In a minute half of the Democratic members were standing around him, arguing, threatening, ridiculing and in every way trying to force him back into the ranks, but Gehr was stubborn and gave them to understand that he would not be guided by the Steering Committee. He said he was tired of the fooliahness of balloting all day, and proposed to vote for an adjournment when there was no chance of reaching anything definite. The colloquy was still in progress when the Speaker announced

The importation of beef, even for those who will eat it, is expensive, and hence the British Government, as a measure of economy, is seeking to induce the great packers to set up a place in India, where, by the employment of native workmen and strict adherence to caste regulation, all objection to the product may be removed.
