Enlisted in a Similar Cause.

He then showed how Paul and the soldiers of the late war were enlisted for the same cause; the soldiers for the safety of existing homes and nations, and Paul for the safety of homes and nations yet unborn. Continning he said:

The story of the Cross shows the infinite love of God, and its ignominy intensifies that love. It unfolds God's plan of redemp-tion: it conquers the hostile and elevates audience was large and attentive. He said: human society; it is a ray of hope to the be-nighted of earth, and gives us some bentific glimpses of the hereafter. Do we wonder that Paul became an enthusiast? The influ-cnee for good of this story handed down ugh the centuries has been incalculable, and, with an ever-increasing speed, it moves on to-day, making the world better and grander.'

up in pointing out the triumphs of the Cross upon the battlefield. He especially referred to the grand work of the Christian and Sanitary Commission, which, forgetting creed and ties of home, aided both the body and soul, and in the ardor of their work blotted out the colors blue and gray and ministered to Union soldier and rebel alike.

to Union solidier and rebel alike. Veterans of the late war also crowded the Bingham Street M. E. Church last night, where Rev. J. A. Ballantyne addressed Post 151 of the G. A. R. In the morning W. F. Oldham preached a memorial ser-mon before Post 41, at the Butler Street M. E Church. Union memorial services were also held in the Mt. Washington M. P. Church on Virginia avenue.

THE BASIS OF A REAL CHURCH.

Last Sermon but One to the Rev. Dr. J. G. Townsend's Pittsburg Charge.

Dr. Townsend yesterday preached his last sermon but one in this city prior to going to Jamestown, N. Y. His hearers were attentive and deeply impressed. During his sermon, which dwelt on "The Basis of a Real Church," Dr. Townsend said:

Real Church," Dr. Townsend said: "The real church must recognize the five-fold needs of human nature—the spiritual, intellectual, moral, affectional and esthet-ical. It must have, then, a spiritual basis. The secret of its power, its success, in say-The secret of its power, its success, in say-ing men must be its living relationship with God. It may be prodigal in many things, money, social influence, culture, but all these will not avail if it be economical of these will not avail if it be economical of the spiritual. When I go into a church it is that I may be helped in my deepest life, that my soul may be brought near to the eternal goodness. That domand which the disciples made to Jesus, 'Show us the Father and it sufficeth,' is the cry to-day in the depths of the heart It is not a necessity to define God. How can men surround with their thought Him upon the waves of whose infinite sea this universe lies a bubble. No, it is not anecesupon the waves of whose infinite sea this universe lies a bubble. No, it is not aneces-sity that we define Him, but it is a neces-sity that we find Him. Again, because we have an intellectual nature it is a necessity that a true theology be taught. I know the difference between religion and theology. There may be good men with a good theology, but in the long run tho better theology will make the better man. If the intellectual cannot survive the spiritual, neither can the spiritual survive the inso. If the intellectual cannot survive the spiritual, neither can the spiritual survive the intellectual; that is, no institution, no society, no state can survive the loss of the many. He sure of this, when the in-the day. He said this did not involve the union of Church and State, but rather its separation. Post 126, G. A. R., listened yesterday morning, in the Buena Vista M. E. Church, to a sermon by Rev. J. H. Miller. His text was, "God forbid that I should glory save in the cause of our Lord Jesus Christ." He dwelt on the unselfish and the exclusive work which the Apostle Paul did for the Church, explaining how he gave to christ. greatest the world had known, for through it 100,000 people were brought into the vari-ous churches. His power lay in the fact that the only book he followed was the Bible, and he won his followers by reason and sound argument. Next Sunday the life of John B. Gough will be taken up.

id, with an ever-increasing speed, it over on to-day, making the world better id grander." It stands out against every vice and in unequivocal opposing to all engrossing evils. "The Ninth Commandment condernns testi-fying falsely in courts of justice, and the common practice of despicable pettifoggers who seek to win the case of a client without the grand work of the Christian and Sanit is intended to prepare an ordinance to be presented to the borough council at once. The argument is that it is now almost im-possible for a stranger to find a resident of Wilkinsburg unless the exact location of the house is known. A few years ago everybody knew everybody else in the bor-ough, and it was easy to find an address. Now all is changed, the niany new houses that have been built-on entirely new streets, as well as filling in old ones-have created clusters of residences that absolutely demand a guide of some kind. It is thought the council will pass the or-dinance for numbering, and then a regular regard to the fairness of the client's claims. It condemns lying and deceitfulness and urges universal truthfulness, without which there can be no national unity or international relationships. It reproves fashiona-ble lying. Lying in what we tell, in what we sell, in what we advertise, in false im-pressions produced. It rebukes hypocrisy, exaggeration and equivocation."
