A HOUSEWIFE'S WASH

Causes a Disastrous Fire, Entailing a Loss of $14,000,000.

IT WILL BE RUNG OUT AT NOON.

Morris Mead Will Sound 1-8-4-5 on the Big City Hall Bell.

THE ECHO OF A GREAT CALAMITY

At 12 minutes after noon to-day the big belt in the City Hall tower will boom out 1-8-4-5-just 46 years to the minute from the time the historic fire of 1845 started at the southeast corner of Second and Ferry streets,

Morris Mead, Superintendent of the Bustrike a sing that would delay them in their mer of the big bell in motion by means of his new fire alarm apparatus, which has just been finished. Superintendent Mead will sit in his eyrie, with his fingers on the key, counting the seconds and looking down upon a scene of wealth and industry that the Pittsburger of '45 would have never dreamed of, even under the inspiring influence of hasheesh or mellow Monongahela rye whisky. Forty-six years ago a procession of coal carts coming from and returning to the mines at Minersville gave a gloomy animation to the scene, which was framed with low frame buildings and lumber yards. reau of Electricity, will set the heavy hamlow traine buildings and lumber vards. To-day the carts are replaced by cable cars, electric cars, and other modern means of comotion, while mammoth business blocks have risen on the sites of the old shanties.

The District Destroyed by Fire.

Indicated by the dark portion of map l. apprised of the magnitude of the conflagration by the heavy volumes of smoke which clouded the sun and set the birds guessing as to plaintiffs yesterday in the suit of Fryer & Mc-Millen against W. S. Reed, an action on an acmainspring of the planets had broken, allowing the colostial apparatus to roug down. Mr. Frice, with many of his neighbors, came to the city, and were joined on the roads by mindreds. The country people poured into rows from every direction, and many of them lent much-needed assistance in rescuing property and fighting the flames.

The origin of the fire was due primarily to be strong instinct for cleanliness which inflames the Pittsburg housekeeper and renders her hame a synonym throughout the world for all the housewifely virtues. Colonel William Disall owned a row of frame buildings on the fourthest corner of Second and Ferry strents, Mrs. Scanlon, one of his tenants, had been unable to perform her weekly wash on Monday ble to perform her weekly wash on Monday wing to the inclement weather, and had put it off from day to day until Thursday, April 10, 845. She could stand the strain no longer, and a the weather was clear and the wind, while trong, was of a good drying quality, the house-sife determined to wash right then and there.

The Result of a Late Wash. frs. Scaulon built a nice little bonfire in the nekyard and put her wash kettle on to boil while she went into the house to eat dinner and herve herself for the conflict with her archnemy-Dirt. The wind was in sportive mood that day, and thinking to have a little fun with es brother element, fire, carelessly tossed the fishing embers hither and thither. One of these firebrands was carried outo the roof of an lechouse on Ferry street. The fiames enviceed this building and Colonel Dichl's tenement, then crossed Second street and shallowed up Colonel James Woods' cotton factory. The Third Presbyterian Church, at the corner of Ferry and Third streets, was seen in fiames, and here the firemen made a stubberg fight, bosing to stem the sea of firements.

The flames spread, overleaping all obstacles, The Banes spread, overleaping all obstacles, until they embraced a district bounded by Market Street, Grant street, Diamond street and the Menougahela river, and had extended clear out Pipetews, then outside the city and known as Kensington. It extended one mile from its starting point destroying more than 20 squares containing 1,100 dwellings. At 7 o'cinck in the evening the fire was ever, it had burned itself out.

Thousands Homeless and Penniless. As a result of the fire thousands were seeking shelter. Many had removed their posses-sions only to be burned in the streets or pilfered by a gang of miscreants who took advan-tage of the disaster which had overtaken their follow-beings. The remainder of the city and Allegheny was overrun by those who were two deaths were positively known to have the two deaths were positively known to have seen caused by the fire-Samuel Kingston, those remains were found in a cellar on Second treet, two doers from his own residence, and drs. #### MAKING UP THEIR LIST.

Last of the Hearings of City Retail Liquor Applicants-Judges Magee and White Conferring-Not Yet Known When List Will Be Ready

The last of the applicants for retail liquor licenses in Pittsburg, Allegheny and Mc-Keesport who failed to be heard in their turn were up before Judges Magee and White yesterday. It took just two hours to dispose of them. After this the Judges went into consultation on the subject of the applicants who are to have license during the coming year. The work of the Judges was undisturbed, owing to the fact that a tipstave was placed on duty at the door, with orders to allow nebody to enter. In answer to a query sent them, the Judges sent out word that they could not tell when the list would be ready to be handed down. It is thought, however, that the list will be ready by to-night, but there is no certainty of this, the Judges refusing to commit themselves on the question, as they couldn't tell just when they might strike a snag that would delay them in their

of Easy Street. Reginald Talbot, who figured as a real, ive English "Lord" in Pittsburg within the recollection of the younger portion of the population, is still in the land of the living. "Me Lud" is now-or was ten days agoin the gay city at the Golden Gate. While a party of Pittsburgers were taking a constitutional in San Francisco recently one of them suddenly exclaimed: "There's Talbot!" His companions turned as he broke away to renew acquaintance with Regy, only to see the fascinating young Englishman disappear up an alley, through a door or down a coal hole with

Hermann-like agility, Reginald was accompanied by a dapper-looking chap, evidently on the same lay as himself, He undoubtedly realized he had been sighted, as the sudden disappearance convinced the Pittsburgers that the recognition had been A day or two after this episode Reginald ap

A day or two after this episode Reginald appeared in the lobby of the Palace Hotel. The Pittsburgers were there. He who was first to recognize Lord Talbot on the street broke away and seen had a firm grip on My Lord's right arm. To the ejaculation of "Don't you know me, Taibot, old boy?" Reginald responded: "Of course I do. But I'm not Talbot now. Call me Lonsberry." Then confidences were exchanged while bottles were tilted in the seciusion of the Palace bar.

To cut the story short. Mr. Pittsburg, seeing that Reginald was well fed and well groomed, asked him if he was prepared to satisfy a long-standing account. Regy blead poverty, but said his companion was well fixed. As Pittsburg didn't know his chum, and had never done business with him on the Lord-like plan, this confession could not be utilized, and it was decided to let bygones be bygones. My Lord, under the influence of the musical glasses, grew confidential, and told his Pittsburg victim that when he quitted New York he went to England, thence to Australia and finally drifted to San Fraucisco. He calmly acknowledged that he was doing business in the same old way, and that things were coming easy.

The gentleman who imparted this information yesterday says Talbet looks like a four-time winner, and evidently has an easy conscience, a gourmet's palate and a millionaire's ways.
