AT THE SEVENTH AVENCE HOTEL.

Eloquent Addresses by Prominent Pittsburgers and Others.

TESTERDAY WITH THE SOCIETY PEOPLE

The influence of language and tradition binds more closely than any tie of affinity that holds together the members of the human family. That is why men of the same nationality, or who claim descent from an ancestry of a common country, find such rich and pleasing companionship with each other when they meet either in a foreign country or in some land of their mutual adoption.

To talk over the "folk-lore" of the Father land, or sing the songs familiar at the hearthstones of the "old country," have a reminiscent fascination peculiarly theirown, while the sound of the mother tongue, snoken where another language has dominant use and sway, turns back the mental hands of time, and memory, following the suggestions of the once familiar entonations, the programme will be in the competent recalls scenes and faces long buried in the inexorable past.

Such were the thoughts prompted at the ninth annual dinner of the St. David's Be. and J. E. Evth. nevolent Society of this city, as 300 members of that organization sat in the banquet hall of the Seventh Avenue Hotel last evening to partake of the delicacies in edibles and eloquence so generously provided for that occasion.

An Elegant Banquet Disposed of.

Everyone present was either by birth or descent of the Welsh nationality. At 8 o'clock the guests, many of whom were ladies, formed in column and marched into the large dining room, and just as each one had been ushered to his place at the table, President Albert J. Edwards, the popular Assistant Postmuster, requested all to be sented. Then it was that the characteristic of grim determination, historically the predominent feature of Welsh nationalism, asserted itself, and course after course appeared, only to be vanquished and the guests will be limited. put to downward flight. The Welsh met a fate of total anthilation, even if it did cause some of the fair Welsh-Americans to flutter in a way that greatly amused those to the manner born. But finally, when due preparation had been made, the genial young President announced the Toast Master D. W. Llewellyn, whom he characterized as a busines man whose "career had not been varied, yet his transactions have been carried on behind a checkered front." The master of the teast, being of tew words, promptly introduced Will L. Jones, to respond to the sentiment, "Our Absent Guests." The speaker was a young man possessing rare magnetism of speech and manner,

Many Letters of Regret. He concluded his short but pleasing ad-dress by reading letters of regret from Judge Noah Davis, of New York; Novelist

W. G. Howells, President G. B. Roberts of the Pennsylvania railroad; George Jones, proprietor of the New York Times; Horace proprietor of the New York Times; Horace Jones, of Topeka, Kan.; Rev. E. C. Evans, of Ramsen, N. Y.; Horatio Gates Jones, of Philadelphia; Jacob Reese, of Philadelphia; G. H. Humphries, of the Utica (N. Y.) Mirror; Rev. William C. Roberts, D. D., of Lake Forest, Wis.; L. H. Roberts, Assistant United States Treasurer at New York; Rev. D. Parker Morgan, of New York; Rev. D. Parker Morgan, of New York; and ex-Posimatter Thomas L. New York, and ex-Postmaeter Thomas L. James, of New York, whom he said were all true Sons of Cambria.

The next toast was "Welsh Influence in America." The response was given by President Al J. Edwards, who made the speech of the evening. He said:

As a nation Wales has never been numerically strong, but what it lacked in quantity it made up in quality. The fact that it has been a small nation, confined for centuries to a conner of an island, entitles it to unlimited praise for the good influence it has radiated into the outside world.

Principles of Truth and Right.

Every close and urbiased student of history learns that the ancient Britons were netter schooled in the great principles of truth and individual rights than any other barbarous European tribe. They had a clearer conception of the duties a man owed to society and what society owed to the moinvidual as one of its component parts. In electing the National Assembly, which controlled even the druidical cruer, not only every man, but every woman might have a vote. As we require certain quantications to exercise the elective franchise, so did they. To cast a ballot it was necessary for every man to have a grown beard. This was not expected of the women. It was essential, however, for them to be married. The chief object of Welsh legislation was the rights of the individual man. His home was his castle, and his means and aids to gain an honest livelihood, undisturbed rights. It was unights in the law to unman the man or uncall the calling." The thoughts, aye, the golden shoughts, that led to unity of action and became the uninstay of the ancient Britons in the dark days of Druidism, enabled them to maintain their freedom and hold fast to their religion, when all the rest of the civilized world had fallen under the sway of Rome. The principles which shielded and supported them have been marked across the bring waters and have been interwoven into the fabric of our government, blessing generations yet unborn.

Welshmen in American History. Principles of Truth and Right.

Weishmen in American History. When English oppression threatened to crush the very life blood out of the feeble colonies, the martial spirit of the people was stirred and they arose in their might to contest for they arese in their might to contest for their liberties and their rights. Thomas Jefferson, a Weishman by descent, wrate the Declaration of Independence, and registered among the immortal signatures to that magna charta of the American people are the names of Ir men of Weissi descent. When the famishing cry of the Revolutionary army for the necessaries of life bardered upon mutiny, and the gaunt form of starvation confronted them, a limited number of patriotic citizens of the Quaker City pooled their means and organized a bank, which still exists.

This eloquent deliverance was followed by one on "The Day We Celebrate." by by one on "The Day We Celebrate," by Thomas C. Jenkins. In the course of his speech he said:

We meet once more in commemoration of our patron saint. For centuries nearly all nationalities have had some favorite god or goddess—some imaginary spirit, perhaps, or some saint that was supposed to watch over them in time of peace, and that protected them in time of war or invasion, Weishmen in Wales, in this and other countries, are meeting to-night and are fighting over again as it were the battles of old, and perpetuating the reminiscences of the past.

The Virtue of Charity

The Virtue of Charity.

Among other virtues attributed to St. David is charity. This is why so many of the Welsh societies which are charitable are named in memory of him. We, as Welshmen, or their descendants, are proud of our ancestry which we can trace back unadulterated to a period that antedates profane history, and pride ourpolives in being descendants of King Arthur and the knights of old-immortalized by Ten-ntsun-who forfeited their all, often their lives, that their families, their homes and their country night be preserved.

Mr. Jenkins is a delightful talker and he tande many teeling and pleasing references to the celebrations going on in other cities. He also spoke of the great men Wales had given to this country and hinted that there was a probability that recent archeological discoveries pointed to a historical fact—that Welshmen knew of America before the renerally accepted date of its discovery.

The sudden sickness of Hon. Samuel Griffits prevented his being present to respond to "The Future of the Weish Race." John
L. Lewis, on "Welsh Character and Weish Matter" and Ray Feed Frence D. D. Matters," and Rev. Fred Evans, D. D., the distinguished and patriarchal looking liantist minister of Philadelphia, on "The hand of Our Forefathers," concluded the stated programme. The national hymn, "Hen Wlad Fy Nhadau," which in English means "Land of My Father," was sung then by all stand-ing, and St. David's memory was revived in ST. DAVID'S MEMORY, this city in a fitting and graceful manner by his faithful believers.

SOME AMATEUR DRAMATICS

That Are to Be Sprung on the Public in the Near Future. Dramatics are contagious, and Pittsburg is having quite an epidemic of them. The latest is the proposed presentation of "The Rivals" by a number of youthful society lads and lassies. The presentation will be a parlor performance at the residence of Mrs. Haworth, and will be given in the near future. The cast will include Misses Dora Price, Edith Rankin, Lucy Haworth and Eda Young, and Messrs. Verner Scaife, Scoville, Riddle and Haworth.

Scoville, Riddle and Haworth.

The young people have engaged a competent coacher and will endeavor to distance the rivals, even to the Tuesday Night Club, of which it might be said it is an offspring. The services of John Sturgeon have been secured by the Tuesday Night Club as a "coach" for its next play, and, as Mr. Sturgeon has servedgan apprenticeship with Booth, Barrett and Warde, the club is naturally congratulating itself, and predicting even greater triumphs for the future ing even greater triumphs for the future

Mrs. Hurford, of Bellevue, will give quite an elaborate luncheon on Thursday, though

Indiana Presbyterians Want the Minte

Called to Account CINCINNATI, March 2.-Rev. W. H. James, Chairman of the Committee on Errors in the Church, to-day offered in the Cincinnati Presbytery a petition, to be presented to the next General Assembly, reciting that in a syllabus of an address apon assuming a chair in a theological seminary of the church, such expressions were used as were apparently rash and un-guarded, erroneous in their tendency, and calculated to unsettle faith in their inspira-tion, genuineness and infallibility of the Scriptures. The petition asked the General Assembly to take such action as would eral Assembly to take such action as would preserve the peace, purity and prosperity of the church. The professor referred to was Rev. Dr. Charles Briggs, of the Union Theological Seminary of New York.

The petition was laid on the table until the next meeting of the Presbytery. One member of the Presbytery stated that since the publication of Dr. Briggs' views his Bible class of 40 young men had dwindled to a mere handrul, so marked was the skeptical views in Dr. Briggs' teaching.

TWO TRAMPS' PREMIUM GALL. They Take Up Their Residence in a House

During the Family's Absence. PHILADELPHIA, March 2.—For monu-mental boldness and presumption two tramps that have come to the knowledge of Robert Clark, who lives near Fallsington Bucks county, are certainly unsurpassed. Mr. Clark journeyed away a few miles to visit his sick wife and left his residence unoccupied. But it bore no resemblance to a deserted homestead when the farmer set eyes upon it on his return. Mr. Clark entered. Every bureau drawer was on the floor, as were its contents, every whichway There was hardly a piece of furniture standing on its four legs. But the greatest surprise awaited the master's eyes in the kitchen. The fire had been lighted, the table set, and there were the dishes holding the remains of a banquet that had evidently offered the best the cupboard could afford. He went upstairs and there in his search he came to a door that was locked. He knocked, a voice answered, and forthwith he was admitted. Imagine his horrer at beholding two tramps in luxurious repose upon his best bed. It took Mr. Clark but a minute to hustle them out, and then he telegraphed for the constable of Morrisville. The filthy twain were taken before 'Squire Wright and sent by him to Doylestown jail.
Mr. Clark believes those two tramps had gone into housekeeping to stay, or for at least as long as butter, eggs and other edibles lasted, and that had he arrived on the scene a little later his rights of ownership would have been unalterably pre-empted.

TO BUILD BIG AIRSHIPS.

Hawkes and Harry Twyford, of Birmingham, Eng., J. C. L. Pugh, of Columbus, O., and Lucas L. Van Allen, of New York, the moneyed men of the directory, were present at the meeting. It has not been decided as to whether to erect the works here or in Mt. Carmel, Ill.
