Hotel Schlosser last evening. "No. but you never before saw so many pretty ladies in it," replied her escort; and true it was, there never before had been so many lovely ladies to grace the room. The event that called forth the assemblage was the second annual banquet of the High School Alumni, which far exceeded in brilliancy and delightfulness the first and preceding one given at the same place last year. There were about 200 guests, the ladies in be-witching toilets carrying bouquets of fragrant flowers and the gentlemen in full dress.

At the command of Dr. J. Richie Horner, the line was formed for the banqueting room, which elicited extravarant and continual ex-clamations of delightas its beauty dawned upon the vision of the gay banqueters. The tables gleaming in their whiteness, with exquisite roses lifting their pretty heads from vases of wonderful beauty and mounds of fruit de-liciously tempting in formation delighted the eye, while the menu was equally delightful to another one of the senses, consisting, as it did, of all the delicacles of the season served in the daintiest and most appetizing manner. There were about 200 guests, the ladies in be-

After the coffee, President E. F. Hays, '77, greeted the reunited graduates in a neat and effective little address and called upon J. T. Myler, '75, for "Our Girls." Mr. Myler was equal to the occasion, and was prepared to make a friend of every young lady in the room by his appreciation of their merits. Prot. Charles B. Wood, President of the faculty, responded to "Scientific Education," and Miss J. Craig, '77, to "The Alumni in Public and Private Life." An intermission, which Gernert's Orchestra very pleasantly filled in with nert's Orchestra very pleasantly filled in with the delightful melody that had floated through the com during the entire banquet, followed and preceded "Pittsburg's Public lestitutions," as outlined by Morris W. Mead, '77. Dr. W. T. Burleigh, '81, on "Cur Reunions, Past and Future," closed the toasts, and the company repaired to the parior until the banqueting room was transformed into a ballroom. Dancing was indulged in for some time and it was with anticipations for a third reunion that the merrymakers dispersed.

The bride was formerly Miss Katherine Bayer, a posular Southside lady. George Bayer, a brother of the bride, acted as best man, and Miss Julia Getty played the role of bridesmaid. It was stated by a manufacturer that a sircular, signed by President Eberhardt, had been issued to the workers, cautioning them against working for Chambers & Mc-Kee. This was further alleged to be on account of the fact that William Slicker, against whom the Knights of Lubor are re-The beautiful and interesting old religious drama, "Saint Hedwig," was given in Columported to have some grievance, is employed bus Hall, Twenty-seventh ward, last night by at Jeannette, and also on the grounds that pupils of St. Michael's parochial school, as-sisted by W. Owing to the lateness of the hour an effort to find Mr. Eberhardt proved futile.

Mr. Chambers, Mr. William Loeffler, Mr. Knox, of New Castle, and a few other window glass men went on to Chicago last night to attend the meeting of the American Window Glass Association in that city to-day. Mr. Chambers stated that the meeting would be one of the bondholders alone, and for the purpose of increasing the capital stock from $400,000 to $800,000. This was necessary, he said, so as to enable the United Glass Company to join the undertaking. This company had already decided to become a factor in the new association, Not more than 10 per cent, Mr. Chambers decided to become a factor in the new association, Not more than 10 per cent, Vr. One or two fairly big firms were included among them. but their joint strength would not affect the operations of the new company. Mr. Chambers did not know when business would be commenced; things were not yet ripe for that. Regarding the probabilities of an immediate advance in glass, he said that he did not think that would be made.

Mr. Loeffler said he held proxies for many of the Pittsburg men. A two-thirds' vote was the Pittsburg men. A two-thirds' vote was necessary to increase the capital stock, and this, he thought, there was no doubt of their being able to obtain,

Proposed at a Meeting of Road-Making Machine Manufacturers. Boys and Girls-Scenes of Merriment on

A meeting, concerning which a vast deal of secrecy was observed, was held in the Duquesne Hotel yesterday. It is supposed to be a gathering of gentlemen interested in the manufacture of road-making machines. Included mong them were F. C. Austin, of the Austin Manufacturing Company, of Chicago; C. F. Pfeiffer, of the Fleming Manufacturing Company, of Ft. Wayne; C. H. Junitz, of the Western Company, of Mr. Pleasant, Ia., and Messrs. John A. Houser and Charles Pope, of Ft. Wayne.

Webster avenue was also well patronized, and the pedestrian who crossed that street had to be very wary as the coasters flew down, while the riders yelled "frack, track."

Peun avenue at some points last night was a scene of wildness, owing to the snow-balling tendencies of boys and young men along that thoroughfare. At almost every corner crowds of young men and boys were congregated, who made life weary for the luckless pedestrians. Those indulging in the pleasures of a sleighride were particularly unfortunate, as they were the special aim of the snow-ballers, who pelted them right and left. The result of these onsloughts was that a couple of accidents were

Her friends at last made a final effort, and by contributions succeeded in raising $140 to pay her passage back to her old howe. Then by chance she learned that some relatives of her family had come to Pittsburg, and lived on Carson street, between Eighth and Ninth streets. She went to see them when she came to Pittsburg to purchase her tickets, and they induced her to delay her journey, saying she could live with them, and that they would keep her if she would give them the $140, which was to be used partly for her board, and she was to help about the housework as the other part of her keeping.

The money, she says, was loaned to Joseph Herodnowicz, who lives in the same house and has a small store. To doubly assure Mrs. Garber of the proper use of her money, papers were drawn up before an Alderman, and a week ago last Saturday she commenced life in her new home. She says that about six days after her arrival she was turned out of the house and not allowed to return, and a man accompanied her to the train and shipped her to Homestead.
