Downey, "will not add much to the reputation of Western Pennsylvania. It will soon be classed with New Orterday and sought shelter at the station, being both footsors and hungry.

Operator Milby took the boy in and provided him with something to eat, and Mayor Wyman left orders to care for him and he will try and find him a home. The boy is a bright, sturdy little fellow, and although uneducated, is an entertaining talker. More than once during the recital of his sad story his eyes filled with tears, and he wished his mother was living, as he then would not have to beg. leans. The military should have been sent there earlier, and no blood would have been spilled. The Governor certainly knew the class of people he had to deal with, and should not have taken chances. The indications are that the men will be beaten, and if they should go to work the companies would probably force a reduction on them after awhile, when they would not be in a position to resist it. I find that man's greatest enemy is man. It is not the corporations, as many suppose, While Rev. George W. Izer, D. D., of Christ M. E. Church, Allegheny, was delivering When Strikers Are Liable to Win. "As long as others stand ready to take the places of those who quit work when not treated fairly, little can be accomplished in this When the minister and his family returned treated fairly, little can be accomplished in this way. It is only when the position of the employes is good, and they can get public sympathy on their side, that they can hope to win. For example, there are plenty of men thrown out of jobs by strikes on the Reading and New York Central roads who would be ready to jump in if trouble occurred on other railroads.

"Everything is very quiet in the railroad world at present. The dull business has had a tendency to repress the dissatisfied ones on both sides. The railway managers in the West are very decent people, and have learned to treat fairly with their men. They realize that labor organizations are a good thing for the roads, and they encourage them by meeting committees on a When the minister and his family returned shortly after B o'clock they found the bedroom and the doctor's study turned "topsy-turvey." So far only a lady's gold watch and chain, worth about $150, have been missed, but it is supposed that a number of other articles have been taken. The pastor's desk had been completely missed by reason of the drawers having been forced open and the floor was carpeted with sermons. It is thought the thieves loft before they had completed their work. business basis. In the East some of the managers are tinged with aristocratic ideas, and think it beneath thom to meet with workmen on an equal footing, but one of these days they will get an inning that will knock the starch eat of them. It must be said for Jay Gould that he is good to his men. He is always ready to grant any reasonable demand, and he doesn't lose anything by it. The average man has some gratitude, and he is sure to work better for the person who treats him fairly than for one who is exacting and severe. Benefits of the Organizations. "Why, the railroads couldn't get along withgreat deal of responsibility. Were it not for the orders the men would be dissatisfied, and some blatant individual would always be stirsome blatant individual would always be stirring up trouble. We teach sobriety, and if a member doesn't behave he is disciplined, and if beyond redemption, he is expelled from the lodge, and must seek employment in some other line. The educative process is going on all the time and a more intelligent and better class of workmen is the result. Few railway officials realize what is saved in yards alone where the employes are taught to be careful and to protect property. I remember in times past men half drunk would be responsible for many accidents in which life and property were lost; to-day few wrecks occur from this fault, and the boys aim to make them few and far between. Thousands of dollars are annually tween. Thousands of dollars are annually saved to the roads in the way of repairs and saved to the roads in the way of repairs and heavy damage suits by men who are trained in organizations to be thoughtful, sober and industrious. Only recently a gailroad President said he couldn't see where these orders helped the roads. A switchman took the record of a certain yard on the road for six years, in three of which the men were not organized. With a lodge in force for three years the books showed a big saving in expense as the result of careful ness alone, and the President was convinced o its value.

Centralization Also Attained. "Through these organizations, also, the lines can deal with all their men at once. I remem-ber last year I went to see the Pennsylvania ber last year I went to see the Pennsylvania Company about more wages for the switchmen. The manager said it had been a great year for the road and he was willing to give the men a share. The advance was made without extra talk in 20 minutes. There is no reason why the Pennsylvania lines, with their heavy earnings and big surplus piling up, should not pay their employes good wages."

The Order of Switchmen now has 180 lodges, with an average of almost 100 members each. The work of organization is slow, and nothing is done in a hurry.

Fitzsimmons Will Try to Prevent the Exhi-

J Murphy at his home yesterday and found him so far recovered from the injuries inflicted by Fitzsimmons that he will be able to attend the inquest into the death of Detective Gilkinson at the Coroner's office this afternoon. The detec tives will produce some new points of evidence at the inquest which they refuse to divulge until that time. The contents of the old house where Gilkinson was murdered was sold out or Saturday and yielded $150, which goes to Fitzsimmons and his wife. The price was considered high for the stuff, but the bidding was stimulated by the presence of a representative of Harry Davis' Museum, who purchased all the contents of the room where the murder was done, with which Mr. Davis will reproduce the room as an exhibition at the museum, as was stated in yesterday's DISPATCH.

Davis had previously offered to buy the furniture from Fitzsimmons' lawyer, but the murderer and his wife objected, saving the exhibition of the articles would tend to keep the public interest in the murder stirred up and the sentiment against them, whereas they wanted the matter kept as quiet as possible, in the hope that it would partiy die out in the public mind. Fitzsimmons' opposition was so emphatic that he has instructed his attorney to get out an injunction against Davis, to prevent his use of the furniture for exhibition purposes, but it is not thought likely that the courts would grant such an injunction. Saturday and yielded $150, which goes to Fitz-
