Colonel Sam Dawson was sunning himself yesterday when he suddenly remarked, "A day like this always reminds me-" and then he reached out and nabbed a hand nl of the atmosphere. Satisfied was the same, that - lit he continued: "I was out in Beller Falls, N H., as manager of 'Laramie's Comiques e years ago when the show went broke, but had a number of bills that remained intact. The Yankees had about decided to square accounts by pounding me when a regular Hibernian show struck the town and I struck the manager, a close-fisted fellow, tor a job. His advance agent was on a spree, and he offered me the place at $10 a week.

"Anything was money, so I took it on condition that he left me money enough to pay the bills. I started out and made a number of dates, and then headed for Can-I wired back to him: 'Going to Canada; will smuggle you paper for $100; duty is $300.' He at once answered: 'That is part of agent's duties.' I answered: 'Not at $10 per,' and he put up the money. I booked his show there, and was able to get back to New York on the strength of the hundred.

TENNYSON AND THE VIOLET.

He Fell Down on His Knees on Finding the First of a Season.

It is related that while Tennyson was walking with a friend one evening in the early spring he suddenly dropped on his eral John A. Wiley. knees and began to sniff the ground. The friend stood by and watched him in astonishment. In a moment Tennyson exclaimed without looking up, "Down, man, down on your knees! It's a wiolet."

It was, indeed, the first violet of the early English spring, and the poet's demonstration over its discovery was to him the most natural thing in the world. In his view if was the reawatening of nature-the first fragrant signal that old earth was rousing herself from her winter's sleep. The story goes on to say that the friend, who, it ma be stated, was not of so great a poetica nature as Tennyson, fell rather reluctantly on his knees beside the poet and consented to join in the sniffing of the violet's perfume.

A Regular Walk-Over IN HATS ON MONDAY.

On Monday morning, at 9 o'clock, we shall place on sale 100 cases of New Style Spring Derbys at a price never L before equaled by any store in town.

They come in both round and square crown, and in black, brown, nutria, golden brown and oak.

The regular price of this quality is $2 50, but in order to boom our hat business we make this splendid offer. This will be the hat event in Pittsburg this season, and should be taken advantage of by everybody who has not yet provided himself with a new hat, but means to do so. It will be just one dollar in your pocket to buy on Monday, which is the ONLY DAY that we shall sell these goods at this price. We can save you money on hats at any time, but here's something extra.

Don't come on Tuesday and ask to see them, The price will then be $2 50.
