AGAIN SHOWN

That Our Treatment Is Emi-

Mr. James White, Thirty-ninth Street Penn Avenue, Pittsburg.

Mr. James White, a fireman at the chain works of James McCoy, residing on Penn avenue, near Thirty-ninth street, said:

"For a year I have been a constant sufferer. My head pained me terribly. My eyes were weak and watery: oftentimes I could scarcely see. My nose was continually stopped up. There were roaring and buzzing noises in my ears. The mucus constantly dropped into my throat and I was always hawking and spitting. My throat became raw and sore. I had both threat and I was always hawking and spitting. My throat became raw and sore. I had both sharp and dull pains in the chest, and my limbs pained me. I suffered from palpitation of the heart. My stomach was affected and I never had an appetite. I was subject to a dizzy feeling upon rising after stooping. Scarcely slept at night and always feit tired in the morning. In fact, I never felt well for a day.

"Now, for the benefit of those who suffer from catarrhal troubles, I truly recommend Drs. Copeland & Biair's treatment. I feel better to-day than I have for years, and the credit belongs to their treatment."

CHRISTIE WINS THE CHAMPIONSHIP.

On defeating Jordan, and after a short interval, Christie, of Sunderland, faced Beattie, of Liverpool, and opened with the routine 11-15. Beattie tried to form the "White Dyke," but was prevented by his opponent, who cut 15-18. An interesting and cistical game ensued, in which the Sunderland man had the advantage, but Beattie played carefully, and drew, as the saying is, by the skin of his teeth, Christie next tried the "Single Corner" against Beattie, and wont on the same line as he played against Jordan the preceding evening. Beattle, however, varied, and an interesting display of draughts strategy resulted, in which tran after trap was evaded by each. After two hours play, the game was abandoned as drawn. This finished play for the day.

Resumlog on Friday Christie again formed "The Dyke" against Beattie, who tried his favorite move (22-17) with white. The first named early secured an advantage in position, and this he so improved as the play went on that he latterly forced a man from his opponent, who thereupon resigned. The second game, in which Christie formed the "Single Corner." was the finest example of draughts play in the tournament, and was won by the Sunderland expert after a solendid game, in which Beattie tried every maneuver to draw. A third game played in the evening having resulted in a draw, Christie won the tie with the score—Christie, 2: Beattle, 0; drawn, 3. The winner played finely all through the tournament, is which he won eight games, lost one, to Horsfall, and drew 19. The following tabular statement shows the pairing and result of each round in the English Draughts Championship Tournament: ADDITIONAL EVIDENCE BY MAIL

Some of the Topics to Be Discussed in the Pittsburg and

ALLEGHENY PULPITS ON SUNDAY. The Doctrine of Eternal Torment Not

Preached as of Old. GLEANINGS FROM CHURCH PIELDS

The resignation of a leading Baptist clergyman on the ground that he no longer believed in the doctrine of eternal punishment is the leading religious event of the week. A generation ago this doctrine was much more preached than it is now. There was a time in the memory of the writer when ministers dwelt much more on the idea of future endless punishment than they do to-day. The terrors of the law are certainly not held forth in the pulpit in these times as in the days of our fathers. Has the old faith in eternal torment been shaken? Certainly, the idea of physical torture has passed away. Few intelligent Christians accept the idea of a literal lake of fire where the lost are "burning continually and unconsumed."

Presbyterian Ministers' Association, Monday, quiz day, The following questions will be considered, viz : To what extent is Bibliolatry practiced in the Presbyterian Church? Was it wise in the faculty of Union Theological Seminary to expel John McComb? What is your estimate of the late Dr. Howard Crosby as a theologian, as a preacher and as a man? Does the Confession of Faith teach the verbal inspiration of the Scriptures? Is the inerrancy of the original text of the Scriptures a tenable theory?

The closing exercises of the Western Theological Seminary will take placeduring the coming week. On Sabbath evening, May 3, Rev. R. B. Ewing, D. Eighth—Agitation of Various Subjects—One of the most important functions of the club would be that of arousing the local public to an interest in one topic after another that needs agitation. Thus the growing question might in a given city deserve consideration; and a young men's club, through public meetings, newspaper articles and other means, might collect and distribute information, form an active public sentiment and accomplish an important reform. The clubs would serve an especially valuable purpose it by correspondence with one another and by the collection of decoments and facts they could be prepared always to tell their own immediate communities how various things are done in other places.

NOTES.

(a) Salvioli prefers B B 4, but considers the text move an excellent defense. It was frequently adopted by Zukertort. After examining a number of games in which it occurs we have come to the couclusion that the strongest argament in its favor is that it is the present fashion to play it; for, as Zukertort remarks, chess openings are, like everything else, governed by the tyraunical law of fashion.

(b) Given by Schmidt in his analysis in the Schachzeitung of 1805, p. 2, who was the first to analyze black's fourth move, it was invariably played by L. Paulsen according to Zukertort. The position resulting from it leads to early complications.

(c) B K K t 5, given by Schmidt, is not good. See "Chess Openings," p. 59, col. 35.

(d) Best according to Salvioli. B Q 3 gives black the better game.

(e) Zukertort, in his notes on a game played in the Vienna tournament of 1822 between L. Paulsen and himself, remarks that the issue of this venture should not be favorable to black, who selected it chiefly for the sake of getting out of the routine track of a variation familiar to his opponent and novel to himself. We find it repeated in later games, and for the reason, most likely, that Zukertort played it with success.

(g) Mr. Blackburne makes the strange remark that 11 Q Q 3 was entirely new to him, and that unacquanted with it he took off the pawn only to discover that he had fallen into a well conceived trap. Tschigorin, in the game first mentioned, fell into the same trap, but he was 40 minutes late and had to make 15 moves in 20 minutes. in 20 minutes.

THE WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP DISPUTE.

CHICAGO, I.L... APPILTA. 1881.

DRAUGHTS ÉDITOR TURF-I wish it distinctly understood I am wilting and ready to detend my title, "Champion of the World," against all challenges, whether it be wyille, Barker or Freeman II Freeman does not care to play for the title, I will play him two matches of 30 restricted games each, for $450 to $500 aside, the first match to be played at Chicago and the second at Providence, Yours respectfully.

Checker Champion of the World. The above was published in the Turf of April 24, and all who are familiar with the whole circumstances, know that Reed has no claim to the world's championship, and Mr. Dunlap, draughtseditor of the Turf, has handed over to Reed and his backers Mr. Wyllie's Danlap, draughtseditor of the Tur, has handed over to Reed and his backers Mr. Wyllie's money that was in his possession, without any just grounds. Taking the facts as they have appeared in the Tur, of both sides, no sporting authority would acknowledge the action of Mr. Dunlap as just, and if Mr. Wyllie was in this country he would have no difficulty in collecting his money from the stakeholder. Mr. Dunlap has shown a lack of knowledge of the first principles governing all sports, etc., and the whole is a piece of the sharpest practice that was ever done in connection with the game of draughts.

We placed Reed far above desiring the world's channtonship in any such contemptible way. If he had won it, as did the late lamented Robert D. Yates by defeating Wyllie, THE DISPATCH would have been the first to give him the place of honor—as we have done in the American championship, however much others may harp about Freeman.

But Reed's assumption to the title of world's championship in the way just described will not be recognized by mine-tenths of the checker players of this country. The latest from Wyllie, given below, shows he is still in Australia; and as the articles with Reed gave no dates when the match was to take place, the only thing definite in the articles as to date, was that the match would take place 60 days after his arrival in America. These are the facts given by Mr. Dunlap had acknowledged by Mr. Hefter; on the ground of their own statements, they have no claims to the title nor forfeit, and it will not surprise us if Mr. Dunlap has to give back Mr. Wyllie his money, and we fear he will have to do it out of his own pocket. Mr. Wyllie is not one that either Chicago or Mr. Dunlap can triffe with, and we wait to hear from the old man, and until he is defeated by play. THE DISPATCH holds that James Wyllie is champion draughts player of the world. Seersucker Coats and Vests.

CHECKER GOSSIP.

The Herd Laddie.—The "Herd Laddie," upon arriving in Sydney from the South Coast, received a letter from the Secretary of the Brisbane Chess and Draughts Club inquiring upon what terms he would pay them a visit (before he sailed on route for America) to play another friendly match with Mr. Marr, who was anxious to "cross swords" once more with the world's champion checkerist. Mr. Wylle has replied and awaits an answer. While at Bega he played 58 public games, the whole of which he won, with the exception of one that was drawn by Mr. Thomas James Fitzpatrick, the "Single Corner." The manner in which it was played stamps Mr. Fitzpatrick as a first class player.

The Sixth ward experts called at head-quarters, 30 Seventh avenue, but could do nothing with the players who congregate there.

Through our correspondent, Mr. W. H. H. Stuart, we learn that the checker and chess players of Washington, Pi., have formed a club of 30 members, and have engaged suitable rooms, and the two great games are gathering devotees every day. We wish the new club every success.

Party Politics Should Not Enter Into Municipal Government. THEY HAVE NO PLACE THERE.

The Duties Devolving on Young Men in All Local Elections. MUCH WILL DEPEND ON UNITED ACTION

IWRITTEN FOR THE DISPATCH.) So astoundingly are our cities growing that the date is near when an actual majority of our young voters will enter upon the responsibilities of American citizenship in populous municipalities. And if they should find it somewhat difficult to discover strong and clear differences of principle and policy between great national parties, they can hardly fail to discover that vital questions, almost innumerable, affect the welfare of their own immediate community. For 20 years to come our cities are destined tion and public improvement such as the city. more progressive cities of Europe, most of which are from 10 to 25 years in advance of ours, have been wifnessing since 1870. I write this brief paper for the purpose of urging young voters to give their earnest attention to the wealth of topics and issues that lie at their very door. The city government touches the citizen at the most vital points. It controls the education of children; it has much to do with the morals of the community; it can do tenfold more than all the doctors for the general health sanitary conditions.

It may vastly promote the intelligence, happiness and comfort of the people through the maintenance of libraries, galleries, parks, playgrounds, public baths and other modern municipal adjuncts. It expends the bulk of all the money that citizens pay for taxes. Bad City Government.

We Americans succeed very well, upon the whole, in managing our national, State and county governments. But thus far we are notoriously unsuccessful in managing our cities. And yet there is nothing mys-terious or impossible in good city govern-ment. Diligence, intelligence and deter-mination can overcome the worst evils that now prevail. Young citizens will find no other class of topics half so interesting, and in no other directions can they make them-

I would recommend the formation every where of young men's municipal clubs, (1) for the study of municipal questions in general, (2) for the study of local conditions and the actual problems of the particular locality, and (3) for practical work in municipal reform. These clubs should be absolutely non-partisan. Party politics and municipal government should never be mixed up. Parties have their legitimate place and work and work and respectively. place and work, and young citizens may well enlist in one or another; but the gov-erning machinery of a city should never be

The Mistake of Politics. One of our most serious mistakes in this country has been the treatment of municipalities as if they were political sub-divisions, and of their government as if it should be modeled upon the form of that of a State or nation. The analogy is mis-chievous. The municipality is a corporation, existing for a variety of purposes peculiar to the massing of populations together under urban conditions. The proper fulfillment of these objects can have so more relation to the distinctions between Republicans and Democrats than can the management of a savings bank or any other in the hands of a political party.

to do everywhere. Separation of Elections .- It will be the study of the club in those States or in-dividual cities where municipal elections occur in the autumn, on or near the date of the general election, to insist upon a separa-tion. Municipal issues cannot have proper treatment in connection with a political election. City elections should occur in the objection to the separation.

Second—Residence and Registration.—It is of the highest importance that the body of municipal voters should be tolerably permanent and always distinctly identified very brief residence in a given city should not disqualify any American citizen from voting at a general election.

The Australian System. But obviously no man except an established resident should be allowed to help regulate the affairs of the municipal corporation. The distinction is generally ig-nored; but it ought not to be. Residence of a year or more, and a careful registration system should be required for municipal elections.

Third-Australian System and Nomina-Third—Australian System and Nominations—In the general elections the Australian system is chiefly important because of its provision for absolutely secret voting. But in municipal elections it is important chiefly because it provides a plan for making nominations that relieves good citizens from the tyranny of party machines. In England half a dozsen citizens of a ward may join in indorsing a fellow-citizen as a candidate for the municipal council, and his name accordingly goes on the official ballot paper. The Australian system, properly secured, will wonderfully sid in delivering our municipal corporations from the ward politicians and party caucus manipulators.

rom the ward politicisms and party manipulators.
Fourth—Enfranchisement of Women—The municipal government is a social affair, attending to streets, health, education and 100 things that concers everybody. In England all householders, whether men or women, have long possessed the municipal franchise. Some Women Should Vote.

It seems to me that in this country the women who pay taxes or who rent houses and are in fact the heads of families, should be given the right to vote in municipal elections. This is a subject that our young men's muncipal clubs might at least investigate with advantage.
Fifth-Municipal Unity and Home Rule-

Fifth-Nunicipal Unity and Home Rule—Nowadays most of the cities have half a dozen distinct governments, each responsible for various parts of the administration. The State Legislature is one of these, in numerous States; and in many cities, besides the City Council, there are independent school boards, beards of health, police commissioners, boards of public works, water commissioners, boards of public works, water commissions, park commissions, and still other local authorities. All of which is the most ruinous nonsense.

A city government, like a ratiroad corporation, whould have unity of control and operation, otherwise there can be no placing of responsibility. The Legislature, having made general laws for the government of cities, should keep its hands off. Its interference in the affairs of a particular city is a violation of what should be held a cardinal principle—municipal home rule. And this line of subject should give the clubs much to think and talk and work upon.

Seventh—The Municipal Civil Sarvice Lo

should give the clubs much to think and talk and work upon.

Seventh—The Municipal Civil Service—In nearly all cities of the civilized world specially qualified men serve the municipal corporation in enjoyment of the same probability of permanent tenure that the officials and employes of a commercial corporation possess.

Trained and Efficient Officers. Good municipal government requires trained ments; and our young men's clubs could with advantage consider such questions in their general hearing, and could usefully been sharp watch upon the civil service of particular comof every detail of local taxation and finance, should constantly watch expenditures, and should have as one of its principal objects the turning of full light upon every founding transaction involving the collection or disbursement of public money.

Duties of Young Men.

I might easily amplify these suggestions to fill many columns; but this brief outline may suffice at present to point the way. Young men should seldom seek municipal elective offices, but they should take an immense interest in seeing that public-spirited and honorable citizens of middle age, or older men of comparative leisure through retirement from business, are kept in responsible places.

The clubs should deal patiently and courteously with men and questions, and should never allow zeal for reform to lead them too far from the spirit of business-like and scientific inquiry. They should never know discouragement, but should keep steadily at their business. They will probably find "campaign" times the least advantageous for the work of steady, vigorous public education that they ought to undertake.
