Many in the Prime of Life.

Many of the monks at the Grande Chart-reuse are still in the very prime of their manhood, and not a few of them are members of wealthy and distinguished families

Yet they have renounced everything; all the advantages that influence and wealth could give them; all the comforts of home; the love of wife and children; the fascination of travel and of strange sights—every tempta-tion that this most beautiful world could hold out has been resisted, and they have dedicated themselves to gloom, fasting and ilence. Verily, human nature is an un-athomable mystery. One may well ask if these monks are truly happy? If they have as longings for the flesh-pots of Egypt? If they do not sometimes pine and sigh for the busy haunts and the excitement of the great towns? Such questions are not easily answered, unless we get the answer in the fact that the monastic vows are faithfully and religiously kept; and there is no record of a Carthusian monk ever having oken his yows. Surely then there must be something strangely, even terribly attractive in that stern life which is so full of hardship and trial, and from year's end to year's end knows no change, until the great change which comes to us all, sooner r later, whether we be monks or revelers. I have already mentioned that, notwithstanding their sparse and meager diet, which seems to us ordinary mortals to lack nutriment and sustaining power, the monks of the Grande Characeuse are healthy and small stove, for the rigors of the climate render a fire indispensable at times, and yet the fires are used but sparingly; a little basin, with a jug of water for ablations; and of course there is the prie-dieu, and the image of a saint. Attached to the convent is a consetery, which cannot fail to have a very melanchely interest for the visitor. It is divided into two parts, one being for the Fathers, the other for the Brothers, for as the two branches of the order are kept distinct in life, so they are separated in death. No mounds mark the doctrine, there is absolutely no need. The characterise has a strong rival in the well-known benedictine, made by the Benedictine manks; and which, while being similar a character, is said by some to be superior.

There is little doubt, however, that the chartrense has much the larger sale of the two. Many attempts have been made from

Isolation and Defense Sought

In choosing the site for the convent, there is little doubt that isolation as well as a position of natural defense were aimed at. Isolated it truly is, and up to a couple of hundred years ago it must have been absolutely impregnable. But it is well known that the monks of old had an eye also to beauty of surroundings, and it is doubtful if the faithful followers of St. Bruno could have found a site commanding a view of more magnificent beauty in all France than that which the Grande Chartrense occupies, and by ascending to the summit of the Grand Som, which throws its shadow over the convent, a panorama of unsurpassed grandeur is unfolded to the wondering gaze.

Rhone, the town of Lyons, and the mountains of Ardeche and Forez; to the east the chain of glittering Alps that stretches from Mont Visio to Mont Blane; to the north is the Mont of Chambery, the Lake of Bourget, and that part of the Rhone Valley which is bounded by the rugged peaks of the purple Jura, while to the south as cruiling unlands.

are smiling valleys and rolling uplands.

This view of the outer world is all the monks ever obtain, for, having once taken and they know little of what goes on in the busy haunts of men, where the passion of life reaches fever heat, save what they gather from the chattering of the throngs of summer idlers. In winter they live in a silent, white world, and the face of a stranger is very rarely seen.

Before leaving the neighborhood I paid a visit to the Chapelle de St. Bruno, which is within half an hour's walk of the monas-tery. It is erected in a very wild spot, said to be the site of the saint's original her-mitage. There is nothing particularly in-teresting in the chapel, which is in a state of dilapidation. But it is curious to speculate that here dwelt, in what was little more than a cavern, the man who, by the austerity of his life and his gloomy views, was able to found a religious order which has endured for many ages, and is one of the few that escaped destruction dur-ing the revolutions and upheavals of the ast century. The situation of the chapelle is one of singular loneliness and desolation, and for eight months of the year at least it is buried in snow.

As I turned my back upon the Grande Chartrense, after that memorable night spent under its roof, and feeling grateful for the shelter and refreshment it had afforded me, the morning sun was gilding the glorious landscape, and I breathed a sigh of relicf and gladness, for I seemed to have come from a region of sorrow and gloom, where the coldness of death was ever present, into the healthy, joyous life of the throbbing, breathing world.—L. E. Muddock

SINGING OF THE SANDS.

As we lay stretched at the roots of the tow-ering trees the trade wind set in cool and efreshing from the ocean.

"Notwithstanding the heat and our exhausted condition, there was an enchant-ment about the situation that caused me to think of the beautiful stories of my childhood. I began to feel the soft touch of slumber, and all at once I heard a faint musical tinkling, as if troops of fairies were coming to greet us as they used to in the stories. I tried to locate the mel-odious sounds. In all directions there was nothing but the hot glowing sands.

I looked up. There was nothing but the beautiful tropical sky and the tremulous

THE HORSE WELL BROKEN.

Jack Schevner, or, as he styles himself,

"Poor Jack," had a fine young horse which was shy of railroad trains. He determined to break the horse of this folly, and so, early yesterday morning, told his man to take the borse out on South Fourth street and hold him there while a train went by,

The first thing that came along was an en-gine and tender, backing in from the sum-

As soon as the horse saw this terrible object coming he began to rear and try to get away, but the man held fast to him, and chevner shouted to him to hold on and to keep the horse there. Just before the engine came by the frightened animal whirled out across one rail of the track and tried to pull away from the driver, who, with his feet braced against the other rail, neld fast. Neither would budge, so the tender knocked the horse down, ran over him and killed him, while the man had a very narrow escape from going under the wheels of the engine. All is well that ends well. The horse was effectually cured of being seared at an engine, and the tender was soon righted and started out looking for WILDWOOD—The Smith Farm Oil Company shot its No. 9 on the Smith farm yesterday morning and it started off at the rate of 150 barrels an hour. At the end of the first 20 minutes after being shot it had put 50 barrels of all in the teal. The sense 50 barrels of oil in the tank The same company's No. 10 on the Smith farm was drilled deeper and increased from three to eight barrels an hour. The Bowman & Augusta Oil Company's Whitesell No. 3 was still doing 20 barrels an hour yesterday afternoon. The Forest Oil Company and Griffiths' No. 6, on the Ringenheisen farm, made 36 barrels during an hour's gauge yesterday. Barnsdale & Gillespie's No. 7, on the Zingenheim, was drilled into the sand and made a light showing. Unless it strikes the second pay it will be a very small well. It is on the extreme western edge of the belt. Forst & Greenlee's Hazlett No. 1 is good for ten barrels an hour. Their Alston No. 2 is due to-day. Ireland NORTH AVENUE M. E. CHURCH, corner Arch & Hughes' Kummer No. 2 has been cased. The Roth Oil Company has had to pull the casing in the C.O. Smithwell, and ream down. The Kanawha Oil Company's W. W. McIntyre, in the south, is through the sand and very light. Guffey & Queen's Lintz farm well is good for 30 barrels a day. Their No. 1, on the Kuhlber, came in yesterday morning, and is doing eight barrels an hour. Guffey & Co.'s Cole farm well will reach the sand before Monday.

In Advance of McCurdy. MCCURDY-The Forest Oil Company's well on the Wright farm, two miles scathwest of the McCurdy developments, is putting out about 15 barrels a day. It has been spraying considerable oil, and some of the farmers in the vicinity have fixed up pipes to catch what comes out, and yesterday succeeded in getting nearly 15 barrels. Guffey & Murphy's Kerr No. 2 is in the sand and showing very light. Fisher, Boyer & Co. have a fishing job at their McCluskey well. The Bear Creek Refining Company and Bradley brought in their Adams No. 1 yesterday, and last evening it was reported to be doing 35 barrels an hour. Their No. 1, on the William Springer farm, in Moon township, will be in Monday, The Fisher Oil Company's No. 3, on the W. E. Riddle, and Gillespie & Co.'s No. 4, on the Jane Riddle, which started off at nearly 2,000 barrels a day each, have dropped of to between 600 and 700 barrels each. Around Cornopolis. CORAOPOLIS—The Forest Oil Company's Meeks No. 2 got the sand yesterday and is showing for a fair well. Mellon & Co.'s No. 2, on the Beggs, will make a 20 barrel pumper. The Forest Oil Company's Mc-Clinton No. 3 will make an average pumper. Gailey Brothers' well, on the Watson farm, will be in Tuesday. ring?" said Dan Colby, an old circus man, to a reporter of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. 'Well, at first, with the 'mechanic,' a long arm that sticks out from the center pole, from the end of which dangles a rope fastened to a belt around the learner's The Wright in Advance, Doing About waist at one end and the other held in the teacher's hand. The pupil stands on a broad pad on the horse's back, and the sup-REPORTS FROM OTHER LOCALITIES.

porting arm goes around as the horse goes. So long as the pupil keeps his balance there So long as the pupil keeps his balance there is no strain on the rope. When he tumbles off, as he is likely to do, the rope steadies and sustains him. It gives confidence, and that is its principal use, but it also prevents falls. When the pupil can stand well without it its use is abandoned.

"For a long time nothing is attempted but to teach the fall.

wells which were shot responded to an extraordinary degree and show that a to teach the pupil to stand easily and safely few quarts of glycerine will open up hundreds of barrels of petroleum in spots which have apparently been thoron the horse and to balance himself grace-fully to the horse's stride. Then he learns to do the same riding backward, which is harder. Then he jumps up a little, an inch or two only, and keeps at it until the fact is imbedded in his mind that he takes his forward impetus from the horse, and only has to jump upward and not forward, and for that the 'mechanic' probably has to be again brought into play to save him from ugly tumbles by his jumping out over the horse's shoulder or on his neck. Each act must be learned well before a new one is tackled, and nothing learned must ever be allowed to lapse for want of practice. Slow work, you see. I've no doubt that it would be easier to learn Greek—would be for a Greek, anyway."

EDISON'S NEXT WORK.

A Contrivance for Picturing the Speaker From a Phonograph.

A New York correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat quotes Thomas A. Edison as follows: "I am at work on an invention which I may now say will be a success, and which, while its commercial value will be very limited, may recommend itself to my friends as something curious. It is not yet complete, but I am vain enough to believe it will surprise you. I hope to be able to combine the phonograph and the camera, and not only reproduce the sounds accompanying an event, but the actions of those taking part as well. For instance, if Patti should be singing, this invention will put her full length picture upon canvas so that the expression of her face and pose of her body can be seen while listening to the song she has sung. The eye will be pleased as well as the car.
"The invention has demonstrated its practicability at a prize fight. I reproduced the ring, the two principals, the crowd about them, the intensely interesting expressions of all, the sound of blows, the cheers of encouragement and the howls of disappointment. My idea is that a man, sitting in his library at home, may be able to see re-produced upon his wall the business of the stage as well as the lines of the actor."

OUT OF A MARITAL DILEMMA. The Great Good Fortune Which Visited a Chicago Family.

The eldest daughter of a Prairie avenu ousehold last fall sailed with a party of friends for a tour of Europe, says the Chicago Inter-Ocean. There were two suitors she could not decide between, so after pondering long over her perplexed condition, she wrote home to her mamma explaining in detail the situation of affairs. Both suitors were so handsome, agreea-ble, well connected and rich that she could not decide between them, and the wail of her letter was "What shall I do?" When mamma received the letter she neither walled nor pondered. With a promptness peculiarly Chicagoese she cabled:

"I sail to-morrow, Hold both till I come."

The next steamer bore mamma and her second daughter, 18 years old, and just out of school. Paris reached, mamma took the management of the campaign, and a few weeks later attended the weddings of her loss and beyond: *I. is a management of the campaign and a few weeks later attended the weddings of her loss are points intermediate and beyond: *I. is a management of the campaign and a few weeks later attended the weddings of her loss are points intermediate and beyond: *I. is a management of the campaign and a few weeks later attended the weddings of her loss are points intermediate and beyond: *I. is a management of the campaign and a few weeks later attended the weddings of her loss are points intermediate and beyond: *I. is a management of the campaign and a few weeks later attended the weddings of her loss are points in the campaign and a few weeks later attended the weddings of her loss are points in the campaign and a few weeks later attended the weddings of her loss are points in the campaign and a few weeks later attended the weddings of her loss are points in the campaign and a few weeks later attended the weddings of her loss are points in the campaign and a few weeks later attended the weddings of her loss are points in the campaign and a few weeks later attended the weddings of her loss are points in the campaign and a few weeks later attended the weddings of her loss are points in the campaign and a few weeks later attended the weddings of her loss are points in the campaign and the campaign an two daughters at the American Chapel on the same morning.

TWO ALLIGATOR YARNS.

They Are the Fruit of Georgia Romancers and Rather Hard to Swallow.

Montezuma (Ga.) Record.] Here are two good stories by two noted narrators of Macon county that are hard to down. Ance Slappey says that an alligator was killed on the river near his house not long ago that when cut open a bateau and three negroes were found in him. One of the negroes was so badly excited that he forgot to lay down his paddle.

Fortune Farmer, the man who killed 41 squirrels out of a single tree at one time, comes back at him and says: "There is an alligator in the river at the mouth of Camp creek that is 20 feet long, and I'll swear it. He is so old that great tags of gray moss hang from his back just like the wool on Charley Keen's dog. Boys, let me tell you. When a fellow is sitting on the banks of the ereek fishing and that 'gator bellows, you have to hold to a tree to keep the noise from jarring you into the creek. Now, that's a fact, and you need't laugh about it."
