BRUSSELS, Jan. 27 .- The body of the late rine. Badonin was laid in the coffin that the other members of the Allegheny county delegation to whom he had spoken about the rumor, all said they hoped it was rue, becaus? Flinn was the very best Chairman the party could get. "I might differ with the gentlemen on that," said Flinn. Before Andrews was re-elected Chairman the last time, Mr. Flinn could have had the place if he wanted it, but his large business in Pittsburg prevented him from accepting a political position of such exacting character as the State Chairmanof such Favors State and National Aid.

"I am in favor of State aid and national aid to the most liberal degree necessary, as I know of no way in which public money could be better expended than in providing could be better expended than in providing the cheapest transportation possible for the products the people desire to consume. I products the people desire to consume. I one vote from the wreck. ports the project to be feasible, the State should not move in the matter at once and prepare the way to go into Congress with the unit of the project to be feasible, the State prepare the way to go into Congress with the most substantial arguments for national assistance.

"While it might benefit specially a small portion of Pennsylvania, its benefit would of now. be national, and even international. It is, to my mind, only a question of time when these cauals will be built, connecting lakes and river which now lie almost close together waiting to be jouned, and the Canal Com-mission and THE DISPATCH deserve great credit for their work for this one that is to join the Ohio and Lake Erie. As to the appropriation for the Nicaragua Canal, I have given it no attention whatever, and do not suppose it will be acted on this session, if at all. I do not see, however that it need antagonize, even in print, the home proposition, though of course I would always favor spending the money at home before lending it or giving it alroad."

Bayne Opposes State Aid.

"I am in favor of ship canals where they are teasible as a general proposition," said Representative Bayne, "but I have given this project of uniting the Ohio river and Lake Erie no attention and know nothing of its feasibility. I am, however, opposed to State aid for all such projects. They are essentially inter-State or national in their character and should be constructed, if at all, from the National funds." Representative Stone, of the Warren district, was also in favor of ship canals as a general proposition, but had not kept pace with the work of the Canal Commission. "If the project be feasible," said he, "and I have beard the commission would report in in favor of its entire feasibility, of course I am Alliance. It was decided to pay no atten-in favor of it, and would favor State aid if tion to the circular for the reason that it there be nothing to prevent appropriation for such a such a purpose. I assume that the commission would not have been created if there had been an obstable of a legal or constitutional character in the way, but before fully committing mysel: on that point I would like to examine the matter carefully.

A Measure of Defense,

"Certainly such a canal would be a great benefit to commerce, and not only that, but a great measure of de ense in case of war. Our treaties with Great Britain supulate that neither Government shall maintain war vessels on the great lakes, but the Canadian Government is widening and deepening the Welland Canal that war steamers may euter, and in case of an outbreak of hostilities could in a few days have a fleet of war vessels on the lakes and every city of those inland seas would be at their mercy. Though the commercial view is the prominent one, I think the other consideration
