ART AND PLEASURE.

A Review of the Work of Verestchagin, the Russian Painter.

QUITE A BUSY FRIDAY IN SOCIETY.

A Number of Entertainments That Were

Social Successes.

PLEASANT RECEPTION TO A PASTOR

In view of the excitement which the Verestchagin collection, now on exhibition at Carnegie Library, has justly created in this city, it will be interesting to review the artistic work in relation to his general char-

Vassili Verestchagin is by birth a nobleman, and wealthy by inheritance; he is a traveler by inclination, and a philosopher by experience, but an artist by impulse and from choice.

These various circumstances prompt him to treat, with masterstrokes, an immense variety of subjects. Thus it is the religious feeling inoculated, if not inherent, in the Russian aristocracy, that causes him to plant his easel before the Sea of Galilee, in some oriental courtyard, suggestive of the workshop of the Savior's Father, or before Abraham's tomb; again, his love for humanity and the somber philosophy born of the reek of human blood, urges him to paint the horrors of battlefields with a truth that scarce falls short of the hideous reality, in order to check the awful havor of war by exciting the pity of mankind. The true love of the Mountains, seen from Darjeeling, some characteristic faces, or a begging dervish.

Verestchagin is a thorough realist. Despite his technical mastery, he is incapable of stepping beyong the truth. Even in the large canvas of the "Crucifixion," a fit subject for inspiration, he has only photographed, as it were, a highly probable illustration of a Roman execution. And yet, the painting has its dramatic power by virtue of this very absence of intention to be more than truthful. A very pleasing conception of the "Holy Family." It is nothing more than a genre painting of a court yard. The unstudied attitudes of the figures lend a charm to the composition that studied poses would lack. Advantages of Sketching on the Spot.

The war pictures were mostly made on the fields of battle. As Adjutant of General Skobeleff, Verestchagin had special advantages for sketching on the spot. His soldiers have not been painted from models hired at so much an hour, who dress in the proper accourtements, lie down upon a mattress and pose until it was time for them to sit for some other artist and for another character. His models were the dead and dying, as he found them upon the battlefields; corpses who have retained the trightful gestures of the last struggle in the rigor

Foremost in point of study and execution among these pictures is a large hospital scene. The tents are too small to hold all the unfortunates brought in from the battlefield, and the sloping ground is covered with soldiers, wounded and dying "For God and the Czar," as the Russian battle cry has it. In the middleground one has risen to his feet in the restless agony caused by having had his jawbone shot to pieces. The face of the man, with his blood-covered bondage, is in itself a sermon against the wholesale butchery called war.

A mournful grandeur pervades "Blessing the Dead." The corpse-strewn field almost merges into the somber clouds that hang low as if to mercifully cover the horror of this awful spot of peopled solitude. What are are administering the last rites to this silent Verestchagin has remarkable power for preserving local color. He runs the scale, from a Northern snowstorm to the brilliancy of Oriental scenes, with equal force. The two small pictures of the Taj Mahal, the large "Entrance of the Prince of Wales in Bombay," the scenes from Palestine, etc., are as full of sunlight as the "Hanging of Nihilists," Skobeleff at Plevna," and "All Quiet on Shipka Pass" are tull of the biting cold atmosphere of Russian winters. Remarkable Technical Daring.

The two large mosque interiors, as well as the smaller ones, are remarkable exhibitions of technical during. In the large "Private Mosque" the perspective of the white marble interior is handled with exquisite delicacy, the shades of blue in the shadows being low-red in scarcely noticeable gradations.

There is not a single picture, large or small, in the collection that would not be worth seeing, and the most fascinating part about it is that every picture either tells its story or gains interest by reason of the story connected with the reason. connected with the scene it depicts. Next to the paintings, the collection of carpers, laces, embroideries and metal ware is worth Verestebagin has been in a position to make his own selections on the spot, and therefore his carpets really represent the countries in which they were made. Here is a gorgeous marvel of textile fabric from Samarkand; there one from Khiva; over yonger one from Buckhara. In this case you see metal vases upon which have been lay ishly squandered the most delicate designs in nielio known to the oriental jeweler, and another case can be seen the gold emderies and laces that deck the bride at a Khirgiz wedding.

FUN FOR LITTLE FOLK.

A Juvenile Party Given by Dr. Huselton's

Four Children. Roma, Marcia, Norman and Franci Huselton, the children of Dr. E. C. Huselton, entertained a large company of gay little people at their charming home on Stockton avenue last evening which, early in the afternoon, had been prepared for the tripping of the tiny feet. The little guests began to arrive about 8 o'clock, and very shortly the spacious, handsome rooms were thronged with gay, happy childhood, ar-rayed in costumes that only wealth and perfect taste could suggest.

Dancing was indulged in for some time, and an elegant supper, served by Kennedy on a picturesquely beautiful table, was the climax of the evening's gayety. Pretty little souvenirs were features of the affair.

Given Last Evening by Mrs. Charles A. Painter, at the Duquesne.

A theater party numbering 44 guests, with Mrs. Charles A. Painter as hostess, listened to Agues Huntington at the Duquesne Theater, last evening, and afterward took essession of the ladies' cafe at the Duquesue Club House, where an elaborate menu was served. In numbers and magnificence of toilet this was probably the most notable theater party of the season.

Exquisite floral arrangements in the cafe gave an added air of brilliancy to the supper scene, and it was at a late hour when the last guest emerged from the clubhouse and the last equipage disappeared from Sixth street.

LIVING PICTURES IN A CHURCH. An Interesting Entertainment That Was

Highly Enjoyed. The lecture room of the Second Presby terian Church was the scene of an exceed ingly pretty entertainment, last evening, i which the members of the Adelaide Howard Mission Band covered themselves with glory. A triangular stage had been erected in a corner of the room adjoining one of the church parlors, which served adone of the church parlors, which served admirably as a greenroom, and with drop curtain and footlights, some very pretty effects were obtained. The entertainment was called a "concert and living pictures," and consisted of innumerable pretty tableaux and vocal and instrumental music, Miss Bertha Kaderly and Clifford M. Rorah appearing as soloists, and Gernert's Orchestra rendering valuable assistance. The audience was delighted with the performance, and expressed its appreciation in the usual manner, many times demanding a second view of the pretty pictures presented.

"Ruth and Boaz" were the first historical "Ruth and Boar" were the first historical personages to appear, and seemed very much at home behind the footlights. Rebecca followed, with her inseparable well; then Pharoah's daughter received the infant Moses from the hands of his mother, after which Job and his three daughters made an interesting family. Mother Goose melodies by the "Flower of the Flock" preceded the thrilling rescue of John Smith. "Trying on the Slippers." decidedly realistic, appealed to every feminine heart and to the humor of the gentlemen. "The Marriage of Cinderella and the Prince" was pretty enough to make any girl wish to bethe pity of mankind. The true love of the beautiful, or an artistic feeling for the grotesque, guide his facile brush in depicting the oriental luxuriance of the gardens that surround the Taj Mahal, the Himalaya Mountains, seen from Darjeeling, some charges of Cinderella and the Prince was pretty enough to make any girl wish to become a bride, and the Prince was pretty enough to make any girl wish to become a bride, and the Prince was pretty enough to make any girl wish to become a bride, and the Prince was pretty enough to make any girl wish to become a bride, and the Prince was pretty enough to make any girl wish to become a bride, and the Prince was pretty enough to make any girl wish to become a bride, and the Prince was pretty enough to make any girl wish to become a bride, and the "Courtship in Ye Olden Time" emphasized the wish. "The Peace Maker" appropriately followed the wedding, and courtship scenes and Tenny. quaint Priscilla and sturdy John Alden. "Good Night" and "The Ten Virgins" concluded the wonderfully pretty and pleasure

PREPARING FOR LENT.

An Elegant Fancy Dress Party to Be Given

Before the Fast. During the intervals of rest between the dances at the regular hop at the Linden Club last evening conversation drifted naturally and generally to the fancy dress ball that will close the ante-Lenten festivities on Tuesday evening, February 10, preceding the beginning of Lent.

It is to be a very brilliant affair, and some 200 invitations will be issued to the club members, who will each have the privilege of inviting at least two of their friends, so that a large and fashionable gathering is inevitable. It is to be a subscription ball, with elegant music, and a delicious supper served by a prominent East End caterer. A list of patronesses consisting of numerous representative social ladies will give the proper and dignified cast to the invitations, and will serve as a cast to the invitations, and will serve as a reception committee on the evening in question. The ladies are all busy cudgeling their pretty heads for something unique and handsome in the way of costumes, and the gentlemen are secretly exulting over the fact that their experience.

gestlemen are secretly exulting over the fact that on this occasion, at least, they may bedeek their comely limbs in the picturesque style of their forefathers, and weave billows of lace upon their manly bosoms.

Another event in the future of the Linden Club, which has become the synonym for all social gayety, is the presentation of the operetta, "Doctor of Alcantara," by Julius Eichberg, to take place immediately after Lent. The leading roles will be assumed by some of the city's best soloists, and the operetta is even now under rehersal. and the operetta is even now under rehersal large number of guests re vitations and appeared at the handsome Burt residence, on Lincoln avenue, yesterday afternoon, where Mrs. W. H. Burt and her fascinating daughter received them, in company with Mrs. Biddle Arthurs, Congressman Wolverton's daughter, whose elaborate wedding is still fresh in the minds of society people. Flowers reigned from one extreme of the lovely home to the other, carnations and hyacinths blooming from mantels and tables in the parlor where the receiving ladies were stationed, and roses and hyacinths made beautiful the dining and made the table a thing of beauty.

DELIGHTFUL DAYLIGHT RECEPTION

Tendered to Congressman Wolverton'

The library was heavier in its decorations of potted plants, with palms and ferns.

The hostess was charming in a black lace costume over black silk, sparkling with jet ornaments. Miss Burt was attired in a dainty blue crepe de chiffore, and the guest of honor appeared in her lovely bridal robes. The hours were from 3 to 5, and about 400 guests were present. Later an elaporate guests were present. Later an elauorate dinner was given for a few gentlemen and the ladies who assisted during the afternoon, who were Miss McClure, of Sharon; Miss Blair, of Sewickley; Miss Evart, Miss Palmer, Miss Casty, Miss Kirkpatrick, Miss Edith Hurford, Miss Jennings, Mrs. Harry Watts, Miss Ferguson, Mrs. Dale Jennings, Mrs. Ben Jennings and Mrs. J. A CHEERFUL HOME-COMING.

Delightful Reception Tendered to a Pasto and Bis Bride. A social event of considerable importance was the reception given last evening by the members of the Bingham Street M. E. Church for their pastor, Rev. J. A. Ballantyne, and his sweet, stylish young bride, nee Hettie Ford. Rev. and Mrs. Ballantyne have, since their wedding, the most fashionable one of the week of prayer, been enjoy-ing sights and scenes in distant cities, and their home-coming was a very pleasing one. The parsonage in which they will reside had been very tastefully refitted and fur-nished for the arrival of the sair young mistress, and the entire congregation assembled to welcome her in the church parlors last evening. Handsome floral decorations and elegant costumes gave a charming aspect to the parlors, and harmony and good wishes reigned. Delightful refreshments were

RELIGIOUS ASPECT

Given to the Political Revolution Which Surprised Kansas.

THE NEW LEADERS NOT ORTHODOX.

In Fact, a Number of Them Wage Open War Upon the Churches.

JERRY SIMPSON'S CAMPAIGN METHODS

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.1 TOPEKA, KAN., Jan. 16.-There are certain characteristics among the leaders of the people's party movement in this State which makes their success in the recent campaign all the more surprising. If the party continues to prosper, the sentiment of the State must undergo a complete change. The rank and file are years behind the leaders in every principle of the movement. Kansas has heretofore been a State of intense religious feeling. The churches have been prominently identified with politics and the pastors have thought it incumbent upon themselves to deliver political ser-

The Methodist Church has formed the great strength of the Republican party, for its membership has been largely composed of Grand Army men. The German Cath-olic Church has been and is Democratic. This was due to the stand taken by the two old parties on the prohibition question. All of the Protestant churches, more especially in the cities, were forced to espouse the cause of the Republicans on account of their advanced temperance ideas, and the Demo-cratic fight was necessarily against them. The New Leaders Very Liberal.

The men and women who sprung into prominence and managed the campaign for the People's party are, for the most part, free thinkers and atheists. Some of them belong to the Unitarian Church, and have such liberal ideas on orthodox questions that they have been led into a denunciation of the interference of the church in political matters, and consequently into a fight on the

Jerry Simpson, who made such a wonder-ful campaign in the Seventh Congressional district, had all of the power of the church directed against him. He did not attemp to conceal the fact that he was an unbe liever, but on the stump publicly declared that he gave religious questions no thought whatever, but addressed himself to those which he could understand and hoped to change. Mrs. M. E. Lease is an infidel, and she is proud of it. She was by far the most im-portant factor in molding public sentiment in the campaign, and her phillippics against the old parties stirred up the masses to such the old parties stirred up the masses to such an extent that a calmer discourse would not be listened to. "The day has passed," said she in conversation with a newspaper correspondent, "when it is a disgrace to be an infidel. It means now that one is a broad thinker, and the people to whom the term is applied represent the advanced thought of the see"

All in the Same Line. Mrs. Annie L. Diggs, the associate editor of the Alliance Advocate, belongs to the Unitarian Church, and so does Frank Doster, who is being groomed for United States Senator. But the day has passed when either recognizes anything more in Christianity than a broad humanity, and both are ready at all times to defend their position. both are ready at all times to defend their position. Mrs. Diggs, next to Mrs. Lease, was the most successful campaigner in the people's movement. She is a member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, differing with Mrs. Lease on the prohibition question. Mrs. Diggs believes temperance is a virtue, but her temperance work is a secondary matter, and the religious features of it have no attraction for her.

of it have no attraction for her.

Henry, Charles and William Vincent, who own and edit the Winthree brothers who own and edit the Win-field Non-Conformist, and Cyrus Corning, editor of the Workman, an Alliance paper published at Eldorado, are of the same reand the Vincents have been labor agitators for years, and have from the first been recognized leaders in the farmer movement. The appeals made by the Republican Central Committee to the church-going element on the temperance question and the ready response of the pastors brought to the sur-face the elements which war on religion. The persons mentioned are only a few of the more important, but they represent the brains of the new movement. A crusade against the existing order of things had to be made general in order to be successful. The country preachers at first were very pronounced in their advocacy of reforms in polities.

Preachers as Congressional Candidates They were candidates for Congressional nominations and in the Sixth Congressional district five out of the seven candidates be-fore the Alliance Convention were preach-ers. But it was not this element of the party which came to the front as the campaign progressed. These same people with their liberal religious views are without exception single tax advocates. The farmers who have thrust them forward do not comprehend the meaning of the Henry George movement nor do they understand why certain of their leaders are supporting Frank

Some weeks ago a man who represented himself as a correspondent of a New York daily came to Topeka and gave it out that he intended to thoroughly investigate the causes of the late uprising. He was ex-tended every courtesy by the politicians and his paper was watched to see what would be the result of his investigation. As none of his efforts appeared in print, suspicion was aroused and inquiry revealed the fact that he represented the New York Standard,

The Lowest Prices Ever Reached For Reliable Clothing.

Trade is running a steady grist with us. No reason why it shouldn't; yet we can stand more. We believe we can please you as you never were before.

It's the unusual to buy such clothing as we manufacture 20 per cent less than former prices. Who's going to buy ill-fitting, mean-quality clothing when he can get good-fitting reliable goods for less money? Not you. Not anybody who thinks his dollar's worth 100 cents.

Don't let us both lose money! We've got to. You save what we must lose. No reservation of any kind. Everything in our store on the one basis. Note this statement with our name attached. The regular selling prices are untouched and marked in
