

suggestions are not always acted upon. If they were, depend upon it we would not have the same team on the field twice a week. I don't think there is anybody more eager than I am to see the Pittsburgh ball team...

Benefit of the Decision of Judge Maxwell Regarding the Reilly Injunction Case.

GOOD LOCAL TEAM PROSPECTS. A Few Opinions Regarding the Glove Affair Between Peter Jackson and Jim Corbett.

THEIR FIGHT ONLY A VERY POOR ONE.

Down and Myer's Fight, Among the New Orleans Patrons of the Ring and Other Matters.

In the baseball world the most important event of the week has been the decision of Judge Maxwell in the Reilly case. Pittsburgh, of course, has been particularly interested in the matter, which made it of more importance here probably than anywhere else...

Good Effects of the Case.

The way in which the Reilly case was settled is pronounced upon as of great importance to me because from the day that the Association turned its back on the national agreement I urged that every player in it who had signed the old form of contract was at liberty to do as he pleased. I argued this question fully at the time, and President Kramer tried to show how the contracts of the players were just as binding as those of the Association...

The Local Team.

None of us can find much fault with the local team now. Surely they have been doing well and the complaints that many people had to make a week or so ago cannot be taken into consideration...

Corbett in less than six rounds. At best, that is giving Corbett credit for everything he did, he was afraid of Jackson. How do I know? Why, because he would not go near enough to hit Jackson, nor near enough to the Australian to hit him except when delivering the professor-like taps...

THE GENERAL SITUATION.

Certainly there have been some surprises in the League race already. A week or so ago nobody would have thought that the New Yorks would have been so far down in the race as they are now. It is a very strange thing to see the Chicago team in the lead...

THE GENERAL SITUATION.

Well, we have had something like an important week in pugilism. It has been a week in which the pugilists have been talking about the fight between Jackson and Corbett, because to be frank on the matter, an "inside history" might as well be written on the subject...

THE GENERAL SITUATION.

It is interesting to talk about the alleged contest on its merits, that is, as it actually took place, we will have a very unsatisfactory subject to deal with. We will therefore carefully report the reports of the affair, and I have still the opinion of Corbett that I have had and probably a little less of Jackson as a matter of fact...

A CHILEAN RAILWAY.

Trip Through the Heart of the Republic to Its Capital City.

INTRODUCTION OF PARLOR CARS.

Where the Fashionable People Go When They Want Real Cream.

FLOWER SALES AT THE STATIONS.

(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE DISPATCH.) SANTIAGO DE CHILE, April 23.—One can hardly imagine a pleasanter journey than that between Valparaiso and this city. The distance is 115 miles, and the time required by rail is five hours. The road, which is one of the oldest in South America, is owned and controlled by the Government...

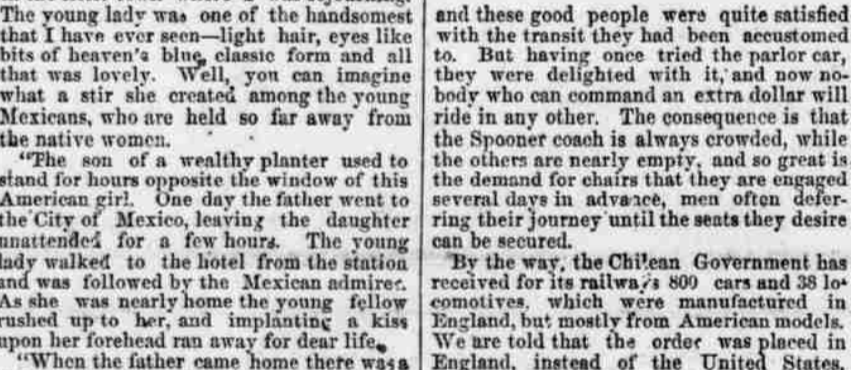

Something Like Our Fallman. Nowadays, on the trains between the seaport and Santiago, there is a particular car with chairs, here known as "the Spooner car," because introduced by a gentleman of that name. At first it was difficult to persuade the men to pay for the privilege of riding in a chair, for habit is strong...

LOVE-MAKING IN MEXICO.

American Women Popular Because They Are Approachable.

Baron Straus said the American women were so popular in Mexico that it interfered with the wheels of justice in that Republic. "The American women," he said, "go about Mexico as they would in this country, while the Mexican women are something else entirely. They are afraid to be seen in a country church, and love to them to stand on some 100 yards and stare."

A VIEW IN SANTIAGO.

A VIEW IN SANTIAGO.

and these good people were quite satisfied with the transit they had been accustomed to. But having once tried the parlor car, they were delighted with it, and now a body who can command an extra dollar will ride in any coach. The consequence is that the Spooner car is always crowded, while the others are nearly empty, and so great is the demand for the parlor car that several days in advance, men often defer their journey until the seats they desire can be secured.

Balmaceda Friendly to Uncle Sam.

In an interview on the subject, President Balmaceda declared that the government of this Republic entertains most friendly feelings toward the elder sister of the north, and is so anxious to establish direct and regular steamship communication between the ports of the two countries that Chile will contribute her full proportion to any reasonable subsidy that may be necessary to secure such service.

AN AMERICAN THEORY.

"I hate to tell Smithers a joke; he always wants it explained—'is it because he's Scotch' or 'is it because you are English.'"

VORACIOUS BANANA EATING.

CARROLLTON, O., May 22.—Last night, at Port Morrow, a 14-year-old lad of this city ate 30 full-sized bananas in 15 minutes, and offered to eat 15 more in five minutes for $5.

THE NOBLE WORK RECENTLY CAST FROM MR. G. A. LAWSON'S MOLD.

A more fantastic scene than that which was witnessed the other afternoon at Mr. Moore's foundry, when Mr. G. A. Lawson's colossal statue of Robert Burns was cast, could not be imagined, says the Pittsburg Dispatch.

SCENERY OF CENTRAL CHILE.

The engineering problems of this central Chilean railway do not appear to have been great, at least as compared with those so frequently encountered in Peru. The rise between the sea and Santiago is about 1,800 feet, but there are no steep grades, and the road is a series of short tunnels. Neither is the scenery so grand as that along the Peruvian lines; but it is a most interesting picture.

THE LONG BRANCH OF CHILE.

By far the most elegant and fashionable resort in all South America, not excepting Petropolis and San Paulo near Rio de Janeiro, those former seats of royalty during Don Pedro's reign, is Valparaiso. It is the citizens of Valparaiso, the capital, and even of the far South, who spend their leisure hours in the city, and it is the ideal illustration of a "rich man's lounge" and a "poor man's resort."

A MIGHTY MEAN MAN.

Bessie Bramble's Opinion of the Great Napoleon as a Husband.

HE OFTEN TORE HIS CLOTHES UP, AND IF JOSEPHINE'S SHAWL DIDN'T SUIT HIM HE THREW IT IN THE FIRE.

A TYRANT IN HIS OWN HOUSEHOLD.

(WRITTEN FOR THE DISPATCH.) "A true delineation of even the smallest man is capable of interesting the greatest," says Carlyle, a truth which will only require a biography, which is only a history of his own mind, to be interesting to all readers. This is especially true when the subject is well known and portrayed to the life—when virtues are not unduly magnified nor faults wholly obscured, when he appears as a man like unto ourselves, and is not "written up" as a sort of demigod.

Someone has confessed that the story of George Washington as told in the school readers was always painful to him. As told there the hero of the Revolution is shown to be so tremendously good that his example goes for nothing with the average boy. He is represented as unapproachable—a being who, from his youth up, was a model so superior that no modern boy could come within a thousand miles of him.

HEROES HIS TEMPER LED HIM.

He wore out his temper led him. He hated dressing, and when anything did not suit him he would tear it to shreds. He had a horror of barbers and always shaved himself. One of his habits when not in a good humor was to stir the wood fire with the old fork and stick, and when he was in a bad mood he would throw the fork into the fire.

THE LITTLE THINGS INTEREST.

No brighter page is there to be found in history than that which records the genius and capacity of Washington as soldier in the Revolution and as President of the Republic. It is in the former on his estate, the husband in his home, the details of his everyday life as a friend and neighbor that most people take greatest interest—especially women.

NAPOLEON'S FAMILY AT PARIS.

His mother and the entire family seem to have flocked to Paris when Napoleon attained power to best of his ability. The mother was not a brilliant woman, but she seems to have had a prudent turn of mind, for while the sun of fortune shone upon them she devoted herself principally to saving and accumulating money, and when the storm came, she returned to Rome and lived comfortably upon during the rest of her life.

QUANT CUSTOMS AT QUANT HAMLETS.

Some of the hamlets along this road are as quaint as the names. There is Llallal, pronounced "Llallal," where you have breakfast or supper, according to the train you happen to be on; and Thal, where you may have a cup of hot tea, or a glass of iced wine, or a cigar, and a sandwich, or a cigarette, according to your taste and sex.

THE THREAT OF A DIVORCE.

Her impending, and at times seemed to enjoy humiliating her before the entire court by his attentions to other women. He had spies ever at hand to report her smallest doings and sayings. On the other side, Napoleon's methods of fine work were going on and coming in, and usually got enough of tattle and scandal concerning Napoleon to make her thoroughly unhappy.

ANOTHER BALANCING TRICK.

How to Make a Needle Stand Upon the Head of a Pin in a Board. The balancing trick shown herewith is sent to THE DISPATCH for its young readers by B. B. H. Drive a pin into a strip of board so that it stands firmly. Lay it upon a table so that the part with the pin in it extends over the edge. Through a light strip of wood...

A NEEDLE BALANCED ON A PIN.

A Needle Balanced on a Pin.

Drive a needle at a point about one-third of its length from one end. Then take a knife and fasten the tip of the blade in the wood at a point about the same distance from the other end of the strip of wood. The knife should be heavy as compared with the strip so that when the handle is bent the center of gravity of the whole will fall below the point of the needle, and "B. B. H." guarantees you will be surprised.

LABOR FOR THE FARM.

Acres of Land Standing Idle for Want of Help to Plant Them.

YET CITY-Dwellers ARE ABUNDANT.

Not a Matter of Wages Because Country Work is Well Paid For.

BOYS AND GIRLS COMING TO CITIES.

There is a screw loose somewhere, evidently several of them, in our political economy. While producers claim that monopolies are making the rich richer and the poor poorer, and probably few, comparatively few, are doing so, the fact is, while able-bodied men and women and children are in actual want in the merry, merry spring-time in this city, and these able-bodied men claim they cannot get work, almost within sound of the groning steam engines and clanking forge-hammers of this industrial hive, farmers are tearing their hair because they cannot get help, either male or female, to run their farms.

BETTER WAGES ON FARMS.

Half-daring is harder work than farm labor, which is diversified and restful, yet their earnings do not average as much as those of farm workers. Men can be had to drive from three to 1 1/2 per day and work 10 hours a day, less money than is paid for farm labor at 25 per cent less hours for work. A good farm hand can get 2 1/2 per day and work 10 hours with board and washing, and can sleep better and have better food than in the city, and is out of the way of the temptation to dissipation.

THEIR FIGHT ONLY A VERY POOR ONE.

As a rule, neither the farmer's sons nor daughters elect to stay home. If the girls cannot get the kind of work they want, the next thing considered is to be a dressmaker, typewriter, bookkeeper or something else that they think more attractive than farm life. They thought many of them may in after years, when fully they are made to see it now, and many thousands of girls yearly leave good homes in the country to work in the cities. The boys want to be lawyers, doctors, preachers, bookkeepers, clerks or mechanics, and it is easier to become a clerk in a city than a farmer's son, and it is to get a chance to learn a desirable mechanical trade. Falling in with these lines they drive street cars or do any manual labor they can find in the cities.

DEPOSING MONUMENTS.

All over the Northern States the same condition prevails. New England farmers cannot get their spring planting done and it is said that in Hartford, Ct., 200 farm hands can get only $2 a month for a month or two, and yet thousands of able-bodied men are hungry near in New York City.

A RATHER GLOOMY OUTLOOK.

It is scarce worth while to go into an analysis of the causes that have produced this state of affairs. People may learn the cure in the expansive use of the word "display," and so long as public teaching inspires this love, there will be no improvement until culture brings it about.

THE SIZE OF THE STONE DOESN'T INDICATE THE AMOUNT OF GRIEF.

On a recent visit to one of the great cemeteries near this city I had as a companion, an old gray-haired dealer in tombstones, says a writer in the New York Telegram. It might be termed the fashionable portion of the cemetery I called his attention to the impressive character of the massive monuments of granite, with their bright polished sides, on which were inscribed the names and ages of those who lay beneath.

TWO LECTURES AT ONCE.

Wendell Phillips Meets With a Quicker Instance of Yankee Thrift. Wendell Phillips, having been announced to lecture in the parish meeting house, found on his arrival that the committee was not agreed as to the subject of the lecture, says Youth's Companion.

HOW NAPOLEON WON JOSEPHINE.

The Bonapartes began poor. Through the kind offices of Bernadotte, the first brother-in-law, Josephine had been enabled to get back enough of her first husband's confiscated estates to manage to "get along" on a modest life, but not one thought of her. With this, after the storm of the Revolution, she was content. With her children and her friends she took her time to forget the sorrows of her life and grow wiser again.

THE BROTHERS OF NAPOLEON.

There were three brothers of Napoleon, but only one of them was a man. The other two were women. The first was a girl, the second a girl, and the third a girl. They were all of them very beautiful, and they were all of them very intelligent.

THE BROTHERS OF NAPOLEON.

There were three brothers of Napoleon, but only one of them was a man. The other two were women. The first was a girl, the second a girl, and the third a girl. They were all of them very beautiful, and they were all of them very intelligent.

THE BROTHERS OF NAPOLEON.

There were three brothers of Napoleon, but only one of them was a man. The other two were women. The first was a girl, the second a girl, and the third a girl. They were all of them very beautiful, and they were all of them very intelligent.

THE BROTHERS OF NAPOLEON.

There were three brothers of Napoleon, but only one of them was a man. The other two were women. The first was a girl, the second a girl, and the third a girl. They were all of them very beautiful, and they were all of them very intelligent.

THE BROTHERS OF NAPOLEON.

There were three brothers of Napoleon, but only one of them was a man. The other two were women. The first was a girl, the second a girl, and the third a girl. They were all of them very beautiful, and they were all of them very intelligent.

THE BROTHERS OF NAPOLEON.

There were three brothers of Napoleon, but only one of them was a man. The other two were women. The first was a girl, the second a girl, and the third a girl. They were all of them very beautiful, and they were all of them very intelligent.

THE BROTHERS OF NAPOLEON.

There were three brothers of Napoleon, but only one of them was a man. The other two were women. The first was a girl, the second a girl, and the third a girl. They were all of them very beautiful, and they were all of them very intelligent.

THE BROTHERS OF NAPOLEON.

There were three brothers of Napoleon, but only one of them was a man. The other two were women. The first was a girl, the second a girl, and the third a girl. They were all of them very beautiful, and they were all of them very intelligent.

THE BROTHERS OF NAPOLEON.

There were three brothers of Napoleon, but only one of them was a man. The other two were women. The first was a girl, the second a girl, and the third a girl. They were all of them very beautiful, and they were all of them very intelligent.

THE BROTHERS OF NAPOLEON.

There were three brothers of Napoleon, but only one of them was a man. The other two were women. The first was a girl, the second a girl, and the third a girl. They were all of them very beautiful, and they were all of them very intelligent.

THE BROTHERS OF NAPOLEON.

There were three brothers of Napoleon, but only one of them was a man. The other two were women. The first was a girl, the second a girl, and the third a girl. They were all of them very beautiful, and they were all of them very intelligent.

THE BROTHERS OF NAPOLEON.

There were three brothers of Napoleon, but only one of them was a man. The other two were women. The first was a girl, the second a girl, and the third a girl. They were all of them very beautiful, and they were all of them very intelligent.

THE BROTHERS OF NAPOLEON.

There were three brothers of Napoleon, but only one of them was a man. The other two were women. The first was a girl, the second a girl, and the third a girl. They were all of them very beautiful, and they were all of them very intelligent.