ARGUING FOR CASH.

Mandamus Proceedings Against Controller Grier Heard.

A QUESTION OF GOVERNING LAWS.

The Judges Will Examine the Papers and Decide the Case Later.

YESTERDAY IN THE COUNTY COURTS

The final argument in the mandamus proceedings of Robert Berry against Controller Grier, to compel the payment of fees for holding inquests as Deputy Coroner, took place yesterday before Judges Collier and Slagle.

Attorneys Moore and McFarland appeared on behalf of Mr. Berry and Robb and Fitzsimmons for Controller Grier. The argument was opened by Mr. Fitzsimmons reading the answer of the Controller to the mandamus. He assigns as his reason for refusing to pay the Deputy Coroner that the act of 1889, under which he was appointed, is a general act and does not apply to Allegheny county, which has special laws.

The act of 1841, which was re-enacted and made special to Allegheny county by the act of 1856, he asserts, is the one under which the Coroner works. He can only deputize a Justice of the Peace to hold an inquest in his absence, and Mr. Berry is not a Justice of the Peace. He further maintained that the act of 1889 is unconstitutional, because it provides for paying the Deputy Coroner by fees, whereas the Constitution says that in counties having over 150,000 inhabitants all county officers shall be paid by salary.

W. B. Moore replied on behalf of the Deputy Coroner. He asserted that fees and salary were not synonomous, as was shown by the Constitution and statutes. The term "fees," as used in this case, he said, meant the compensation allowed by law for doing the services named, and had no relation to salary. The act of 1882, fixing the salary of county officers in counties of over 500,000 population, only applies to those officers who entered on their duties after the expiration of 1890 became known, which was January 1, 1891. The other officers remain under the act of 1881. The acts of 1856 and 1841 being special, he claimed, were unconstitutional.

John S. Robb next spoke for Controller Grier. He contended that under the act of 1856 only a justice of the peace could be appointed to hold an inquest in the absence. The Constitution provides that all county officers shall be paid by salary, and in the act of 1881 there is no provision for a deputy coroner, and the plain implication from the provision of the statute is that there should be no deputy coroner. If there should be deputy coroners, then their salaries should be fixed by the Salary Board under the act of 1876, as the salaries of deputy sheriffs are fixed. In conclusion, he contended that the act of 1889 was unconstitutional.

The Court took the papers and reserved a decision.

SHE GOT HER CHILD.

A Habeas Corpus Case Settled in Judge Ewing's Court.

The habeas corpus case of Mrs. Anna Hanna against her husband, William Hanna, to secure possession of her five-year old daughter, was conducted before Judge Ewing yesterday. The couple had separated and the father retained the girl. The case was settled by the father agreeing to let the mother have the child. When the order was made the child refused to go with her mother. She was finally carried away screaming and struggling.

Several bystanders went to give the mother assistance, but she threatened to knock down any man who touched the child, thinking they wanted to take her from her. The father offered no interference.

QUESTION OF A TRADE MARK

Decided by Judge Acheson in the United States District Court.

In the United States District Court yesterday Judge Acheson handed down a decision on the application for preliminary injunction to restrain the Anchor Medicine Company, of this city, from using the word "Anchor" as a trademark. The application was made by Dr. F. A. Richter, who testified to using the word in Germany and to having had it registered here in 1888. The defendants, however, showed they had used it since 1886, and were ignorant of the existence of the German firm.

The Court held that he was not justified in restraining the defendants from conducting their business as it had been done four years prior to filing the bill. The motion was denied.

Six Men for One Crime.

In Criminal Court to-morrow will begin the trial of six Italians for the murder of one of their countrymen, which occurred last fall. During a celebration of some event a fight was started in a shanty boat at Chartiers during which one of the men was shot and subsequently died. Out of some 30 men arrested at the time, the Coroner held six of them for the crime.

THREE EXHIBITIONS.

PITTSBURG ART LOVERS CAN REVEL IN GOOD WORKS.

The Water Colors at the Academy of Science and Art Building—Verestchagin's Influence—The Accomplishments at the School of Design.

The exhibition of water colors at the Academy of Science and Art Building on Fifth street last week, was, it is believed, the first exhibition of this distinct character ever held in Pittsburg. As such it must be considered of more than usual importance, because it marks a decided advance and is an event of no small moment. It means also that the Art Society has entered upon a course of practical activity, with the avowed purpose of advancing art in a public way, by every means at its disposal.

This exhibition is but one of the treats planned by the directors for this season. The next one, probably, will be an exhibition of Mr. C. S. Rinehart's works, upon the occasion of his visit to this city by invitation of the Art Society. The reception which will be tendered Mr. Rinehart on the evening of the 19th cannot, in the nature of things, be public, but it is believed that his works will be open to the public for several days at the Academy building.

The number of water colors on exhibition was 61. Among them were works by Chase, Church, Crane, Edwards, Ferris, Gibson, Murphy, Parton, Smillie, Wyant and other well-known painters.

Beyond doubt the little picture by Chase, entitled, "Au Revoir," is the gem of the collection. There is a delicacy of feeling for form and expression displayed in this little work, together with a perfectly satisfactory treatment of detail, which is rare, indeed. The Church pictures cannot be considered other than sketches, symphony in blue, harmony in green, or what you like. They are simply beautiful suggestions, and considered as such are charming. They are in manner somewhere between the absolute certainty and truthfulness, with freedom, of a Fortuny and the absolute certainty, without freedom, of a Meissonier. It would be better if they were one thing or the other.

Among the other works are many possessing good qualities and many of very ordinary quality. The exhibition, however, taken in connection with the collection in Allegheny and the scientific lectures, under the auspices of the academy, by Prof. Young, this week, indicates pretty strongly the tendency of the time, and promises an intellectual and artistic activity heretofore unknown.

In the Carnegie Galleries.

The sensation experienced by the native citizen of Pittsburg upon entering the Carnegie Art Galleries, in which are hung the famous paintings by Vassili Vassilievitch Verestchagin is new, and beyond doubt agreeable. You enter the beautiful granite building from Federal street and ascend the broad stairway to the reception hall. At once, and instinctively, you feel that the apartments are filled with an air of elegance and refinement which has always been associated in your mind with the famous art galleries of Europe, which you have been abroad, with the Metropolitan Museum or the Corcoran Gallery. People tread lightly as they pass from one case to another, or walk before the great canvasses which are forever telling stories of war, triumph or travel. Around you, on every side, and diving the one hall, are draped with exquisite taste the finest Oriental rugs in the world.

One of these is 60 feet long and worth a fortune. It is superb in color and beautiful in design. It is brought up to the gallery over a low archway through which visitors pass to the upper galleries. As you study the perfect harmony of design and rare quality of color, an image arises in the mind, and you see the patient Oriental weaver squatted before his unconsciously, thread by thread, year after year, without a thought of the ultimate destiny of their production. Perhaps these "carpets full gay, that wrought were in the Orient," graced the presence chamber of royalty. The Russian guard at his palace at the entrance. Hundreds of thousands have passed him in like manner since he left Moscow with the paintings 12 years ago, and you are to him but one of this innumerable company.

The floats through the elegant apartments the murmur of subdued voices as groups, with catalogues in hand, discuss the paintings, their merits and significance. The atmosphere is so different from that out of which you came a moment ago, the hurrying throng on Fourth street, the ward politicians, buzzing about the plain building across the way, bent only on securing re-election to office, the squatty market house which has but one purpose in the world, that of filling the stomachs of men in the scurrying electric cars, bobbing along with a ferry boat like motion, under a network of wires which disfigure the way, all these belong outside. Within is a fountain of intellectual activity and from it are flowing to-day thousandable streams of thought and aesthetic culture, which reach out to the uttermost bounds of our great cities.

In the presence of these works the millionaire and the intelligent clerk are on equal terms. They get the same kind of pleasure and the same quantity, other things being equal. Nothing like this sight was ever before witnessed in Pittsburg or Allegheny. It is simply a new revelation to them. It has come in a new light for the first time. This is the true significance of the remarkable success of the exhibition—that other communities had the people to enjoy art exhibitions of this kind and the art to enjoy. We have always had the appreciative people, but never had the great collections to enjoy.

Surely Mr. Andrew Carnegie planned well and wisely when he erected this beautiful building and dedicated it to public use. His faith in the ultimate outcome of the plan was firm, although to many it seemed sanguine. It is now demonstrated beyond a shadow of doubt that art, upon being furnished a home in our midst, will find its way into that home, and that the people at large are more than anxious to enjoy the intellectual feasts thus furnished them.

A CULINARY TREAT.

The Public Cooking School Holds Commencement Exercises.

A LIST OF THE FAIR GRADUATES.

Great Preparations for the State Teachers' Association.

NEWS FROM TEACHERS AND SCHOOLS

One would suppose that the twelfth commencement exercises of the Public Cooking School would not be such a conspicuous success as the previous events, on account of the rainy weather of yesterday, but the crowd of visitors was as immense as ever. The large hall of the Grant School was utilized for exhibition purposes. Four large tables covered with snowy linen and outlined by a framework of smilax, were filled with innumerable dishes, whose reputation on similar occasions has already been established. A wealth of pink and green bunting artistically extended across the center of the hall, formed an arch on the platform and covered the chandeliers.

Superintendent Luckey made a few introductory remarks, stating that the school is now three years old and that the Industrial Committee had dispensed with the practice of giving prizes, as it proved burdensome and caused dissatisfaction.

Controller E. S. Morrow was then introduced, and stated that the Scriptural quotation that "Man should not live by bread alone" is as true to-day as 19 centuries ago. Yet man must have food, and it must be prepared for him. The art of cooking appears to be a lost art, as attested by the number of dyspeptics. There is close communication between the brain and the stomach, and we ought to hail this era that is helping to make cooking a fine art. It promises well for the coming man. The lessons these graduates received were more useful than any of the higher branches, and these lessons were only the foundation upon which they were to build.

Dr. Guy McCandless delivered the diplomas, and as each representative of the different classes came forward for the bunch of diplomas, he said a few happy words to each. One pupil cooked 631 dishes and another 500, during the term. The entire class earned the reputation of having cooked the best and greatest variety of dishes of any of their predecessors.

The visitors were then served with the toothsome repast. The Misses Clelandaugh, superintendent Luckey proudly poised an immense platter, containing a large fish, for the inspection of the visitors. To facilitate matters, Secretary Reisfar, Mark Lewis and D. R. Torrence, of the Industrial Committee, sliced the cakes and pies with great skill, while under Mrs. Ballou's superior management a corps of graduates served the visitors.

The following is a complete list of those who were given diplomas: Anna Bohne, Nellie Bredell, Annie Hindenrang, Alice Kennedy, Sophia Kilmain, Agnes McCaffrey, Nellie McCutcheon, Annie Price, Agnes Pryer, Bertha Schamberg, Florence Smith, Alice Tyler, Laura Wallace, Maud Wilson, Lizzie Ziedler, Josie Bauer, Fannie McKee, Mamie Morris, Anna Rupp, Mattie Robson, Stella Schueman, Lyda Torley, Mamie Tussey, Kate Walsh, Lulu Younker, Lizzie Wyman, Mamie Jones, Sadie Kenney, Sallie McCann, Minnie Nichol, Bessie Oglesby, Rose Phillips, Mamie Reynolds, Emma Suttzer, Mary Schubert, Grace Thompson, Aggie Holden, Louisa Giedel, Lizzie Thompson, Emma Aring, Fannie Chiley, Lizzie Conley, Mary Edwards, Maggie Noble, Clara Godfrey, Maud Lewis, Nellie McCleary, Katie Noland, Annie Rosenthal, Mollie Rosenthal, Annie Leeds, Rose Solomon, Mary Thomas, Mamie Sweeney, Cora Brush, Clara Barr, Carrie Jacobs, Ida McCandless, Helen Johnson, Ida Rohen, Maggie Mariner.

The examinations will continue five Saturdays.

PHILADELPHIA will be the scene of a great educational gathering on the 24th, 25th and 26th of February. The National Association of Superintendents, a branch of the National Teachers' Association, will discuss ideas for the benefit of the schools at large. On the same dates in this same place State Superintendent Waller has called a meeting of the city, county and borough superintendents.

THE schools are doing their share to help the poor sufferers at Mammoth. On Friday the Washington schools collected $62. The Mt. Washington school received contributions Friday and will receive more to-morrow. The North school also will have a collection to-morrow. A large case, filled with canned fruit, coffee and other edibles, were contributed by the pupils of the Washington schools and will be sent to the scene of the disaster to-morrow.

DR. J. P. STERRET and D. A. Stevenson, Directors of the Hiland school, whose terms expire in June, will not likely have any formidable opposition at the coming election in February. Under the board to which these gentlemen belong there has been a remarkable improvement in the schools of the ward, and these gentlemen have been foremost in the changes. Three new school houses have been erected, with no additional tax on the citizens of the ward.

A final report of the manner of distributing the contributions to this fund will be prepared for the State Teachers' Association in July.

FISHER, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Teachers' State Association, has called a meeting at Harrisburg next Friday, of the committee to outline the programme and secure rates on the different railroads for the coming State Teachers' annual meeting, which this year meets in Bedford.
