BIRTHDAY OF BURNS.

An Anniversary That Gave Dr. Townsend a Topic for a Sermon.

RELIGION OF THE SCOTTISH BARD.

Rev. Mr. Donehoo Gives Good Advice to the Young Man of the Day.

SOME OTHER SERMONS OF TESTERDAY

Yesterday being the one hundred and thirty-second anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns, the beloved Scotch poet, Rev. | lead armies successfully to battle. Reference Dr. J. G. Townsend, of the Unitarian was made to the heroic quality, when Church, delivered a sermon devoted to the bard. There was a large attendance, and the discourse was attentively listened to.

of the poet, Dr. Townsend said: But turning away from the outward incidents of his life, in no way remarkable in themselves, let us look at the man himself, and ask what he did with the gift he possessed. And it is not formal praise to say there never lived a warmer, kinder, truer soul. His love went out to the sorrowing and defeated ones. His sympathy overflowed ever for the wounded hare, and the mountain daisy uprooted by the plow.

Wee, modest, crimson-tipped flower, Thou's met me in a luckless hour.

There was in him a right royal pride. In the presence of the nobility there was no fawning or cringing. When in Edinburgh, praise encircling him like a cloud, he met his old peasant acquaintances in the same

Robert Burns was a man of transparent sincerity. He were no disguises, social or osity and affection, and as to his sins, who ever mourned them with sincerer pain, or made more heroic struggles to be free from them? There was in him a mind of finest grain and of commanding strength. He was not a mere rhymester, but a poet, sent into the world to be an inspiration and a

The Preacher's Definition of Poetry But what is poetry? Poetry is the interpreter of the universal melody, the revealer of the real but invisible palaces, where the mind may find refreshment and delight. All nature is one. Not only the star and the stone, the bird and bee, but the spider and the snake, are true notes in the univer-sal melody. The cyclone is as musical as the sea wave's laugh on the shingle, or the caroling of the lark. Every sound is a minor strain in the grand symphony of cre

Now the poet's ear eatches the "primal He translates the song of the universe to us of duller ears. Poetry and religion are twin stars, shining in the same sky. All those men who have the vision of the infinite mountain, those "archangels" of the human race, Paul, Dante, Milton, Goethe, Burns, have the sease of the infinite

But what did Burns with this high and awful gift? This is pertinent. But consider what he contended with. Milton at 21 was the best educated young man of his the most influential Chinaman in the city. The church has a most flourishing Chinese ant's hut. Look at his continuous poverty. Carlyle speaks of Milton, old, poor and blind, writing "Paradise Lost." But there is no comparison. John Milton was reared in affluence, and, while poor in his old age, always had sufficient for his simple wants. Then Burns had the poorest materials-he must create his own materials. No one be fore him had shown the capacity of the Scottish tongue for poetry. A Builder of Palaces of Beauty.

But with his rude and scant materials Butus built palaces of truth and beauty which will abide forever. But, notwith-standing the mighty odds, what lasting work he did! To the assertion that his genius bore no adequate fruit, and that his life. He also believed that circumstances usually life was self-defeated, I must dissent.

Adverse circumstances were too strong for him. Poverty was the weight upon the strong pinion of the poet that bore it down at last to the dust. But was his work small? Who ever did so much for Scot-land as the peasant poet? He gave Scot-land a literature, taught how to bend the harsh words like wax, as Michael Angelo was said to bend the marble. He evoked the national sentiment and made Scotland once more a nation. Into the somber Presbyterianism of his time he poured a sunny warmth. He made all Scotland richernay, all humanity richer-in beauty and joy. His words shine in the speech of the statesman, adorn the composition of the school girl, and relieve the traditional dullness of the minister's sermon. But he made no long poem? Aye, but even his crumbs are better than other men's loaves. Miltou's "Comus" surpassed the "Para-dise Lost" in moral elevation, in musical unity, in lyric beauty. But what is the quality in Burns' poems that gives un-wonted value? It is their truth, their incomparable fidelity, their simplicity, and their humanity. He speaks what is in him, and in us, in our better hours. Out of the common strands of the peasants' life Burns wove for us the "Cotter's Saturday Night," the "Holy Fair," the "Owne Cottle." The "Wounded Hare" suggests thoughts that call out our scorn or our tears.

The Religion of the Poet.

Was Burns religious? If to feel the presence of the Infinite, if to keep a heart warm to all human things, if to have a sympathy which included even the "owrie cottle" and the "sillie sheep," is religion, then Burns was one of the most profoundly religious man, and Rev. E. Cromwell will deliver souls. Is not "To Mary in Heaven" one of the most tender of prayers? In my estimation of his genius I do not place Burns above his rank. He was not so large a nature as Shakespeare. Shakespeare was the grand organ, every key of which poured out music, but the genius of Burns was of the same royal quality. It was pure gold. I cannot quote much, but these lines, worthy to be written on the white marble of a perpetual remembrance—lines which will be tresh and beautiful in a thousand thousand years come to me-

THE FRAILTIES OF MEN

Closely Scratinized and Advice Given by Rev. E. R. Donehoo.

Rev. E. R. Donehoo, of the Eighth Presbyterian Church, West End, preached a very forcible and eloquent sermon last evening on "A Man Void of Understanding," taken from Proverbs, vin7. The story told by Solomon about a young man who was led into temptation by a woman, was localized, and the moral clearly pointed out. Corner loaters and men who care only for their ap-pearance and nothing for their souls' welfare were given a terrible scorching.

In closing his sermon, Mr. Doneboo said: "Young man, is there anything in the picture here drawn which answers to a deseription of yourselt? How do you spend your evenings? What kind of society are you seeking in which to spend your idle hours? Take warning in time. Question your own soul, and see if there are immortal cravings, which keep imploring you to get wasdom and understanding ere the tendrils of hope and virtue and truth wither and die for lack of nourishment, and the divine spirit within be quenched in darkness. Re-member that while neat and comfortable at tire is fitting and proper, yet clothes never did and never will compensate for a mind uncared for or suffered to fill itself with the seeds of vice, which are blown toward it from every quarter."

Only a Prayer Service Held. A prayer service was held yesterday Special To Let Lists to-day.

morning in the Rev. J. R. J. Milligan's R. P. Church, Sandusky street, Allegheny. No mention was made of forming a new church. The pastor was present as a member of the congregation.

WORK DONE BY WOMEN.

Rev. S. W. McCorkle Draws a Lesson From the Heroines of History.

"Deborah, or an Old Testament Heroine," formed the basis for the discourse of Rev. S. W. McCorkle, of the First Congregational Church, Allegheny, last evening. She was shown to embody many of the best qualities of head and heart, and was a good type of heroic womanhood. She was an agitator, inciting her people to avenge themselves and throw off the yoke of foreign dominion. Not only could she agitate, but she could fight; PENN AVE. aroused, of the gentler sex. History furnishes no parallel to the war-like Amazous he discourse was attentively listened to.

After giving a short biographical sketch galling tyranny of brutal men, banded themselves together and fought like tigresses.

England will never forget the bold deeds of Margaret of Anjou, who, at the head of her northern forces, swept over the country like a cyclone, destroying armics and tear-ing down thrones, while in France, Joan of Arc heads the list of military wonders. She was shown, also, to be the ruler, teacher and poetess of her people. The quality of self-sacrifice was referred to and illustrated. Virginia submitted to be stabbed to the heart by her father rather than fall into the hands of the enem es of her country. The Carthagenrian girls cut off their beautiful tresses to be made into bowstrings for their lovers to fight with. The Spartan mothers told their sons to come back victors or be borne back on their shields.

THE GOOD OF SKEPTICS.

Rev. W. S. Williams, of Christ Universal

Church, on Unbellevers. Rev. W. S. Williams, of Christ Univerreligious. His heart was as crystaltine as salist Church, preached last night on the his life. It is true he had his faults, his subjects of "Skeptics the True Church Eulosins. But his faults were faults of gener- gies" and "A Religion to Live by and a Religion to Die By." He said: "We hear a great deal almost every day about skepties, agnostics and doubters, and all those who belong to the category of unbelievers. We hear about them so much, and they are sometimes considered the worst people on carth. But this is a questionable age. Evidence is demanded for everything. Credulity, suspicion, legends, etc., don't go in this age, and we must have something to prove our statements. He that doubts until it calls forth proof is a benefactor rather than otherwise.

The church will hold a series of gospel meetings, beginning to-morrow evening.
Mr. Williams will be assisted by prominent ministers from out of the city. The famous Boston revival singer, Stamford Mitchell, will conduct the music.

REPENTANCE AND FAITH.

Three Chinamen Baptized at the Fourth Avenue Baptist Church.

At the Fourth Avenue Baptist Church last night a ter the service five persons were baptized, including three Chinamen, Fong Gun, Fong Loy and Lee Wing. Only two other Chinamen have ever been baptized in Pittsburg and their baptism occurred only a few weeks ago in the same church. Lee Wing is a relative of one of the men bap-tized before. That man is at the head of the Lee family in Pittsburg and is probably the most influential Chinaman in the city. mission, there being about 35 regular attend ants. The work is proving most success ul. Before the baptismal services the pastor, Rev. Henry C. Applegarth, Jr., preached from the subject, "Meaning of Repentance

Rev. W. F. Conner spoke last evening at the Arch Street M. E. Church on young men in business life. He prefaced his re-marks with the statement that he had not governed the choice.

Was Adam a Hebrew?

Rev. Wilbur F. Craft, of New York, preached yesterday morning at the Second U. P. Church, of Allegheny, taking for his subject, "Was Adam a Hebrew?" His address was to show the reason why the first day of the week should be the Subbath day, rather than the seventh, as under the

and the entire congregation expressed their approval of the change. Carnegie Hall Filled Agnin. A big audience listened again to a "gospel service for men only," at Carnegie Hall, vesterday. D. W. Whittle spoke.

ANOTHER CHURCH TO DEDICATE

The New St. Paul's German Lutheran Building an Allegheny Ornament. The new building of the St. Paul's German Lutheran Church, at the corner of Chartiers and Adams streets, Allegheny, will be dedicated Sunday, February 22. Prof. Charles Heminhaus, of Columbus, O., will preach the dedicatory sermon in Gerthe English sermon. In the evening the services will be conducted by Rev. S. P.

Long, of Massillon, O., in English, while Rev. H. J. Schuh, of Allegheny, will preach in German. Rev. A. R. Kuldel, paster of St. Paul's will assist at all the services.

The church is a fine brick structure, 60x44 feet, and has a spire 90 feet in height. It cost about $10,000. All the work is finished except placing the altar and pews in position, and a few touches to the painting. The altar will be a great ornament to the church. It is one of the handsomest in the city. Frederick Meyer, the well-known sculptor and carver, is a member of the congregation, and has made a presentation of the altar. It is his own handiwork.

Entertained by the Ossified Man-

Jonathan Bass, the famous "ossified man," was last evening examined by about a dozen representative physicians, who united in the expression that the poor man's condition is ertainly one of extreme interest to the med ical fraternity. Mr. Bass proved an enter-taining host at the reception, which was well attended by others than doctors interested in his peculiar case.
