self in a grossly thoughtless act is always "I am all rightwhere, thank you," returned the swagmen, mildly. "The sand is as soft as the blankets."

"Well, I don't want to monopolise your blankets, you know," said Deverell, without moving. "Take a fill from my pouch, will you?"

He tossed over his pouch of tobacco. The awagman handed it back-he did not smoke; had got out of the way of it, he said. Dev-erell was disappointed. He had a genuine desire at all times to repay in kind anything resembling a good turn. He could not help being a little selfish; it was consti-"I'll tell you what " said Deverell, leaning backward on one elbow and again clouding the stars with wreaths of blue smoke, "I've got a little berth that ought to suit you down to the ground. It's rabbiting, Done any rabbiting before? No. Well, it's easy enough; what's more, you're your own boss. Catch as many as you can or care to, bring in the skins, and get sixpence each for em. Now the berth I mean is a boxclump, close to a tank, where there's been a camp before, and the last man did very sir; but I couldn't resist just seeing, first well there; still, you'll find he has left all, if it would cut you up very badly!" plenty of rabbits behind him. It's the very spot for you; and, look here, I'll start you with rations, tent, camp-oven, traps, and all the rest of it!" wound up Deverell, generously. He had spoken out of the fullness of his soul and body. He had seldom spoken so decently to a pound-a-week hand -never to a swagman. Yet the swagman did not jump at the

"The deuce you did!" said Deverell.

The old man was watching him keenly.

In an instant Deverell had flushed up from his collar to his wideawake. He was manifestly uncomfortable. "Where did you up know him?" he asked doggedly.

The tramp bared his head; the short gray hair stood crisply on end all over it. He tapped his head significantly, and ran the palm of his hand over the strong bristles of his beard.

"So," said Deverell, drawing his breath ard. "Now I see; you are a brother con-The tramp nodded. "And you know all about him-the whole

The tramp nodded again.
"By God!" cried Deverell, "if you're here to trade on what you know, you've chosen the wrong place and the

The tramp smiled. "I have not come to trade upon what I know," said be quietly, repeating the other's expression with simple "Now that I've seen you, I can go back the way I came; no need to go on to Dandong now. I came because my old mate asked me to find you out and wish you well from him; that was all."

"He went in for life," said Deverell, reflecting bitterly. "I have the vaguest memories of him; it happened when I was so very young. Is he well?"

"He was."
"And you have been in jail together!
And you know what brought him there, the whole story!" Curiosity crept into the young man's tone, and made it less bitter. He niled a pipe. "For my part, I never had the rights of that story," he said. "There were no rights," said the convict "It was all robbed the bank of which he himself was manager. He had lost money in mining speculations. He took to the bush, and tought desperately for his life." "I'm glad he did that!" exclaimed Dev-

The other's eyes kindled, but he only said: "It was what anyone would have done "Is it?" answered Deverell scornfully.

"Did you, for instance?" The old man shrugged his shoulders. Deverell laughed aloud. His father might have been a villain, but he had not been a coward. That was one consolation.

A silence fell between the two men. There were no more flames from the fire, but only the glow of red-hot embers. This reddened the face of Deverell, but it did not reach that of the old man. He was thus free to stare at Deverel as hard and as long as he filted, and his eyes never left the young man's face. It was a sufficiently hands me face, with eyes as dark as those of the old man, only lightened and bright-ened by an expression altogether different. Deverell's pipe had soothed him. He seemed as serene now as he had been before he knew that his companion had been also the companion of his father-in prison. After all, he had grown up with the knowledge that his father was a convicted felon; to be reminded of it easually, but also privately, could not would him very deeply. The tramp, staring at him with a fierce yearning in his eyes, which the young man could not see, seemed to divine this, but "It cannot be pleasant for you to see me.

I wouldn't have come, only I promised to see you; I promised to let him hear about you. It would have been worse, you know, had he got out on ticket-of-leave, and come himself!"

"It would so!" exclaimed Deverell, sincerely.

In the dark, the old man grinned like one

'It would so," Deverell repeated, unable to repress a gram chuckle. "It would be the most awkward thing that could possibly happen to me—especially if it happened now. At present I call myself the luckiest man in the colony; but it my poor father were to turn up-

Deverell was not interrupted; he stopped

"You are pretty sate," said his com-panion, in an odd tone—which he quickly changed. "As your lather's mate, I am glad you are so lucky; it is good hearing." Deverell explained how he was so lucky. He telt that the sentiments he had expressed concerning his father's possible appearance on the scene required some explanation, if not excuse. This feeling, growing upon him as he spoke, led him into explanations that were very full indeed, under the circumstances. He explained the position he had attained as manager of Dandone; and the position he was about to attain through his marriage was quite as clearly-though unintentionally—indicated. It was made clear to the meanest perception how very awkward it would be for the young man, from every point of view, if the young man's father did turn up and ostentatiously reveal himself. While Deverell was speaking the swagman broke branches from the nearest pines and made up the fire; when he finished the faces of both were once more illumined; and that of the old man was stern with resolve, "And yet," said he, "suppose the im-possible, or at any rate the unlikely-say that he does come back. I know him well he wouldn't be a drag or a burden to you. He'd only just like to see you. All he would ask would be to see his son sometimes! That would be enough for him, I was his chum, mind you, so I know. And if he was to come up here, as I have come, you could take him on, couldn't you, as you offer to take me? He bent forward with work, as your father! No one would ever guess!"

"No!" said Deverell, decidedly. "I'll breath.

"But it would be devilish awkward!" h added frankly. "People would remember what they've been good enough to forget; and everybody would know what now next to none know. In this country, thank God, the man is taken for what the man is worth—his father neither helps nor hinders worth—his father neither helps nor hinders him, when once he's gone. So I've managed to take my own part, and to get on well, thanks to my own luck. Yes, it would be devilish awkward; but I stand by him, before Heaven, I would!"

The old man breathed hard.

"I don't know how I've come to say so much to you, though you did know my father," added Deverell, with a sudden change of tone. "It isn't my way at all. I needn't tell you that from to-morrow for-ward you're the same as any other man to me. And if you ever go to see my father, you must got tell him all I have said to you about what, as you say, is never likely to happen. But you may tell him—you may tell him I am glad he was taken fight-

The old man was once more quite calm "I shall never see your father again. No more will you," he said slowly and solemnly; "for your father is dead! I promised him to find you out when my time was up, and to tell you. I have taken my own way of breaking the news to you. Forgive me, Deverell did not notice the quiet bitter-ness of the last words. He smoked his pipe out in silence. Then he said: "God rest him! Perhaps it's for the best. As for you, you've a billet at Dandong for the rest of your days, if you like to take and keep it. Let be turn in

The worn moon rose very late, and skimmed behind the pines, byt never rose clear of them, and was down before dawn. It shone faintly upon the two men lying side by side, packed up each in a blanket—Deverell in the better one. From the other blanket a hand would steal out from time to time, group tremulously over Deverell's back, lie a minute, and then be gently with-drawn. Long before dawn, however, the mun noiselessly arose and rolled up his swag. He packed up everything that he had brought—everything except the better blanket. Overthat he smiled, as though it was an intense pleasure to him to leave it behind, lapped round the unconscious form of Deverell, Just before going, when the swag was on his back, he stooped down once and put his face very close to that of Deverell. The worn moon glimmered through the pines upon them both. The faces were strangely alike, only Deverell's was smiling sweetly in his dreams, while the other's shone moist with-Something.

A few minutes later the gates in the Dandong boundary-fence closed for the last time upon the jail-bird tramp, and Deverell's father was dead indeed—to Deverell. Lucky for Deverell, of course. He Confesses and Signs His Real Name for the First Time Since February. CINCINNATI, May 1.—Dr. R. C. Good-wyn, alias E. C. Hoston, was arrested yes-terday by two private detectives. They had suspected the man and had followed him to a railroad office and were outside watching. a railroad office and were outside watching him, when he reached up to adjust a wipdow hanging and thus exposed his tattooed wrist. arrest, but when he was taken to the office of the detectives he confessed that he was the man they were seeking.

The request to look out for him came April 27, from A. M. Brownell, Richmond, Va. The charge against him is forging a check on J. P. Rickman, of Hendersonville, N. C., which was cashed by the State Bank of Commerce at that place. Dr. Goodwyn is an Englishman, 25 years old, of tine appearance and well educated. His bogus checks were discovered in February last, and he fied, being traced to many points, from which it is inferred that he must have obtained several thousand dollars in this way. He admitted the Rickman forgery, and said in explanation that his allowance from England had been cut off by his mother when she heard of his marriage to a Miss when she heard of his marriage to a Miss Babcock, of Syracuse, N. Y. In signing his name to an agreement to waive a requisition, he wrote Royston C. H. Goodwyn, and said that was the first time he had signed his right name since February 14.

ORGANIZED ONCE MORE

Tin Plate Men Prepared to Fight a Reduction of the Duty.

At a meeting in New York last Wednesday the tin plate association to see that the duty is maintained was reorganized. P. H. Laufman and W. C. Cronemeyer were the local representatives, while 12 large firms from all parts of the country are members. Another meeting will be held here May 11 to complete the organization. Mr. Crone-meyer said works are being put up that will produce 60,000 tons of plate per

The object of the old association was to raise the tariff, and as soon as this was ne-complished it was practically disbanded. Some of the local officers have not yet been paid, but they are expecting a settlement of their salaries every day. The threats of the Democrats to reduce the duty has fright-ened the tin plate men, and the new association was formed to watch their interests in Congress. The headquarters will probably be in Pittsburg.

A visit was also made to the nearly completed new station in the Fourteenth ward, on Forbes street. It was expected the building would be occupied by the first of June, but there was not a man employed on it yesterday, and the date of completion will be delayed by the carpenters' strike. Mr. Brown says when finished this will be the finest station in the city.

OIL IN THE FAR WEST

Preparations Are Made to Open the New Petroleum El Dorado.

NEW POOL UP THE ALLEGHENY.

West Virginia Fields. NEWS PROM THE VARIOUS CENTERS

PATRICIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATORS OMAHA, May 1 .- The Wyoming oil fields are the subject of much talk again. Preparations are being made to drill several wells this spring at various points distant from past developments. All these are projected by experienced operators from Pennsylvania and Onio, many of whom have great faith in Wyoming's future. There is no doubt the whole territory will be thoroughly prospected and tested before a new source of supply is needed for the world's markets.

The present Eastern situation of low prices, production materially in excess of consumption, with no considerable part of the Ohio product marketed for illuminating purposes, renders the immediate future of Wyoming misty. Still those who are inerested keep good heart.

Mr. Lovett, of the firm of Murphy & Lovett, of this city, prominently identified with the Wyoming oil industry, in an inter-view said the field in general was located about Casper, near the center of the State, and continued:

Everything is on the standstill just at present, but there are enough schemes on foot to insure a big boom for that region during the coming summer. A large number of companies are already on the ground and we anticipate a number of others. The depth of the wells ranges from 100 to 3,000 feet, according to the location. The sand is usually of a good quality, whether oil is found in paying quantities or not. All grades of oil, from the light amber to the heavy jubricating fluid, are found here. A number of good wells have been struck, some producing as high as 600 barrels in a day. One thing about this field, the wells all present the best of staying qualities. This can be accounted for from the fact that the territory is not crowded like a great many places in the Pennsvivania field.

There has been no territory leased as yet. All the wells are located on Government land under the "mining act," and thus far bonuses and royalties are unknown. There may come a time when this will be necessary in order to secure a lease, but it will be some time yet. The field is new and is not attracting very much attention. However, the time is coming when it will be worth looking after.

much attention. However, the time is coming when it will be worth looking after. Mr. Lovett has a number of samples of the oil in his office, and an examination would convince the most skeptical that it is the genuine article.

Leases Go Begging Again.

ROBINS RUN, W. VA.—The Robins Run district is located one mile and a halt southwest from the Eureka pool. When the first well was struck here the natives became excited and demanded $300 an acre bonus for territory. Since then they have greatly changed their minds, and now leases go begging. The pool has turned out a sad disappointment to those interested, and considerable money has been lost.

George Hammatt & Boyle drilled the first well here on the Sheets farm, which has a credited production of ten barrels a day. Hannan & Co. completed their No. 1 on the Cochran farm, which is only doing five barrels a day. Huggins & Co., have just completed a duster on the S. S. Sheets farm, while Berry & Hannan's No. 1. on the William Sheets property, is producing 30 barrels a day.

On the Dr. Bartlett farm unknown parties are drilling a well, and Barnsdall & Moore are drilling another on the same farm. There is a rig up on the S. S. Sheets farm ready for the drill. W. G. Sheets has a well far enough in the sand at Horse Neck to indisents a sorry sight compared with the ani mating scenes when things were booming Excitement and speculation have been sup planted by lethargy and some of the high rollers of only a few days ago are now wearing long faces and hunting for a hole to get

Conflicting Reports of a Wildwood Well. WILDWOOD-The Peebles No. 2 is from 15 to 20 feet in the sand and has made only a three-inch flow since the pay was struck. Good No. 2 is making less than 200 barrels a day. Alston No. 4 is 18 feet in the sand, and made one two-inch flow this meroing. It looks like a very light producer. Campbell

No. 2 found the sand this morning. Reports concerning the Jenny well are various and conflicting. It is reported in the sand all the way from 3 to 15 feet, with no oil in the hole. It was the principal subject of conversation in oil circles tonight, and the consensus of opinion is that the well is for enough in the sand to indicate that it will not exert any material influence on the market.

Parks Bros.' well on the Haucock farm, will make a small producer. Gibson & Giles, on the Scott property, are 80 feet below the fourth sand with no change.

Activity at a New Pool. CLIFF MINES-Seven miles southwest of Coraopolis, on the Montour Railroad, and between the McCurdy and Moon pools, are the Cliff Mines developments. At present there is considerable activity and the outthere is considerable activity and the outlook is favorable for quite a pool of ordinary producing wells. Fisher Oil Company No. 3 Stewart is holding up at 175 barrels a day. The company is now drilling Nos. 4 and 5 and have Nos. 6 and 7 rigs up on the same property. The Jeffrey Oil Company have completed a fair well on the Jeffrey farm, and have No. 2 rig finished. The same company is rigging to-day on the El. same company is rigging to-day on the El-liott farm. Andrews is building a rig on the Marshall lot, and Mechlin & Koontz are building one on the Jeffrey property.

Striking Out on a New Lead. VERONA-The Equitable Gas Company is verona—Inc Equitable Gas Company is a drilling an experimental well 2½ miles almost due east of Verona station, on the Allegheny Valley Railroad, on the Mc-Gregor farm, about 1,500 feet northeast of the Philadelphia Gas Company's well on the Stoner farm. The company is hunting for either oil or gas, but is sanguine of finding paying oil here. It is least a technique as the company is oil here. ing paying oil here. It is lured into this conclusion by the fact that the oil was found in the Stoner well, and by locating as they have hope to strike it rich.

Three Dry Roles in One Day. CORAOPOLIS—Three dry holes in the Coraopolis pool yesterday have somewhat detracted from the high reputation this field has attained. Two of these are credited to the Forest Oil Company—No. 1 Burns, 700 feet west of McKown No. 3, and the other No. 2 McClinton, in which, while they found a little oil, is as good as dry. The third duster belongs to Black & Emerson and is on the Jolly.

The Gauge of McCurdy Production McCurdy-Sill, O'Dell & Co.'s No. 1 Adams, according to the gauge for the past 24 hours, is doing 380 barrels a day; the Fisher Oil Company's No. 1 Riddle, 380 barrels; McCurdy No. 6, 360 barrels, and old McCurdy No. 1, 60 barrels. No wells will be due here before the middle of next week. At the other wells there is no change

A Reported Bridgeville Producer.

BRIDGEVILLE—It was reported last night that Robins, Graham & Co. brought in their well on the Alexander farm, and that the venture was good for 60 barrels a day. Owing to the late hour the news was received it was impossible to verify the rumor.

LIFT WITH THE JURY.

A Decision Expected To-Day in the Damag Suit Against McKnight.

The case of Mrs. Caroline Davies vs. Felix McKnight and others was closed yes-Felix McKnight and others was closed yesterday and the jury is still out. Judge Ewing delivered the charge in the morning, and reviewed at length the different phases of the case. He said, among other things, that the first and most essential point was for the jury to decide whether the death of Robert Davies was caused by the use of liquors; if not, the verdict should be for the defendant. The immediate cause of Davies' death, Judge Ewing said, approximately was pneumonia, and the jury was to determine, whether it was caused by Davies' falling in a ditch on a rainy night, October Leases Go Begging Now in Some of the falling in a ditch on a rainy night, October 25, and as to whether this fall was due to intoxication, which the evidence seemed establish.

The next question was whether Davies was a man of intemperate habits, and if this was determined then the jury was to find who sold the liquor to him October 25, 1889, and if the person who sold it knew Davies to be an intemperate man.

He afterward induced plaintiff to cancel the lease, representing that the house had been condemned by the Building Inspector, and leased it to another person at a higher rent.

JOHN THERNEY yesterday entered suit against James Roney for $3,000 damages for the death of his 13-year-old son. It was stated that on April 1 the boy was playing on the hillside above Twenty-ninth street: Roney in a negtigent and carless manner fired off a revolver, and the hall struck the lad in the kuee. He died April 10 at the Homeopathic Hospital from the effects of the wound.

THE suit of Z. Scott against J. P. Hender-THE snit of Z. Scott against J. P. Henderson and others, is on trial before Judge Ewing. The defendants are members of the School Board of Elizabeth township. The case is an action for damages for alleged libel, consisting of a resolution passed by the school board declaring that Scott, who was also a member of the board, was no longer entitled to their respect and confidence because he refused to allow the schoolhouse to be used for religious services.

LIKE HOUSEHOLD WORDS

Everywhere you go you are reasonably sure to see or hear something about Hood's Sarsa-parilla. No medicine ever placed before the public has won such popularity or been so much talked about and praised. All over the country, Hood's Sarsaparilla, Peculiar to Itself, 100 Doses One Dollar, are like household words. Hood's Sarsaparilla has won un-limited praise by its power in mak-ing scrofulous and impure blood rich and burning of solt rheum, in the satisfaction at meals experienced by the former dyspeptic, in the happiness of those it has cured of malaria and catarrh, in buoyancy of spirits and good appetite it has imparted to those recently weak, tired and run down.

Possessing just the building-up, blood-purify-ing qualities desired at this season, it is

SPRING MEDICINE

"Bath, Maine, April 11, 1891.
"I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla in my fam-ily for several years as a spring medicine and general purifier, and have always found it re-liable. Where a tonic and strengthener is needed I can safely recommend it to any one." W. M.
