

MAY WED ONCE MORE

Marie Nevins Blaine Taking Active Steps Toward Securing a Divorce.

YOUNG BLAINE IN SPAIN,

Not to Help Out in His Father's Plan for Reciprocity, but to Avoid a Summons.

SPECIAL DISPENSATION PROMISED.

Intimate Friends Couple the Name of Dr. William Tillingshast Bull With a New Marriage.

THE ELDER BLAINES WANT THE CHILD.

Evidence Furnished by Detectives Who Have Been Shadowing the Young Husband Revealed by the Wife.

SHE WILL TAKE RESIDENCE IN SOUTH DAKOTA

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.
NEW YORK, April 11.—Mrs. James G. Blaine, Jr., is about to take up her residence in South Dakota. She will reside there long enough to obtain an absolute divorce from her husband, the youngest son of President Harrison's Secretary of State. Mrs. Blaine has been contemplating taking this step for some time, but it has been carefully kept secret.

Jimmie Blaine, Jr.'s, sudden and secret departure for Europe a few weeks ago under the wing of Special Envoy John W. Foster was not altogether in the interest of reciprocity with Spain or of the diplomatic service. He left the country, so it is averred, to avoid the serving of divorce papers upon himself by his wife.

A Dramatic and Romantic Story.

The story of young Mrs. Blaine's marriage and subsequent desertion by her husband is full of dramatic interest. Her trials and tribulations have been most severe, but she has borne the ordeal bravely and shown herself to be possessed of more than ordinary pluck and endurance. Her youthful husband's part in the matter does not reflect credit upon his honor.

In the narrative which follows will be found a tinge of romance in the probable termination of the story by the marriage of Mrs. Blaine after she secures her divorce to the man who saved her life. The rumor that young Mrs. Blaine's divorce will be followed soon by her marriage to the most eminent professional men in the city has been current for some months, but the astonishing and interesting fact that among their friends this rumor has already become almost a conviction that the happy man is Dr. William Tillingshast Bull, to whose skill Mr. Blaine's cure is attributed, is now made public for the first time.

Dr. Laney Nicoll's Devoted Services.

The history of Mrs. Blaine's experiences with New York doctors and of the slow and agonizing ailment which came upon her after the still birth of her second child in this city, is remarkable. In spite of the mass of matter printed on the subject of her suffering and of their effect on her dramatic career, the truth about them and their causes and their results has not been made known.

She was treated by Dr. G. H. Wykoff, of East Sixteenth street, for what was said to be inflammatory rheumatism. She was soon afterward removed by her friends to the Perival apartment house on Forty-second street, near Broadway, the most active among them being DeLancy Nicoll, whom she consulted constantly, and through whose efforts in the main benefit was arranged for her at the Broadway Theater. Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, the eminent specialist in nervous diseases, was called to treat Mrs. Blaine while she was at the Perival apartment house, and afterward in order to give her more sedulous attention, and with the advice and consent of her friends, had her removed to his private hospital on Twenty-ninth street, near Madison avenue, where she was under his care for a considerable period.

A Sensational Scene Recalled.

Her health greatly improved at this time, as her surroundings at the Perival had not been exactly such as to promote the most rapid recovery, for it was while she was an invalid in that house that her husband, who had come over here from Washington with a distinguished member of his family, tried, while in an intoxicated condition, to force his way past the doorkeeper into her apartment without her consent.

The Episode at the Maine Home.

The young couple, with their babe, went home to Maine with the Blaine family. The elder Mrs. Blaine wanted her son Jimmie to live permanently in Augusta, make that his home and keep his family there, where her father offered him support and employment.

Life was made very unpleasant for young Mrs. Blaine at Augusta, and soon after her arrival she had a bitter personal quarrel with her mother-in-law.

Immediately afterward she was admitted to the Hospital of the Good Samaritan, represented by President Yeager and Vice President Butz, who made the deed of assignment to C. A. Morris, will revoke that, and the Columbia Iron and Steel Company will be on its feet again.

A Picture of the Gallant Doctor.

Dr. Bull was mentioned with special honor at the International Medical Congress in Berlin in 1890, and his professional standing is such as to command instant respect.

The suggestion, therefore, that in the case of Marie Nevins Blaine his services were to be rewarded by the hand of his fair patient, has caused intense interest. Dr. Bull is a man of about six feet in height, erect as a soldier, alert and lithe of figure, with a voice expressive of great resolution and firmness, a large striking gray eye, a drooping brown mustache, square forehead, straight nose and closely trimmed, wavy, iron-gray hair. His manners are an agreeable mingling of those of the man of the world and the physician hardened to the exhibition of human suffering.

Dr. Bull seemed much more annoyed than surprised when approached to-day. While declining to say anything for publication as to the professional relations between himself and Mrs. Blaine, when he question was put to him point blank, whether or not it is a fact that Mrs. Blaine's efforts to obtain a divorce from her husband are being made with the idea of contracting thereafter a matrimonial alliance with himself, Dr. Bull said earnestly:

Puts in a Square Denial.

"It seems to me if such a thing were true that I would naturally know something of it. There is no truth in it that I know of. I have not heard that Mrs. Blaine is trying to get a divorce for the purpose of marrying anybody."

The inference was perfectly legitimate from Dr. Bull's bearing under this question and others that the liveliest emotion excited by having them put to him was surprise that information on which to base them should be in the possession of any one except a few intimate friends. Mrs. Blaine had advised her that it would be impossible to procure a divorce under the laws of the State of New York without possessing the criminal evidence of young Blaine's unorthodoxness from the standpoint of morality. On this she had acted as a detective and placed them on young Blaine's track in Washington for weeks, with what results they are unwilling to disclose, as Mrs. Blaine herself finally said to them that for a divorce from the father of her children she would be unable to leave her crutches and to walk about as other people do. But it is a fact that the departure for Sioux Falls, S. Dak., which her legal advisers had concluded to recommend her to take, was postponed early last week for a day or two at least, because on Tuesday she was again unable to leave her bed for such a journey.

The Divorce and the Dispensation.

As young Mrs. Blaine is a Catholic, as all her family have been, and as the Catholic Church does not permit divorce among its members and is even known positively to prohibit them, wonder naturally arises, but Mrs. Blaine has been assured by Archbishop Corrigan, as well as by Bishop Watterson, of Columbus, O., that when her divorce has been secured a special dispensation will be forthcoming from the Cardinal Church validating it from the standpoint of law and ethics and recognizing her still as a faithful daughter of the Church.

From Bishop Watterson a special dispensation was made for young Blaine's departure for Europe.

Inquiries were made of Judge Hadley as to whether Mrs. Blaine, Jr., desired to have the divorce drawn so that she might remarry, but upon that topic the Blaines got no satisfaction, the Judge simply saying that so beautiful and accomplished a young woman, with so many admirers, might want to marry again.

In the selection of her counsel her friends showed great astuteness. Ex-Governor George Headley, of Ohio, now a resident of New York, has never so far as is known been associated with divorce proceedings but in two other cases. These were the suit brought by Mrs. Kate Chase Sprague against the young Governor of Rhode Island, and the proceeding between Edmund H. Pendleton, of Cincinnati, and his wife.

Why Hadley Accepted the Case.

As in the Nevins-Blaine case, Governor Hadley was in the other two, induced largely by personal considerations to take part as counsel. By an extraordinary coincidence "Handsome" Dick Nevins, of Columbus, O., is a son for the hand of Kate Chase, and Marie is his daughter. So the friendships of that famous suit brought ex-Governor Hadley into this.

Maries Blaine, who had been brought up in a convent, met James G. Blaine, Jr., at Bar Harbor, Me., where she was spending the summer, and fell in love with him.

It was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than 20, without any business or profession, living on an income given him by his father and living with him at Bar Harbor, the Blaine's summer home. The match was

presumably a love match, as it was completed by a secret marriage in New York in 1888.

Young Blaine, Jr., had been brought up by the wife of Judge Hadley, and was conducted through Stephen B. Elkins, that he was at that time, probably less than