FINE RECEPTION TENDERED HIM.

The German Character a Thrifty Factor in American Life.

CHARACTERISTICS THAT SHOULD RULE

(SPECIAL TELEGRAN TO THE DISPATCH.) BUFFALO, May 11.-Ex-President Cleveland attended the celebration of the semi-centen-nial of the German Young Men's Association here to-night and delivered the address of the evening. He arrived from New York this morning, accompanied by Dr. Joseph Senner, of the New York Staats Zeitung, who delivered the German address. It was the ex-President's first visit to his old home since he came to cast his vote in 1885, while occupying the Presidental chair, and he was enthusiastically received at the depot on his arrival by a large assemblage of old friends and citizens. On entering the hall where the celebration was held, Mr. Cleveland was heartily cheered, and an ova-tion was also tendered him when he arose to deliver his address. After the exercises Mr. Cleveland was entertained at a banquet by his friends. In addition to the ex-President's, several other addresses were made. Mr. Cleveland's speech was as follows: Speech of Mr. Cleveland.

I am glad to meet here to-night so many old friends and acquaintances, and to join them in the felicitations which have called us together. At this moment I recall with perfect vividness another evening nearly eight years ago, when in a beautiful building eight years ago, when in a beautiful building standing on this spot sud then just completed, we innugarated with songs and rejoicing a grand national Sangerfest. That was a proud day for Buffalo, and a prouder one still for our German fellow-townsmen, who then welcomed as their guests a large and notable assemblage from many States representing their national love of music, and at the same time were permitted to exhibit to their visitors, as a monument of the enterprise and activity of the German Young Men's Association, the grand and imposing Music Hall in which their festival of song was held.

The disaster which soon after overtook the association, involving the destruction of their should dead the others.

The disaster which soon after overtook the association, involving the destruction of their splendid building, brought no discouragement to the members of the organization. To-night we meet in another and more magnificent Music Hall, built upon the ashes of the first, to celebrate the close of 59 years in the life of an association, that exhibits to every observer the courage and determination which inevitably lead to usefulness and

Tribute to German Art. I shall not assume such a familiarity with the career of the association as would enable me to present in detail the results of its past efforts. In any event'it would ill become me to enter upon this field, in view of the fact that the able and honorable gentleman now at the head of the association was also its first President, and has for 50 years watched its progress and been deveted to its interests. Surely there has seldom been an organization which numbered among its members at tion which numbered among its members at the end of half a century so competent a chronicler of its history and achievements. I understand that among the prominent purposes of the German Young Men's Asso-

I understand that among the prominent purposes of the German Ivong Men's Association are the propagation and promotion of a knowledge of German literature and the cultivation and encouragement of the bost elements of German character.

So far as the first of these objects is concerned, I hope I may be permitted to say, that while the efforts of the association in the direction mentioned are most praiseworthy and patriotic, such an undertaking can by no means be monopolized by any association. The value and importance of German literature is too keenly appreciated to be neglected in any part of the world, where there are those who seek to know the past triumplis of science, poetry, music and art or where there are those who seek to know the cast triumplis of science, poetry, music and art or where there are those who strive to keep pace with their present development and progress. It is not too much to say that all nations which make claim to high civilization encourage the study of German literature, and that the extent to which this study is pursued by a people furnishes a standard of their enlightenment.

A Thrifty American Factor.

A Thrifty American Factor. On behalf of the American people, I am in-clined also to claim to-night that the German character which the association under takes to cultivate, is so interwoven with all the growth and progress of our country, that we have a right to include it among the fac-tors which make up a sturdy and thrifty Americanism. With our early settlers came the Germans. They suited themselves to every condition of our new world. Many of them fought for American independence, and many who in the trade of war, came to and many who in the trade of war, came to fight against us, afterward settled on our soil, and contributed greatly to the hardihood and stubborn endurance which our young nation so much needed.

As years were added to the new Republic, the tide of German immigration increased in volume. Those who thus came to us, brought with them a love of liberty which readily assimilated them to our institutions and their matural love of order made them good citizens. By their love of music and social cujoyments they shed a bright light upon the solemn and censtant routine of American work, while at the same time they hundantly proved that reasonable recrea-

American work, while at the same time they abundantly proved that reasonable recreation was entirely consistent with wholesome and conservative accumulation. They were found in every part of our land. Among the pioneers of the far West, they struggled against discouragements and hardships—counteracting privation by frugality, and never for a moment losing sight of the better day promised by the future to undaunted courage and persistent industry. In our cities and towns they were found in the front ranks of successful business and trade; and by the choice of their fellow citizens they held public positions of trust and influence. Everywhere they illustrated the value and the sure reward of economy and steady work.

Defending the Union.

Thus before the American nation had lived 100 years, our German population had grown to millions, and constituted an im portant ingredient in the mass of American portant ingredient in the mass of American activity. Then there came a time when the Government of the country of their adoption was assaulted by rebellious hands; and then our German fellow citizens had presented to them an opportunity to prove the depth and breadth of their attachment to the land in which they had become patriotic American citizens. They allowed not a moment for uncertainty, but flocked by thousands to the standard of the Union and bravely devoted themselves to its defense. In every lattle the German soldiers fought with courage and persistence and died with fortitude.

This common baptism of blood and this with courage and persistence and died with fortitude.

This common baptism of blood and this partnership in partl, brought closer together every element of our people and made them all—more than ever and in every sense—Americans. This leads me to say that any opposing claims to ownership in the valuable traits of German character, admit of a fair compromise. No one will begrudge the satisfaction to be derived from analyzing these elements and establishing their German origin; and all will concede that the more they are caltivated the more our country will gain. But when all this is done, let us call these traits, so far as they are here exhibited, American. They have been with us since our beginning: they have influenced every day of our country's life; they are among the traits which our Government was formed to foster, and they are essential to our country's safety and prospective. inl to our country's safety and pro

Eulogizing an Old Friend. I hardly think there is any city in the land that should appreciate the value of German onulation better than Buffalo. On every population better than Buffalo. On every side, within your limits, are seen the evidences of the thrift of your German fellow townsmen and monuments of their industry and enterprise. No one can dispute their contribution to your immense municipal growth, and you do well to recognize it in the selection of these charged with the administration of your city government. Even now there stands at its head, performing his duties acceptably to the entire community, one who has won his way to the confidence of his fellow citizens, solely by the German-American traits of honesty, hydistry and economy. I know that he will he German-American traits of honesty, the ustry and economy. I know that he will orgive me for saying that when I knew him is not many years ago, he was occupying a honorable but very humble position and ave to symptom of his present prominence. Will not dispute the right of anyone to call im a German; but I claim the satisfaction of calling this old friend of mine also a first-tet American.

rate American.

In the light of the suggestions I have made, it is a pleasant thing to learn the significant fact, that the membership of the significant fact, that the membership of the serman Young Men's Association is quite largely made up of those who have no title to German parentage or origin. I cannot resist the temptation to introduce here the thought, that no such association can exist, and escape a responsibility to our people and our government.

Made by the People.

together with the professed purpose of mutual improvement, or in furtherance of any useful object, they ought to do some-thing for their country. Its welfare and progress depend so clearly upon what the people are taught and what they think that patriotism should pervade their every en-deavor in the direction of mental or social improvement. Our Government was made deavor in the direction of mental or social improvement. Our Government was made by the people; and by the people it must be constantly watched and maintained. Like every other mechanism it requires guidance and care. Without this, like many another mechanism, it will not only fail to do its work, but it may injure and wound those who stand idly near.

We cannot afford in the heedless race for wealth, nor in the absorbing struggle for the promotion of selfish ends, to neglect for a day our duty to our Government. So, as the members of the German Young Men's Association contemplate the steadfast love of country which belongs to the German character, let them enforce the lesson that this sentiment is absolutely essential to the strength and vigor of American institutions.

German Industry and Frugality.

If they find that German industry and frugality lead to national happiness and comfort, let them insist that these characteristies be rooted in our soil; and if they find that the justice and equality which our free institutions promise and which the Germans love, are withheld from them and the American people, let them demand from the Government which they support, a scrupulous redemption of its pledges.

As this association crosses the threshold which lies midway in the first century of its existence, its members may well recall with pride and congratulation what it has thus far done for the promotion of a knowledge of German literature and the cultivation of German character; and as they enter upon the second half century of organized effort, they should be more than ever determined to pursue these purposes, not only because they may thus keep alive a fond remembrance of the Fatherland, but because they may thus, in a higher, better spirit, ald in the cultivation of those sentiments which purify and strengthen a genuine and patritic Americanism. German Industry and Frugality.

The same young man discovered, after wearing these odd hats advertised at odd prices, they were stiffened with poisonous stiffening, and the sweats, instead of being leather, were composed of poisons. The result was a sore head.

And, finally, a bald head. Yes, he lost his hair. The poisons in the would-be leather sweats did it.

The moral is to buy your HATS from J. G. Bennett & Co., and see that their name embossed on the leather. This will insure you a good, reliable, fashionable hat, full leather trimmed.
