Mr. Shoemaker says in explanation: "The Constitution makes no provision for priority of commission for judges appointed, then by what authority does Governor Pattison designate one of them president judge."

Prospects for a Legal Muddle, "The Constitution also states that if a president judge is re-elected he continues to hold the commission. Suppose now that the new president judge should be re-elected next November and the other two judges and cast lots, and disputed the right with him, who would be the one entitled to hold the senor commission? The president udge appointed by the Governor would base the senior committee Governor would base his right on one section of the Constitution, and the other cialmant on another. It is the reductio ad absurdum in reasoning."

Judge Agnew was also interrogated about this point. He said: "Once more the question reverts to the right of the Governor to fill the offices by appointment. If they are this point. He said: "Once more the question reverts to the right of the Governor to fill the offices by appointment. If they are vacant, I think he can appoint a president judge, inasmuch as there is a vacancy in the office. This is probably how the Governor reasoned since the Constitution is silent on this point. However, I am very much interested in the questions raised by Mr. Shoemaker as every lawyer in Pittsburg will be, and I suppose the Supreme Court will be called on to settle the disputed points. Since I have retired from the bench and active practice the cases I have heard filt before my mind like panoramic pictures, but I can't remember much about them. When I was on the Supreme bench I studied every case carefully, and then we discussed them among ourselves. We often differed radically, but that is to be expected from mortals. I often saw where lawyers erred in citing cases which they thought applied to the matter in dispute."

"Want to have someone arrested, eh?"

"Well, you can sleep in here," she was told, and Mrs. Hempt, the night matron, was made acquainted with the girl's desire. To Mrs. Hempt she told a story which, if true, shows great heartlessness on the part of her parents. She said that she came with her mother and father from Everson on Monday to see them off for Europe, whither they departed on Monday night. When the train bearing them had left she found she had no money to get home, and so remained in the station all night. Inquiry from the officials elicited the fact that this part of her story, anyway, was true. Next morning, still without saying anything about her position, she remained at the station, and when Mrs. Hempt asked her whether she had money to buy a meal she said she had not. She was given a meal in the restaurant and then related the incident about her parents. It was too late to send her home, and so she passed another night in the ladies' waiting room. Yesterday morning Depot Master Butler was told her story, and he sent her on to Everson on an early train.

The depot officials are inclined to doubt her statement, and believe that she came to town and made up the tale to enable her to return. On the other hand she appeared to he respectable, and told her story in such a manner as to make it appear true. Her parents, she said, did not want her togo back and left her without money on purpose. What happened to the girl at Everson is only known to the people there. Her name could not be learned.

EDISCOPAL CHIERCH CONSECRATION On the Second Anniversary of the Great Flood at Johnstown.

An event which will mark with peculiar significance the second anniversary of the Johnstown disaster will be the consecration of the new Episcopal Church, built by the ons of symnathizing

The consecration services will begin with the dedication of the memorial gifts on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. The consecration itself will take place on Sunday morning at 10:45. It is expected that the surpliced choirs of St. Luke's Church, Altoona, All Saints', Mexham, and St. Mark's, Johnstown, will assist the large chorus choir, composed largely of Welsh singers, in rendering the music of the occasion. The Right Rev. T. U. Dudley, Bishop of Kentucky, will preach the sermon, and there will be other distinguished cleryymen from East and distinguished clergymen from East and West to make addresses, and to preach on Sunday evening and on every evening during

KISSED THE WRONG GIRL A Young Man Mistakes Some Other Fellow's

When he remembed the vestibule he remembered his oversight and started back to emedy it. The car was well filled and the doubtless recovers and remedy it. The car was well hiled and the young man was, doubtless, nervous, and probably near-sighted, for when he reached the section, as he thought, containing his beloved, he stooped suddenly and imprinted a fervid kiss on the lips of—some other girl. There was a scream: deep flushes suffused the cheeks of the right girl, quickly followed by an indignant frown; a hurried apology from the poor fellow, and then a wild rush for the door and a tunkle off the very for the door, and a tumble off the now rapidly moving train by a very shamefaced and

The Pension Office Is Now Installed in th Old University Building. The pension office has been removed from its old quart rs on Third avenue to larger premises in the old University building, Ross and Diamond streets. The removal of the archives and office paraphernalia was commenced on Saturday and yesterday the office force was just about comfortably at work. Three extensive rooms on the first floor are occupied, and while the arrange-

Pension Agent H. H. Bengough said yesterday that his district had about 20,000 pensioners and this number was increasing at about 30 a day. Somewhere over $1,000,000 was paid out quarterly. The increase in the number of pensioners was due largely to the dependent pensions bill. But there was no correspondingly large increase in the payments because the pensions under that bill were limited to $12 a month. There were still some of the old pension claims coming a from time to time.

Objected to a Quartet of Bridges.

The hearing before Commissioner W. A Schmidt in the case of the Coal Exchange versus the Panhandle, Pittsburg, Bellevne and Steubenville Bridge Companies was continned yesterday. The complaint is that the bridges are not high enough, nor is there sufficient distance between the plers of the channel spans. Twenty-one river men gave testimony to the above effect yesterday before the commissioner.

elieving That the Synod Will Show Itself to Be Firm in the Old School.

The Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church met for the sixty-second time yes terday. It met in the Eighth street church and was called to order by Rev. D. H. Coul-ter, of Winchester, Ky. Of the 150 congre-gations entitled to representation 115 were represented. This includes all sections of the Union, as well as New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. These are all old school Covenanters. There was a swarming in 1833, at which time the liberals went off, and 58 years after the same question comes up for settlement in the parent hive, with consequences that can only be approximately guessed at at present, though the heretics suspended by the Pittsburg Presbytery do not go so far as to declare their intention to vote and act independently of the church in the matter of political dissent. It is asserted that the conservatives sent. It is asserted that the conservatives are largely in the majority and from the pysiognomies and silver hair present it looks decidedly that way. The prominent actors in the struggle in the Presbytery last December were their, but with the exception of Dr. David McAlister, they took no part vesterday. Prof. D. R. At the conclusion of the roll-call Dr. McAlister, chairman of the Committee on Arthur, of Allegheny, presided at the morn-ing session, which was all devotional. In the interludes between prayer and song, Rev. William McFarlin, of Ogdensburg, N. Y., discussed the first topic, "Confessions of Dishonor Done to the Holy Spirit," and Rev. J. S. Thompson, of Utica, O., "Encourage-ments to Expect the Spirit's Outpouring." The afternoon session was presided over by Elder James Thompson, of Beulah, Neb., a member of Kansas Presbytery. Rev. David McKee, of Clarinda, Ia., prayed and Rev. T. C. Sproull, of Cedarville, O., lectured on the c. Not Enough Fasting on Fast Days.

The question, "How Can This Part of Our Covenant Be Made More Effective?" was dis-O. He thought there was not enough of fasting on fast days, and urged that fasting throughout the United States. The church building is of stone, after plans by Robert W. Gibson, architect. Total length of church 100 feet, with a width of 68 feet. The church 100 feet, with a width of 68 feet. Trouble Expected in Church and Stato. Trouble Expected in Church and State

The prophet predicted a storm of divine wrath to fall upon Judah, and called on sin-ners to heed the word of God and be saved. This is God's way, said the speaker, and then he referred to the trouble in the church This is God's way, said the speaker, and then he referred to the trouble in the church and said this was the cause of yesterday's humiliation. All trouble may come from two sources and for two purposes. It may be from God and it may be from Satan, God allowing the adversary to punish nations and individuals for their good. The speaker sees signs of trouble in church and state, Although for 29 years there has been no great war, yet the resources of nations are being drained to increase armies and even in the United States there is a rage for armament that bodes trouble. Then there are labor troubles and signs of the apocalyptic panorama, with blood flowing to the horses' bridles. But the signs in the churches are more ominous than those in the nations. Creeds, customs and systems of theology are being broken and driven forward, as it were, on the surges of the swollen river by a force that seems to know no check, and it affects not only the Established Church of England, but the Presbyterian and even the rockribbed little Covenanter organization.

By request of the committee, the speaker said he had chosen his subject, and he came now to it. He traced this trouble very comfortably to the love of God, who chastens those whom He loves. The purification of persecution was cited as evidence that trouble is necessary to purification. The second cause is the effective one of God's indignation. While God has no pleasure in the death of any, yet He finds it necessary to chastise His children in the most intense angulsh of love.

There is still another cause of distress—the procuring cause—the forsaking of the Lord. The church is not doing what she Safety Found in Secret Prayer. Secret prayer is the present duty of the Covenanter Church. It is encouraged by the texts to hope that the trouble will not last long. There are grounds to hope that the test of the Covenanter Church will be a short

The evening session opened with devotional exercises. The retiring Moderator, Rev. D. H. Coulter, of Manchester, Kas, delivered his valeductory sermon. He said that Christ enlightens the world through the agency of the Church, and likened the Church to a city on a hill, on an elevation as a vantage ground, so it can shine far and near. He referred to the fitness of the Church, and said that to say that any of the Bible truths were not essential to the usefulness of the Church was to supplant the wisdom of the Lord by the wisdom of man.
"The maintenance of discipline and loyalty to the truths and doctrines of the Church,"

said the minister, "are essential to the fitness of the Church and so to its elevation.

Must Maintain Its Standard.

"The Church should preserve its high standard," he continued. "There has been too much going down into the world. If the Church takes the broad and easy road it gains in number, but loses in power. Divine truth always encounters opposition from gains in number, but loses in power. Divine truth always encounters opposition from the world. Adherence to truth and doctrine is a measure of purity and elevation and the Church will shine accordingly."

The speaker urged adherence to the ground on which their Church had accomplished so much in behalf of truth. They occupied a position of pre-eminent moral grandeur, and there was supreme need that this position be maintained.

At the conclusion of the sermon nominations for Moderator were received. The names presented were Rev. R. C. Wylie, Ray, Ind.; Rev. E. C. Sproul, of Cedarville, Ind., and Rev. J. M. Armour, of Philadelphia. On the first ballot Mr. Wylie was elected, receiving 24 votes, Mr. Armour 32 and Mr. Sproul 38. The election was after ward made unanimous. The new Moderator is recognized as the candidate of the conservative element, though Mr. Sproul's adherents were also conservative. Mr. Armour was the choice of the liberal or voting element.

J. R. Wylie, W. J. Straub and J. R. Wilson were appointed a Committee on Devotional Exercises. The clerks of the Synod and Dr. were appointed a Committee on Devotional Exercises. The clerks of the Synod and Dr. McAllister were appointed a Committee on the Order of Business.

Liberalists May Leave the Church. The young men who were suspended in December are not sanguine of making their point. They think the Synod will show tself to be wholly given over to Old Schoolism, but they are not cast down and possi-bly get considerable consolation from their bly get considerable consolation from their backing, which is not only very enthusiastic but also considerable, it appearing that there is more or less taint of liberalism in nearly all the churches of the denomination. One of the suspended says he expects the Synod will sustain the Presbytery and refuse to open the case, as they have been preaching in other churches since suspension. As they are able and full of fire they can easily get charges in other churches, but of course it would be no small satisfaction to win their suit before the Synod. In their retirement, if they go, they will probably be accompanied by other able clergymen. Among them are Rev. J. F. Carson, of Brooklyn; Rev. J. C. K. Milligan, of New York; Rev. J. R. Thompson, Newburg, N. Y.; Rev. J. S. T. Milligan, Denniston, Kan.; Rev. N. M. Johnsston, Topeka, Kan.; Rev. J. C. K. Milligan are the fathers of Revs. E. M. and J. R. J. Milligan, suspended.

There was no trouble about locating the delegates, places being found for all, though the conservative members of the church residing in this vicinity will "embless be more crowded than they we do have been had there been no dissatisfaction. king, which is not only very enthusiastic

The contractors, in turn, have even denying these statements as fast as made.

President Barnes yesterday said there was not the slightest truth in the statement that any of the associations were making an effort to get men here from other places.

"The difficulty has been," said he, "to keep the difficulty has been the them from coming. Letters are received every day from men offering their services but for the sake of our old employes, whose interests we yet have in view, we have re-frained from bringing the men here." A Baltimore Man Deceived.

Yesterday, however, George W. Fields came here from Balitimore, intending to go to work for the South Pittsburg Planing to work for the South Pittsburg Plan Mill Company, and as soon as he learned the local situation he changed his mind and re-turned home last night. He made the statement that he had been induced to come here by the firm on the Southside, who rep-resented to him that there was no labor difficulty in Pittsburg. He said he had written to the firm a few days ago, and as a reply received the following telegram: PITTSBURG, May 26, 1891. GEO. W. FIELDS, 1843 Harford avenue, Baltimore

He also left the original telegram which he

A significant break from the ranks of the strikers was reported from the Southside yesterday. M. G. Frank, who has several men working nine hours, was seen last night and he said that the President of one of the unions on that side of the river is working for an official of the Builders' Exchange.
He did not know the man's name, but was satisfied the strikers would know who it is.
An equally important break was forced from the master builders. Contractor MeMasters signed the eight-hour scale within three days after the strike commenced, but previous to that time he had contracted with Watson Bros., of Allegheny, for the brick for the King Building on Liberty avenue. Watson Bros., who are members of furnish the brick, but after seeking legal advice the Exchange advised them to supply that contract.

Favorably Received in Allegheny.

The new thousand-dollar license law was received with almost general approval except by the Mayor and by the dealers on the Southside. The former thought it would increase speak-easies, and the latter said some would be crowded out Mayor Gourley said: "I think it will be a good thing in one way and not so good in another. It is manifest that a double price for licenses under the new act will be very nourishing for the officers of the city, but it will doubtless make the number of licensed saloons much less and the number of speak-easies consequently much greater."

Inspector McAleese says he will tend to the speak-easy part of it. "I have no doubt," said he, "that there will be less saloons. There will be no more speak-easies, however, if we can help it, and I think we can. It has been demonstrated that such places can be kept out, no matter how many want to run them."

J. K. Durr, who has been in the saloon can be kept out, no matter how many want to run them."

J. K. Durr, who has been in the saloon business for 31 years, with the exception of last year, said: "I am heartily in favor of the change. It will have the effect of mak-ing the business more respectable, because it will keep the keepers of low places out of the business entirely. In case it has a ten-dency to increase speak-cases the select the business entirely. In case it has a ten-dency to increase speak-easies the saloon keepers can aid the authorities by organiz-ing for their own protection. The new law will be a benefit to the courts by reducing the number of applicants to be heard each year, and I believe it will be a good thing all round."

year, and I believe it will be a good thing all round."

"Davy" Jones, of Allegheny, said: "I think it is a wise move, because it will make the business more exclusive, and because of this fact a man who has a license will have a greater reason for conducting his business in a more respectable manner. I believe every man who wants a license should have it and if he violates the law his license should be revoked. If it increases the number of speak-essies, as it is likely to do, we have city authorities to look after them."

George Reineman said he was perfectly satisfied with the new law and does not think it makes much difference what the price of a license is.

Angust Bodenhagen, 1400 Carson street, thought the amendment an outrage. "With the Brooks law fee increased to $1.000, the business tax of $100 and the mercantile tax, we are almost driven to the wall. There is nothing in the business any more."

John O'Conner, the wholesale dealer at 1814 Carson street, thought the measure would be a failure as the smaller dealers on the back streets could not stand it.

Thomas O'Shell, at Twenty-first and Carson streets, was very emphatic in his denunciation of the bill. He thought it was a scheme of the most prominent saloon keepers to freeze out the small fry.

JUVENILE JIM-JAMS

Four Little Lads Try Their Best to Empty a Whisky Cellar.

FUN AMONG BUNGS AND BARRELS,

Which Ended Up in a Night's Visit to Central Police Station.

WILL BE LECTURED AND LET OUT TO-DAY

Curied up on a hard wooden bench in one of the Central station cells last night were four little drunken boys. Though their ages are scarcely out of the single figures they had each tried to drink a man's share of John Killhan's whisky and the spirits came out winner. Mr. Killhan's place is at Second avenue and Ross street, where last year he had a wholesale liquor license. The first of May, to his sorrow, failed to bring a renewal of the license, and Mr. Killhan had a well-stocked cellar on his hands. Pending future developments the liquor was left there.

Charlie Rugan, Willie McGuire, Michael Rayburn and Jimmie Reagan, all about 11

An Opening Out of the Ordinary. Like most youngsters, they had a longing to do something different from ordinary fel-lows, and the only opening into the more grown-up wickedness of the world seemed to be the window to Mr. Killhan's cellar. About 9 o'clock last night the four boys met About 9 o'clock last night the four boys met at the corner to carry out their prearranged plans. They knew where the loose window was, and were soon crawling through it down among the barrels and kegs.

In a few moments several spigots were creaking and the lads were pouring down the flery drink like "real men." Quietness did not long remain pleasant as more whisky was poured in. Soon the youngsters started a game of "gray wolf," tumbling over the barrels and knocking down old lars and pans. A dozen new jugs tottered from a shelf and crashed down on a row of half-barrels of Monongahela river water. The boys were using their lungs to add to the din and the people upstairs were frightened badly.

Arrested for Their First Drank.

Arrested for Their First Drunk.

Arrested for Their First Drunk.

About this time Officer Frank Yeager came along and went down after the boisterous youths. To carry four drunken youngsters out of a dark cellar is not an easy task, but it was accomplished at last, and the patrol wagon took them all to Central station. The little fellows were still very demonstrative, but soon after being looked up the liquor began to tell in another way, and they huddled up together on the bench and went to sleep. Willie McGuire's mother came around to the station later, but the boy did not know her, and she went away crying.

All four had tumbled around under the influence of a juvenile jag until they were covered with dirt from head to foot. They were minus their hats and altogether presented a sad spectacle.

"Poor little fellows," said Inspector Mc-Alcese, as he stood looking in at them through the bars, "they've tackled as much as a good many men could stand."

The boys will be released this morning with a lecture.

What They Have to Say About It, No new town in Western Pennsylvania has ever attracted so much attention or called forth so many expressions of approval as Ellwood. A prominent banker who visited the phenomenal town last week,

A newspaper man thus voiced his sentiments on his first visit to Ellwood: "This is a perfect revelation. It is what Pittsburg needs more than any city in the country—a convenient place for people to escape to."

A shrewd and successful retired business

A shrewd and successful retired business man has this to say: "T've bought several lots at Ellwood and expect to purchase several more. It is bound to be a great place. If never saw natural advantages to compare with those of Ellwood."

The sale of property to parties who are already improving it is remarkable, and every day brings inquiries from distant points. Ten handsome residence lots facing Fourth street were sold yesterday to five parties, all of whom will build fine residences, each house to occupy two lots. Work on one of the dwellings was begun yesterday. Scores of buyers will be there Saturday, May 30. The owners will not permit auction sales, but our representatives are always at Ellwood. Send to us for "Illustrated Ellwood Book."

ung Daniel Martin Hurled to Death Down an Elevator Shaft at J. D. Bernd & Co.'s Wholesale Store-He Made a Patal Error.

Daniel D. Martin, a boy employed at the wholesale store of J. D. Bernd & Co., Liberty and Ninth streets, fell down an elevator shaft yesterday afternoon and was killed. For three years he has been employed there as clerk. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon he was directed to go to the fifth floor to bring down some boxes to the lower salesroom. He went up and piled the boxes near the doorway of the freight elevator, which is handled by no one in particular, each employe using and managing it as occasion demands.

ploye using and managing it as occasion demands.

After getting the boxes ready Martin opened the door of the elevator shaft and yelled to those below to look out. Then he began pulling the platform up, and when it reached the fifth floor he turned round, and with his face turned from the door he backed through into the shaft with one of the boxes. As he did so the other employees in the building heard a shriek, and running to the shaft they saw Martin's mangled body lying at the bottom of the cellar, while the elevator platform was at the sixth floor.

Death must have come instantly. The body was terribly bruised and shattered. It was removed to Samson's undertaking rooms and afterward taken to the home of the young man's parents, at the corner of Wylle avenue and Congress street.

It is not definitely known how Martin happened to allow the elevator to pass up to the sixth floor, but it is supposed that it was done absent mindedly, and that when he turned from the shaft he supposed he had stopped the machine and did not look back before attempting to get in.

Daniel Martin was a bright and popular young fellow on the hill, where he has lived all his life, and was highly esteemed by his employers. He was a son of James Martin, who has kept a millinery store on Wylle avenue for many years.
