Outside Contractors Get More Than Their Share of the Work,

BECAUSE THEY CONTROL CHEAP LABOR

A good many people in Pittsburg are curious to know why the construction of the larger proportion of new erections is awarded to outside architects and contractors, to the detriment of home talent and enterprise, and, in a great measure, to the loss of native artisans. The newest building of any size just commenced is C. L. Davis'

Without stopping to inquire into reasons, it will be pertinent to point out that a strong connection exists between this general employment on Pittsburg work of outside contractors and workmen, and the demands of the carpenters-rather a section of that body-for eight hours' work at nine hours' pay.

Local contractors are wont to urge, when asked why they allow so much work to slip through their fingers, that they cannot compete with builders from other cities, because the difference in wages is so much in favor of the latter. This is the reason why Henry Shenk, of Erie-as one example of an outside contractor-is so successful in obtaining Pittsburg contracts.

Mr. Shenk is now building the Telephone Exchange on Seventh avenue, and among the larger erections constructed by him are be Duquesne Club House, the Anderson Ho tel, the Lewis block and the Y. M. C. A. building, besides many private residences in the East ing, besides many private residences in the East End, such as Colonel Schoonmaker's. The men employed in the rough construction on these works were paid local wages, as a general rule, though very frequently men were imported and placed at work at lower rates than obtained here. But the advantage of the outside contractor began after the roof had been put on. The carpentry and joining and fine fittings were made at Erie, and by workmen who were paid from 25 cents to 75 cents a day less than Pittsburg rates. Further, the lumber and stonework were shipped from Erie and landed here at less cost than similar material could be purchased in this market, because they were wrought by men at low wages.

HIGH PRICE ASKED FOR INFORMATION

Christian Hoffarth, the missing heir, has been located. He was seen by a friend two weeks ago, in Cleveland, where he is working at the trade of barber, and at 12:05 this morning his brother, John Hoffarth, Jr., and uncle, L. J. Kamps, left for that city to bring him back, that the whole business may be settled up at once. It was through the article which appeared in THE DISPATCH Friday morning that the whereabouts of the young man became known. By 9 o'clock on that morning everybody in Millvale and in the vicinity of Butler street knew of the good fortune of the Kamps heirs, and congratulations were poured in on them all the morning. Any number of people were willing to start out at once to bring back the runaway-for a money consideration. They knew right where to get him, but it would of course require money to bring him back. Had the youth's friends listened to the advice so freely given they might have spent a good share of their fortune before seeing it themselves. However, they remained quiet and waited for THE DISPATCH account to send had returned from Cleveland about two weeks ago. For the very modest sum of $500 he was willing to produce the boy who can secure for his friends a fortune. He was refused that amount, and very graciously reduced his figures. He was very anxious for the heirs to get their money, but thought he ought to get a "divide" out of it.

By a little strategy Calliban was at last induced to tell his story. While in Cleveland he often met young Hofforth, as they were quite good friends. The latter was working at his trade, harbering which ne learned in his father's shop. Two weeks ago he was working in a hotel tonsorial parlor, and as Calliban was coming to Pittsburg he went around to see if Hoffarth had any word to send home. The Board of Assessors Commences Work on the Triennial Assessment of Real Estate.

ADOPTING SOME NEW METHODS.

The Result of the Work Expected to Emphasize Pittsburg's Remark-

"To-morrow we commence work on the triennial assessment," said Chief Assessor Frank P. Case yesterday. "Our clerks completed the record of the property owners in the city yesterday, and we will at once begin the work of valuing the real estate. This work, in accordance with an act of Assembly, is performed every third year, the assessment on real estate remaining n no danger of falling behind.

"There is no doubt that our assessment will show a remarkable increase in the valuation of the real estate of Pittsburg. It is surprising how the price of property has gone up. It has not jumped all over the city at once, but has been affected in spots a until the entire city has felt the effects. For tastance, the Second ward took a jump and then the Seventh; after that the Eleventh and so on, until every ward in the city had participated in the rise in values."

Assistant Assessor Larkins is prepared to take off his coat to-day and go over the city bot by look. In speaking of the comparative value of property he said: "We have been criticised at times for not assessing property at the price at which it is held by the owner. For instance, in me portions of the city land is held at $5,000 and $10,000 un acre. It is used, perhaps, for turning or market gardens, and its notual value to the owner is often not more than 5 or 10 per cent of the price be puts cross it. Of course, if he sells it and it is laid out into streets and built upon it is worth all that is paid for it and should be seesed at that figure, but while it is used or farming it would be ridiculous to think of assessing it at $5,000 an acre.

The Tragic Death of Eva Bloch Arouses Among the Poles Their

ANCIENT ENMITY FOR RUSSIANS. Raising Funds to Pursue the Man to the Ends of the Earth.

RESULT OF A REBELLION IN WARSAW Thousands of persons visited the morgne resterday to view the remains of Eva Bloch, the handsome and aristocratic young Polish woman who hanged herself at the Union Denot. The crowds came so thick rich and poor, young and old, native and foreign. With but one exception they expressed sympathy for the girl whose life had come to such a sad end. The exception consisted of a man, two women and a strong smell of whisky. When they entered the dead room, one of the women made a sneering remark, at which the two laughed profusely, and then, turning to the man, said, "Bob, let's have another pull at the bottle." Bob had enough sense to refuse, and the party left the morgue. The Poles of the city are greatly wrought up over the affair, and bitterly curse the man whose desertion of the girl caused the tracedy.

Awakened the National Foud. The ancient enmity between the Poles and Russians has again been fanned into a flame, and the unknown man's life would not be worth much if they could find him. They have applied to Inspector McAleese to and them in apprehending the man, but as he has not broken any law on the statute books, the Inspector is unable to assist them. The story told by John Jankuski, a native of Warsaw, but now living on Twenty-eighth street, leads the Poles of this city to consider this affair but another incident in the long chapter of indignities inflicted upon the help-less Poles by the tools of the Czar. Eva Bloch's father, according to Jenkuski, who knows him well, was ten years ago the chief magistrate of Warsaw. His family consisted of Eva, two younger daughters and a son, his wife being dead. The old gentleman was highly respected as a wise and moderate ruler, and was univer-sally loved by his people.

Result of a Rebellion. About six years ago the citizens of Warsaw were oppressed by additional taxation imposed by Russia. The Poles are not a very patient people, and the citizens rebelled. The Czar promptly sent a strong force to Warsaw. Eva's father was deposed from office and the city placed under military control. For a wonder the old magistrate suffered no loss beyond that of his office. He had counseled his people to submit to the demands of Russia and submit to the demands of Russia and had taken no part in the insurrection. The officers on duty in a Polish town always consider themselves entitled to whatever strikes their fancy, whether wealth, women or wine, and do not hesitate to appropriate anything they desire. This example is generally followed by the Russian attaches to the military court. ourt. It is believed that the man who deserted Eva.

It is believed that the man who deserted Eva in this city was not an officer, as he declared, but a son of one of the Russian officials at Warsaw. He took a fancy to the girl, and with or without her consent carried her off. That he must have had the assistance of the Russian officials is evident, as otherwise he could not have secured passports to enable him and the girl to leave the country. Russian officials is evident, as otherwise he could not have secured passports to enable him and the girl to leave the country.

The Poles of Pittsburg have taken this view of the case, and believe furthermore that the man had robbed the girl of money she had with her. They assert the probability of the girl at the instigation of the Russian having robbed the father, and already claim that the sum amounted to about $2,000. There was, however, little need of their presence for although one man started to sing an aria relative to Mr. McGinty. started to sing an arm relative to Mr. McGinty, he promptly desisted when cautious by the police. A number of remarks about cold water were made, but as a rule the large crowd acted very orderly and the baptism was completed without interference or annoyance.

Another haptism took place yesterday, but the scene was at the Monongahela wharf near the old Baltimore and Ohio depot, and was held between 8 and 10 o'clock in the morning. Those who were immersed were 42 members of the Ebenezer Colored Baptist Church, and the labor devolved alone on Rev. J. H. Pryor, who was in the water all the time. Joseph Smith, the colored januter of the Thirty-sixth ward police station, was the first to be placed under water, and the work of lifting him up again was not easy, as Smith stands him up again was not easy, as Smith stands 6 feet 4 inches high, and is heavy in proportion. went to church yesterday morning they found their place of worship in ashes. It had been burned early in the morning, natural gas being the cause. The church was a large brick building, about 45 by 65 feet in dimensions, with a basement and main audi-torium. It is now a total wreck, and the loss will be from $15,000 to $20,000. Slate Lick is the center of a healthy farming community about center of a healthy farming community about midway between Freeport and Kittanning. A gas line which supplies the Ford City Glass Works with fuel from the Butler county fields runs through the place, and the church was supplied with gas through the generosity of Captain J. B. Ford.

About 4:30 o'clock yesterday morning Dr. J. C. McKee, who lives opposite the church, discovered flames issuing from the windows of the building and gave the alarm. In a short time nearly the entire population of the village was on the scene, but nothing could be done to save the property. In two hours the building was destroyed.

the property. In two hours the building was destroyed.

The loss is a severe blow to the community, as there was only $2,000 insurance on the property. The church' was in excellent repair, having been remodeled and refurnished about three years ago at considerable expense, and was a comparatively new structure. It stood on an elevation overlooking Lower Slate Lick. On May 6, 1875, the church was blown down by a wind storm, the loss at that time being heavy.

A member of the congregation vesterday told the following concerning the fire: "It was caused by natural gas. It was customary for the junitor to light the fire Saturday nights, and turn the gas low over night. It is supposed when the glass works were shut down the pressure, which is at all times very heavy, became so strong as to ignite the building. No biame is attached to the janitor, however, as he has always taken great care to avoid accidents. When Capitain Ford made the proposition to give our congregation free fuel, some of our members were fearful that the church would be destroyed, but the majority of the people favored the scheme on account of its convenience."

Future plans, of course, have not been determined upon. The congregation includes a few of the oldest and most prominent citizens of Armstrong county, notably William Rea, John Graham and James Brown. It is thought work will soon be commenced to rebuild.

The last sermon delivered in the church by the pastor, Rev. J. P. Calhoun, was to the American Mechanics, of Slate Lick, on Sunday, March I. Yesterday morning the recular church services had to be dispensed with, but those of last night were held in the public schoolhouse. The United Presbyterian congregation has offered the use of its church until a new building is erected.

The Slate Lick Presbyterian congregation is the oldest in the county, having been organized about 1798. It has had a number of prominent pastors, among others, Rev. John H. Aughey, now of Chariton, Ia.; Rev. J. C. McCracken, now of Markle, Pa., and Rev. B. F. Boyle, brother of Rev. T. N. Boyle, of Braddock, now located in the West.

ing-His Wife Hits the Prosecutor. A dramatic arrest occurred at the Union depot last evening. Louis Thielig, a bartender for John Thoma, on Liberty street, was about to start for Germany for the benefit of his health. He is accused of felonious shooting and riot by John Cahill, of Bloomfield. A hearing will be held at Magistrate McKenna's A hearing will be held at Magistrate Mckenna's office next Tuesday.

Cahill heard during the day that Thielig intended to leave for Germany in the evening. He was on hand early at the depot, nervous and restless, to watch for his coming. Thielig, accompanied by his wife and a party of friends, arrived about 7:30, and, just as he had bade his companions goodly and kissed his wife, he was arrested by Officer Moran as he was going through the acts.

SWALL SCRAPS OF LOCAL NEWS

THE scholars of the Chinese Eible school of the Fourth Avenue Baptist Church will give a New Year supper and entertainment this even-ing in the lecture room of the church. An in-teresting programme has been arranged. An alarm from box 252, at about 8:20 last night, was caused by a lamp exploding in the parlor of James Reed, on Sterrett street, near Lincoln avenue. The damage done to the fur-niture will amount to about $50.

In order to keep a watch on the First ward speak-easies yesterday a policeman was placed wherever one of these places was supposed to be. As a result no liquor was sold there yester-day, and the plan will be kept up. A SMALL fire occurred at the works of Philip Weinberger & Co., yesterday morning, occasioned by some oil taking fire in two vats. A SLIGHT fire at the residence of B. F. Benbow, 2408 Sarah street, last evening, was ex-tinguished before the department arrived.

Hearings at the Police Stations Yesterday Developed Numerous Drunks and Disorderlies-A Colored Dance House Raided

-Allegheny People Before the Bar. Yesterday's hearings in the two cities deeloped the usual array of men who, rather than look upon the wine when it is red, put t from sight, and feeling somewhat exnilarated needed police protection. They got it, too, and quite a bunch of them will take an early train for a spacious hotel on the banks of the beautiful Allegheny. It will be from 10 to 90 days before the majority of them will secrete any more liquid refresh-ments about their persons.

similar stuff here—in the execution of their work.

As already stated, the principal reason against the concession of higher wages to the carpenters is found in the foregoing. Contractors declare that to grant any increase in wages will result in their losing still more of the trade than is now passing them by, and they are, for once, united in a determination to resist all attempts in this direction. Members of the building trades recognize that to grant the carpenters their demand for eight hours at present wages would be only holding out an inducement to the plasterers to make similar demands, with some fair show of logic, when preparing their scale next August. If one should get eight hours there is no reason why another trade should not, if it could, and such concessions this year would be surely followed by a general eight-hour demand by the rest of the building trade next spring.

The Argument of Employers.

they can go and leave them any competing chance with outsiders, and to increase rates would be tantamount to going out of business. There is another view which employers take of the eight-hour demand. They are opposed to it on account of its incidental cost. The reduction in hours would necessitate the employment of additional help, and accommodation for increased number of employes must be found by enlarging shops and furnishing additional machinery. Incidentally would follow additional clerk hire and increased rentals for larger premises. So that, urge employers, the concession of eight hours for nine hours' work is not alone a question of higher wages but involves increased expenditures which there is no probability of recovering.

The manner in which the employers hope to day's work to labor that period. The feeling of the trade generally over the country is that this is the best way to solve the difficulty, and the Builders' Exchange have all adopted and intend to urge the adoption of the system on their men.

It is no secret that the majority of the carpenters are opposed to the eight-hour plan sought to be made an issue by the radical wing among them. The officials have received instructions from headquarters to push the question at all hazards, and even to accept eight hours at eight hours' pay, rather than fail to carry the point of the shorter day. The sentiment of the majority is opposed to this plan, and is in favor of obtaining the most money for a day's work. They are content to work nine

"One of the saddest things I ever saw oc curred at the Union depot several nights ago," said a gentleman at the Anderson yesterday. "I was going West on the midnight train over the Panhandle, but the Eastern connection being several hours late it was close to morning before we pulled out. It was a long time to wait and I would have returned to the hotel but the presence of a handsome woman, gandily dressed, in the station attracted my attention. I soon discovered that she had taken a few drinks too much, and she spent the time wandering back and forth between a cab out-side and the waiting room. Her beauty, tipsy

"When the Eastern express arrived I was expert to see what would occur. A tall, very good-looking man alighted with a grip in his hand. I think he was a drummer. The poor woman, with her fine clothes bedraggled with mud, rushed up to him, threw her arms around his neck, and kissed him. He put down his head, and probably catching the odor of whisky on her breath, without saying a word, but with a scoraful sweep of his arm he pushed her away, and turning on his heel picked up his valise and re-entered the train.
