A SUICIDE MACHINE.

Colorado's Murderers May Become Their Own Executioners.

THE INVENTION OF A CONVICT.

In a Minute and a Half After Stepping on the Trap It Falis.

A DIAL MEASURES OFF THE TIME.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 28.-Colorado's lawmakers will, at this session of the Assembly, take a hand in adopting some late device for the execution of human beings, and may accidentally adopt some means superior to the electric method now in use in New York.

Recently a plan was invented by one of the convicts serving a term in the Colorado Penitentiary at Canon City, by which James Joyce, a condemned murderer executed himself. Now a bill has been introduced in one the Houses asking that this system of suicide be legalized and adopted as the means of carrying out the sentence of capital punishment, with an excellent chance of its becoming a law. The problem the inventor has attempted to solve was to devise some means by which the victim, by his own act, would let the weight fall and hang himself. This problem has been solved by the methods described in this article.

Details of the Machine. A square platform, about three inches high, was placed in the center of the floor. This platform is set over a spring, which bends down about half an inch under the weight of a man. It is the descent of this the weight. But it has been so arranged time that the man steps upon the platform and the time the weight falls. It a closet there are two square buckets, one above the other. The upper bucket, when it is full of water, weighs 40 pounds. It rests upon the end of a beam that moves up and down on an axis. At the other end of the beam rests loosely an iron ball, which weighs 29 pounds. This ball is attached loosely to the rod that regulates the large weight in the wooden pipe. In a window in the wall of the death chamber is a dial. A hand on the dial is attached by a string to a float in the lower bucket. As the water rises in the lower bucket the hand moves from right to left across the face of the dial. It takes about a minute and a half to run across from one

Waiting for Death to Come.

When the victim steps upon the platform the descent of the spring moves a rod that pulls a stopper and permits the water to trickle down from one bucket to the other. As the upper bucket becomes lighter it rises and the weight at the other end of the beam lowers at the same time the float in the lower bucket rises as the water pours in. The hand begins its progress across the dial. The upper bucket continues to ascend and the position of the weight at the other end of the beam becomes every moment more precarious. The weight trembles there; the hand has well nigh made its journey across the dial. Suddenly the weight slips off th beam. It ralls. By that fall it pulls the long arm that regulates the heavy weight in the wooden pipe.

The big weight falls with a crash and the man is jerked into the air. He has executed himself.
