efforts of the detectives makes the whole metropolitan force sore. The heads of the department share the general chagrin. But more than this, they are unable to find suf ficient men to efficiently patrol Whitechapel and at the same time maintain enough men at the docks and along the riverside to proteef the free laborers against the attacks which are constantly being threatened by the unionists. There is little doubt in the minds of the police that the murder of the unfortunate woman in Whitechapel vesterday morning was done by the hand of the same monster who now has ten ghastly crimes to his record. When the policeman found the victim under the railway arch her eyes were still opening and closing and her hands con-vulsively twitching in her death threes, while the blood was still pumping in great jets from the several jugular. Those members of the family who had left .se house under the false hopes of the day before, returned, summoned by messeager. The physicians carefully examined the patient, and watched for a long time the useless fight he was so bravely making. Then they withdrew to the front bedroom and held a consultation. At the end of it Dr. Alexander said to the members of the family: "There is no hope." At 8:30 o'clock Dr. Janeway left, and those who new him come from the house knew that death had won.

"He can last but a few hours," he said. The news spread quickly, and soon Seventyfirst street was filled with people of the neighborhood, walking two and fro or standing on the opposite sidewalk watching the house. At 9 o'clock this bulletin came to the telegraph office:

The physicians, after consultation, declare that the General's condition is now hopeless. He is dying and the end is near.

C. ALEXANDER, M. D.

Through a Painless Suffocation.

He was, indeed, dying. The erysipelas, which had seemed to withdraw, returned with renewed force and inflammation became acute, and the sick man's lungs were being slowly choked. By a strange and excellent fortune he was suffering no pain. The lungs alone troubled him. The trouble was suffication, and it was painless. In the sick room there was no sound, except the heavy breathing of the General, like the sleep of a man who is worn out.

Down stairs, the servant, who stood just within the storm door, allowed none but a few intimates to pass into the parlor. He merely answered the inquiries of the others and explained that the General was dying. Several telegrams were sent away, among them this to Mrs. Senator Sherman:

General Sherman still lives, faintly conscious and without pain. His asthmatic breathing is shorter and his strength less. JOHN SHERMAN,

General Sherman had not been couscious since the first change noted by Dr. Alexander. During all his sickness his mind was clear for brief intervals only. There was some delirium. But most of the time he had been lying in a state of semi-consciousness, paying no attention to the things around him. At 10 o'clock Secretary Barret came to the telegraph office and said that there would be no more bulletins. "He is dving," he said, "and the next bulletin will be the announcement of his death."

Watching the General Die.

From that time on there was nothing to do but to watch the great man die. At 11 o'clock a great explosion shook the air. A contractor had set his men to blasting a lot across the street. The police stopped him, and the men sat around waiting for the news of the General's death. Two hours passed, and then Dr. Alexander stepped from the bedside to the next room, and said he thought the end was very near.

The family entered the room to remain until the end. There were Senator Sherman, General Ewing, Thomas Ewing, Jr., General Sherman's four daughters, Miss Rachel, Miss Lizzie, Mrs. Fitch and Mrs. Thackers, Lieutenant Fitch and Mr. A. N. Thackera. In the parlor down stairs were General Slocum, General Collins and General Woodward, and Private Secretary Barret. General Collins was telling of a conversation he had with the dying man a few weeks ago. They were talking of the

At 2 o'clock Dr. Alexander, who has been so faithful and so incessant in his care, left the house and walked toward the elevated station with downcast eyes. "The death was painless," he said. "I never saw a more gallant fight, and I'm so glad he suffered so little at the end." Lieutenant Fitch made a semi-official statement, giving the details of the scenes at the deathbed later in the afternoon. "At 11 o'clock," in the afternoon. "At 11 o'clock," he said, "the General lost consciousness and Dr. Alexande: said it was the beginning of the end. The General's head at this time rested high on a pillow. ealize it." At 2:55 o'clock the wagon of Undertaker Wiggen came, and several men entered the house. In a moment one of them returned to the door and fastened to the electric bell the long, heavy streamers of black silk ris-bon and black crape, which drooped to the stone step. Several empty carriages were in waiting and took away the relatives, who are not staving at the house. At 3 o'clock General Slocum, General Woodward and General Collis left together. pedestrians all the atternoon, and the shouts of the newsboys with the afternoon papers sounded all along the block. Less than half an hour after the news of the General's death was flashed over the country from the telegraph office around the corner in Colum-bus avenue, messages of condolence began to arrive. From the arrival of the first until 6 o'clock the three operators at the office were kept busy receiving them, and there was a continuous line of messenger boys running between the office and the

> The messages were received by Private Secretary Barret and Senator Sherman. Only a part of them were opened and the contents of none were made public. Neither were the names of the senders given out.

Senator Sherman told a reporter at 5 o'clock that nearly 1,000 disputches had been re-ceived. There was one from President Harrison and one from each of the United States Senators, from members of the Cabi-net, from General Schofield and from other army officers.

Embalming of the Body.

The crowds lingered around the corners of the streets watching the General's house un-tij 6 o'clock. Carriages were driven 'up to the house every minute or two, but very few of the occupants got out. They sent their cards to the door by the policeman on duty. There were many callers who came afoot, but only those who were personal friends of the dead General were admitted. Undertaker Wigger completed the process of embalin-ing the General's body about 5 o'clock and then it was laid back on the bed, where he had dead. The arms was back on the bed, where he had died. The arms were tolded. The only

MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

NOTIFYING BOTH BRANCHES OF GEN-ERAL SHERMAN'S DEATH.

The President Pays a Glowing Eulogy to the Dead Warrior-A Soldier for His Country and Not for Fame-His Career Complete.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 .- The President this afternoon sent the following message to Congress :

To the Senate and House of Representatives : The death of William Tecumseh Sherman, which took place to day at his residence in the city of New York at 1:50 P. M., is an event that will bring sorrow to the heart of every patriotic citizen. No living American was so loved and venerated as he. To look upon his face; to hear

he. To look upon his face; to hear his name, was to have one's love of country in-tensified. He served his country, not for fame, not out of a some of professional duty, but for love of the flag and of the beneficient civil institutions of which it was the emblem. He was an ideal soldier and shared to the fullest the espit du corps of the army, but he cherished the civic institutions organized under the Constitution, and was only a soldier that these might be perpetuated in undiminished usefulness and honor. He was in nothing an imitator. A profound student of military science and precedent, he drew from them principles and suggestions, and so adapted them to novel conditions that his campaigns will continue to be the profita-ble study of the military profession throughout the world. His genial nature made him com-rade to every soldier of the great Union army. No presence was so welcome and in-spiring at the campfire or commandery as his. His carser was complete: his honors were full. His death has followed in startling quickness that of the Admiral of the navy, and it is a sad and notable incident that while the department under which he served shall have put on the usual emblenes of mourning, four of the eight executive departments will be simultaneously draped in black, and one other has but to-day rémoved the crape from its walls. slightest noise of a struggle. Theory of a Physician

This lends interest to Dr. Lawson Tait's theory, expounded to a reporter of the Pall Mail Gazette, that the murderer is of the same sex as the several victims. Said Dr. Tait: "Nothing is more likely than that 'Jack the Ripper' is some big, strong woman enthe Rupper is some one strong up gaged at the shaughter house in cleaning up and now and then in actually cutting up meat. Again, in the number of instances the women when found were hardly dead. The bodies were warm. The murderer could not be far away. On the discovery of one of the murders the police promptly made a circuit round the neighborhood. Nobody was arrested, or rather no man was arrested. They did not look for a woman. How could a woman have so cleverly committed the leed? It must be clearly understood that whoever was the criminal would be thoroughly splashed with the blood. It would be impossible to hack and hew a warm body in the 'Ripper' fashion without getting all over blood.

How a Woman Could Escape.

"A man who thus besmeared himself could not possibly have got clear away, time after time. The thing would be per-fectly easy for a woman. Conceive the murder done and the woman is all spissbed. All she has to do is to roll up her skirts to the waist, leaving her pettleoat exposed, and fold up the shawl that is over her shoulders and tuck it in at the middle. Then she might pass through the crowd with the very slightest risk of detection. "Then as to washing the blood-flyed garments, what would a man du? Plunge them into hot water; result, the blood congulates, won't come off, and stains the clothes. And where is he to get hot water, or how is he to pour away the bloody water undetected? A woman is always at the washing tub and she would put the clothes in cold water when with a little soap and rubbing they would become clean, practically unstained and she would be unsuspected."

an Edison Phonograph. IBY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.1

LONDON, Feb. 14 .- H. Murphy, son of Colonel T. J. Murphy, of Brooklyn, is over here making arrangements for a unique tour around the world. He leaves New York about the middle of April in a 27-foot American life-saving yacht, and will visit all the principal ports of the British isles, France, Spain, and the Italian peninsula, and the coast towns of the Mediterranean thence across the Black Sea to Odessa and through the Suez canal and the Indian Ocean to China and Japan, and across the Pacific to San Francisco and back to New York through the Nicaragua canal, if it is completed Murphy takes with him one of Edison's most highly perfected phonographs and several hundred cylinders, and he intends to transfer to wax the voices of the various people he will visit, particularly those of savages. He will also stop at the Pitcairn Islands, to bring hack with him in a phono-graph the story of the mutineers of the ship Bounty, as related by their descendants. He intends to complete his journey in time for the World's Fair in Chicago, where his boat and phonographic records will be exhibited.

WHOLESALE DESTRUCTION.

Everything Belonging to the Late Duke of Bedford Sacrificed by Fire.

IBY DUNLAP'S CARLE COMPANY. LONDON, Feb. 14 .- The late Duke Bedford's effects continue to go the way of the ducal remains, much to the great indignation of the poor of Woburn and the neighborhood, who naturally don't see the necessity for the wholesale cremation, of all his personal property, as was done with his ex-personal body. Following out the programme of destruc-tion, all the furniture and carriages which he used, were offered up as a sacrifice by fire, to appease the manner of his eccentric-ity. But the destruction will not stop here, for it is said that in three days time the horses will be led out from the ducal stable and then shot.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 14 .- Something of sensation was created on the floor of the Stock Exchange when H. H. Boyden posted on the slate five sales of the common stock of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Day-ton Railroad Company, aggregating 852 shares. The sales were 832 shares. The sales were in blocks of 100 and 200 shares at 105 and 200, and 100 and 232 shares at 1051%. Who the buyer and sellers are can only be a mat-Private advices from New York say 2,000 shares were sold at 110. The jollity of several known friends of the Pennsylvania makes it quite certain that road has the

A preliminary plan of defense was out lined during the conference. It was proposed to show that Gauger Dewar, who charges that Gibson tried to hire him to blow up Shufeldt's Distillery, is a practical machinist, and could have made the infernal machine which he alleges Gibson gave him. It will be admitted that Gibson was in com munication with Dewar for the purpose of obtaining reliable information as to the output of Shufeldt's, and that in case Dewar failed to send the information Gibson may have written to him on the subject; that Dewar had an opportunity and four hours'

time in which

Milchrist. "My dear sir," he replied, "it does not amount to a row of shucks. The idea of his snying or maintaining that the bottle of fluid was placed in Gibson's grip by the of-ficials! The facts are these: When Gibson was arrested the grip was not out of his pos-session till he arrived in the Marshal's of-fice. It was then opened in his presence, and in it was found a bottle. This was marked with the initials of Mr. Brooks and Mr. Summerville and put back in the grip. It was afterward given to Stuart's keeping. It was so marked that it would have been impossible to tamper with it." "It is said Gibson did not come here to answer to a letter from Dewar, but was on
