wish it abated. Superintendent Holbrook, of the Baltimore and Ohlo, in speaking of the nuisance re-ported about the Junction road, only laughed and said: "Only coke is burned in the Junction engines, and I don't know when coal was used. The road has been burning coke since it opened. A Baltimore and Ohlo engine may occasionally go over the road to assist in pulling cars, but the Junction road has cer-tainly not violated the city ordinance. On the Baltimore and Ohio we burn soft coal. Coming into the city the passenger fires are allowed to run down, and these trains make little smoke. Going out, of course, they must keep up steam, and more smoke is thrown out. The Baltimore and Ohio on the Pittsburg division is not experimenting with smoke consumers for its engines. The locomotives are supplied with a stack which is intended to avoid the nuisance to some extent." extent.

Cleanliness Was Once Attempted.

Several years ago the Baltimore and Obio experimented with coke on the passenger engines. It was very successful, and the trains were so clean in consequence that the road intended to use it on all the road intended to use it on all the passenger locomotives. For some rea-sen it was not done, probably on account of the cost incurred in putting in new fire boxes. The Baltimore and Ohio throws out its share of smoke, but Superintendent Hol-brook can see no remedy for the evil at pres-ent. At the Junction office Superintendent Finney was not in, but his clerks thought it was ridiculous to make an example of the road as it runs through a wilderness for tho greater part of the way. They did not ap-poar to be well posted on the subject. It was also learned that the smoke problem is an interesting study with railroad men, but they are inclined to laugh at the offorts of the indics to force them by law to use marke consumers on locomotives. They claim it can't be done successfully or they would have adopted a plan long ago. On hot days, with a baseball game in the afternoon, it is a difficult lob to find the man-agers, but the hard working chief clerks are always accessible, and as a rule they are will ing to furnish information. General Manager Wood, of the Pennsylvania Company, is not in the city, but Chief Clerk Blair, speaking for the Forr Wayne and Panhandle, sald; Have Tackled a Very Big Job.

Have Tackled a Very Big Job.

"I am afraid the ladies have a tough job on their hands. It is a difficult thing to avoid moke in a manufacturing town, and the only way it can be done is by driving the industries out of the city. Surely they don't want to do this. On the Fort Wayne we are burning coke in the shifting engines. This was done several years ago on complaints made by Allegheny people that they didn't want so much smoke in the parks. It would want so much smoke in the parks. It would be impractical to burn coke or anthra-cite coal in all the engines within the city limits. As for the alleged smoke consumers, when the nuisance was at its height manu-facturers used them in this city with the ad-ditional incentive that they would save fael, but they proved dire failures. Until a successful consumer is made we will have to put up with the smoke. It is as disagreen-ible to milroad men and manufacturers as other people. So far as I know, the Ft. Wayne road is not making any experiments to get rid of the smoke from its engines." On the Pennsylvania road the passenger engines are supplied with a consumer, which is used as the locomotive enters a suition. It is an apparatus which turns the smoke back into the fare box, but interferes with getting up steam, and is not used when loco-motives are ranning at full spece. By turn-ing a lever the engineer can shut off the getting up steam, and is not used when loco-motives are ranning at full speed. By turn-ing a lever the engineer can shut off the smoke in a station, but in pulling out of a depot the apparatus is opened up. These smoke consumers are not used within the city limits, and they could not be put on freight engines without making them use-less.

No Practical Appliance for Locomotives.

Several years ago the Pennsylvania experimented with petroleum in running trains. It was very satisfactory, and left behind no smoke and little dirt, but the officials were afraid it would prove disastrous in the event of wrecks, and the new idea was dropped. The Pennsylvania people have not yet The Pennsylvania people have not yet been able to get a successful consumer that does not interfere with the working of the en-gine. They also claim that coke or anthra-cite coal within the city limits would be too expensive. In this event two sets of loco-motives would be necessary, and all trains would be broken and delayed to change the motives.

engines. At the Allegheny Valley office both Gen-eral Superintendent McCargo and Superin-tendent Price could not be found. The chief clerk said the Valley was lined on all sides in the city with mills that threw out plenty of smoke, and the dirt from their locomo-tives was insignificant in comparison. Until

WILL GO TO THE COURTS.

The Supreme Court May Get Leave to Hear the Hog Island Case.

Alderman McMasters has given Mess Nesbit and Treadway judgment for more than they claimed from Ferree and McCabe for sand taken from Hog Island, or Hog bar, and the case is now likely to become a cele-brated one and get to the Supreme Court in consequence. It was expected that the judgment would be in each case less than $5 33, so that no appeal could be taken, but as it was shown that the amount sued for was much less than that taken, judgment has been rendered for the full amount re-ceived, so the cases will reach the court on ceived, so the cases will reach the court on appeal. Attorney N. W. Shafer for the defense will send to Harrisburg for a full abstract of all the proceedings taken in getting the patent, and as this is not the first effort to get one, the matter may become voluminous. As the present claimants to the title are generally lawyers there will doubtless be a big legal pionic between "old residenters" and "squat-ters." The party tagged with the latter label are in good spirits and there is a pres-sure of combativeness on each side sufficient to make a ratiling fight.
