THE STREET ACTS AND THE NEW COURT.

Senator Flinn and Chief Ellist Roth Well Satisfied With the Results

Controller Morrow is happy over Pittsburg's prospects. He is particularly pleased with the effect some of the bills passed by the Legislature just closed will have on the city. Much of the time of that body has been consumed in passing measures benenoticeable in future years. The Controller has been watching the actions of the State lawmakers, and thinks he could not have been better suited. Yesterday he was making a calculation on the result of what had been done, and discovered that by means of recently-enacted laws Pittsburg will next year receive several hundred thousand dollars more than heretofore. The Controller takes special pride in having the finances of the city in excellent shape, and he is an enthusiast on all legitimate methods of keeping the municipal coffers well filled. In speaking of the matter he

"Whatever else the Legislature has done it has certainly treated Pittsburg well, and the people of this city have much to be thankful for in that direction. Aside from the street acts other bills have been passed that will bring the city nearly $400,000 more income next year than she has had before. Most important among these is the new liquor license law, by means of which we will get not less than $267,000. The Boyer tax bill, making $187,000 for Pittsburg, while the indigent insane bill will bring in at least $12,000. The Biggest Item of All.

"The curative legislation, of course, is the most important just now, bringing to the city about $2,000,000, which could never have been collected but for it. I thing people interested in public matters are all satisfied with the work of the Legislature as far as our city is concerned. For myself, I could ask nothing more. Every bill I hoped would pass got through nicely."

Controller Morrow's views are shared by almost everybody about City Hall. They all agree that Pittsburg is fortunate, having gotten safely out of the street improvement difficulty and with the prospect of increased revenues in future years. The amendment to the Brooks license law will assist materially in furnishing money for the operations of the city government. The city will receive $300 out of each $1,000 license fee. Calculating on something near the number of licensed saloons running this year, the $367,000 increase estimated by the Controller will come to the city next year. The Boyer tax bill, passed near the close of the session, increases the public school appro-priation to $5,000,000. The Cutroller esti-mates Pittsburg's share of this to be $187,-000. Both of these sums will be received gent insune person on city poor farms. Department of Charities, was largely responsible for the passage of this act. The Chief has long telt that the city should not be required to care for insune people free of charge, while county homes were receiving compensation from the State for so doing. The cost of maintaining an insane person at the Poor Farm is not great, but when a considerable number of them are on hand the cost in a year runs up into the thon-sands. Chief Elliot felt that the State should stand part of the expense of keeping these people, and with this object in view the bill was introduced.

The average number of indigent insane cared for at the City Farm is nearly 200. If the State pays $1 25 a week for each of them it will amount to about $12,000 annu-ally for the city. This will not entirely meet the cost of their maintenance, but will be of great assistance, lessening the expenses of the Department of Charities a great deal. Chief Elliot is very much pleased over the passage of the bill. He at first wanted $1.50 per week, but since that could not be obtained is satisfied with the

to Pittsburg, since Allegheny, the only other city in the second class, still holds to its former laws passed before the adoption of the new constitution. While the acts are not of any direct pe uniary advantage to the city, yet they play a very important part in providing a perfectly constitutional method of making street improvements in the future, and lift the city out of the dissolvantageous position she was in after the Supreme Court decided the old laws illegal. A great deal of the Legislature's time was

The new . Common Pleas Court bears an important part in the benefits Pittsburg has received. The necessity of more court facilities has been felt by the legal fra-ternity for a long time. The almost unanimous vote of the Allegheny County Bar Association was in favor of the new court, and nearly all of the better lawyers were mak-ing personal efforts to secure the consent of the Legislature to authorize such a depart

The various charitable institutions about the city did not get as large a slice of the appropriations as they asked for, but all who applied received something. In most cases the amount was satisfactory, and few complaints were heard. Scnator William Flinn, who is credited with having much to do with securing these benefits for Pitts-burg, is very well pleased over the result. In speaking of it yesterday he said:

Why Senator Flinn Is Happy. "Pittsburg has fared well, and I see little room for complaint. Our members had to work pretty hard to secure what we got, as the Senators and Representatives from all over the State had large numbers of bills they were anxious to crowd through ahead of us. Then, we were opposed by some of our own people in almost every move we made. The better class of people, however, who wanted to see Pittsburg safely out of her difficulties were with us. The oppo-sition to the street legislation was at first very strong, but that was because the people did not fully understand the matter. After they found out what the acts meant they stopped opposing them, which shows that Pittsburg's people them, which shows that Pittsburg's people are fair. The new liquor law will raise the receipts of the city from that source from 0,000 to $300,000. That is an advantage Other Pittsburg Legislators feel like Sen-

The jail calendar, which was completed last night by Warden Berlin, is the largest that night by Warden Berlin, is the largest that has ever been made out for the court. There are 234 cases on it. The cause of the increase is largely due to the short time the Criminal Court was in session last term.

The most important case is that of Fitzsimmons and his wife for the murder of Detective D. H. Gilkinson. William McClaren, an Aged Citizen of the Fifth Ward, Commits Suicide. Nesterday was not without its horrors. Between 1 and 2 o'clock William McClaren, one of the oldest residents of the Fifth ward. committed suicide at his home, 23 Chatham street, by hanging himself to the crossbeam of an old-fashioned bedstead. The deceased had been despondent at times for a number of years-ever since he lost his wife, who died six years ago. He has lived in the Fifth ward for over 40 years, and since the death of his wife Mrs. Katherine O'Neil, an old friend of the family, has kept house for him.

Yesterday she noticed a peculiarity about his action. After he ate his dinner he went upstairs, and a few minutes later Mrs. O'Neil heard a noise in his room. Going up, she found him at a wardrobe with th door partly open. She inquired if he wanted anything, to which he replied: "I don't want anything. What do you want

Mrs. O'Neil had scarcely left the room ten minutes before her attention was at-tracted by another noise. Hastening to his apartment, she found Mr. McClaren sus-pended to the bedstead. She alarmed the neighbors, and M. H. Samuels and Frank Totten responded and lowered the body. Dr. Snively was summoned, but the old gentleman expired before the physician arrived.

The deceased was the father of Jehn Mc-Claren, the well-known attorney, and while he was taking his life his son was attending a memorial service in the Uniondale Cemetery. Hugh McClaren, of 1605 Liberty avenue, is a brother. Mr. McClaren was a member of the Episcopal Church, and owned his own property.

They said Mrs. Beggs had a husband Irving at 54 Fourth avenue. THE NEW HAT WAS SAFE.

Why One Little Girl Went Bareheaded in Yesterday's Hard Rain.

Two little girls, perhaps 8 or 9 years of age, were trudging along the street yesterday during a lull in the storm, dodging the occasional drops which fell from the overhead wires, and seemingly lost in the beauties in various show windows. They were not rich little girls or they would not have been walking along the streets alone, and their dresses, too, showed plainly that they got along on very small allowances. As there was very little time between showers yesterday it was not long before the little girls were overtaken. When the rain began to fall, quick as thought the older of the girls took off her hat and placed it over that of her companion.
"There—that'll save it, sister," was all she said. Sister had a new hat, and it wouldn't hurt the old one to get wet. Then they walked along a little more briskly than before, the bareheaded little girl seeming glad to be able to save her sister's new

Adding to the Population

Immigrant Inspector Layton helped yesterday to decorate the graves of dead veterans, but he was at the Union station last evening in his coat of blue to see how many foreigners had reached the city. The number was 62 for the day, most of them Italians and Scandinavians. Thirty-one of the latter went West, the others deciding to take chances in Pittsburg.

"There is no excuse for vandalism," remarked a gentleman yesterday. "The man or boy who steals a large rose from a private yard is mean, but when they take bush, root and all, their moral make-up is as hard to fathom as the opening bud was to Tennyson when he wrote:

"I wouldn't care so much," he said, "if they had left the bushes, but it is certainly provoking to be robbed in this manner.

My roses will be blooming shortly and I suppose they will meet the same fate. You have no idea how the cau't tell who they are. I thought once they might be Italians who live in the

The policeman on the beat is aged, and I notice the young fellows don't have much fear of him. These boys are bold thieves and watch their opportunities while the women are in the rear ends of the houses.

Much Labor Thrown Away. "Some time ago, with a view to making the avenue attractive, I took down my fence and made terraces to the street, which fence and made terraces to the street, which I covered with sod. I persuaded some of my neighbors to do the same thing. Hundreds, yes, thousands of dollars have been spent up there to improve the property. Other people were wiser, and urged the objection to removing the fences that the boys would carry off everything they had. If this thing keeps up I will be forced to put up a high board fence to protect my property. Mr. Heeren, the jeweler, lives on the opposite side of the street, and and he has been greatly annoyed by the vandalism. Last Christmas he had a pretty Norway spruce about ten feet high growing Norway spruce about ten feet high growing in his yard. Some one came along and cut off the top, which, no doubt, was used for a Christmas tree. Some people seem to have no regard for the rights of others."

QUAY MAKES A DENIAL.

He Contradicts the Quoted Statements Made by Ex-Senator Rutan.

Senator Quay and his son Dick were on the limited last evening going home. The Senator was returning from a trip to the Virginia coast, which he said he enjoyed very much, and his health was greatly improved. He said he noticed that Senator Rutan had been quoting him to the effect that Harrison was too cold and not much given to practical politics. He denies that he said anything of the kind. As for June 7, arriving here from the West at 1:20 Blaine, he said everybody knew that he could have the Pennsylvania delegation if he wanted it. He knew nothing about Blaine's health, but the last time he saw him in New York he was quite well. The Senator remarked that the last Legislature was above the average for good work done, and the danger usually is from over-legislation rather than not enough He refused to talk about the fall campaign but he laughingly said that he would like to see his worst enemy get the State treasurer-ship. He claimed that Andrews would cer-tainly serve out his term as State Chairman. On the subject of national politics he said he was not seeking any honors, but he wanted it understood that the committee was harmonious. Clarkson and he are on the best of terms, and he complimented him by saying that he was a good thinker—in short, a statement when the said the said the said that he was a good thinker—in the short, a statement who could be said to be sa short, a statesman who ought to be in the United States Senate.

Dick Quay was asked about his row with Sam Losch. He said it had been badly exaggerated. He thought Losch was too close to the clerk's desk.
"Were you afraid, Dick, that he would doctor some of the bills?" asked the Sena-tor with a smile. "Well," he replied, "I guess that is about the idea."

Russell Says the President Will Run Again If the Party Wants Him,

Russell Harrison, son of Benjamin, and his wife reached Pittsburg last evening on the way to Washington from Chicago. Mrs. Harrison is a handsome and very charming woman, and if the people could see her she would surely atone for the lack of judgment usually displayed by her husband. Russell President's son, and the change of diet from Montana hardtack to the Washington cuisine evidently agrees with him. He has been interviewed so much in the past few days that he was a little nervous last evening. He is very formal in mentioning his

ing. He is very formal in mentioning his father's name and generally speaks of him as President Harrison.

For instance hevemarked again last evening that if the President consulted his own desires and the wishes of his family, he would not run another time, but if the party wanted him for the party wanted him for the result. would not run another time, but if the party wanted him for four years more, they could have him, and he was willing to continue his martyrdom. He also stated that President Harrison and Secretary Blaine were socially and politically on the best of terms, and the newspaper talk of trouble or jealousy existing between them was all wrong. He took occasion to deny the report that his progenitor was cold and distant with his Cabinet officers unless they agreed with him. He claimed the President had the reputation among those who know best of holding frequent Cabinet meetings at which he always invited the fullest discussion. In this particular he is ahead of other presidents.

NO WAY TO KEEP DOWN A LETTER.

The Liberals Don't Find It Such Smooth Sailing, After All.

BUSY DAY FOR THE MODERATOR'S GAVEL

The ghost of that letter Dr. McAlliste How a Compass Tells a Drummer if He Gets attempted to read on Friday loomed up again in yesterday's session of the Re "Give me a room with a southern exposormed Presbyterian Syrrod. At the openure," said a drummer yesterday at the Seventh Avenue Hotel. "If you don't, this ng there appeared to be no indication of renewal of trouble, and the liberals congratulated themselves that they were assured of better treatment than they had expected, but the bone of contention had not been gnawed clean. As soon as the clerk, Rev. R. J. George, had concluded the reading of the minutes, Prof. D. B. Wilson objected to the incorporation in the minutes of the proceedings relative to the letter of the suspended minister, and intimated that if the resolution disapproving of Dr. Mc-Allister's action had been received in the representatives to notify them at which enewal of trouble, and the liberals conlittle instrument will tell me," he added, as "What's that?" asked Chief Clerk Perdu. The drummer took off a lid and there was a compass. "I am a great believer," the commercial man continued, "in sunlight. and I have always made it a rule to sleep in a room where the sun shines for a part of the day at least. You know how people are bewildered with the directions in strange towns if the resolution disapproving of Dr. Mc-Allister's action had been received in the and new hotels. Often when I call for a southern room, the affable clerks frequently give me one on the north or some other side, light in which he (the speaker) saw it, the result might have been different, as the action was indersed by a very small majoras it happens to suit their convenience. I never could be sure about it, and I hit on this little compass. As soon as I go into the room I put it on a table, and I can tell in an instant where I am. More than once

Mr. Carson's Vehemence Brought Out. This speech had the effect of bringing our all the vehemence in Rev. Mr. Carson's make-up, and he opposed Prof. Wilson's proposition, saying that if it were agreed to he (Carson) would insist that the whole letter be entered on the record, together with the name of the writer of it and the name of the traitor so base as to betray the name of the writer.

Mr. Carson continued in this strain until he had nearly a dozen delegates on their feet, each clamoring for recognition, and for a time a man might as well have attempted to talk against pandemonium. Finally, Rev. J. W. F. Carlisle got recognition, but he could not make his speech, owing to the confusion.

Rev. H. B. McClurkin succeeded in getting recognition and he wanted the minutes revised so as to state that the letter had sured. After going over his reports for the week yesterday Tony Barcky said: "The

The Moderator decided that Rev. Mr. Johnston was too personal and pounded him down, though the latter insisted that expunging would place the Synod in a false light before the world.

The Controversy Again Gets Warm.

The Controversy Again Gets Warm.

It was finally decided to expunge from the minutes all that part relating to Dr. McAllister and the resolution of censure, but it was not many seconds until the controversy again waxed hot.

Rev. T. P. Stevenson read a series of resolutions providing for a basis of compromise between the Church and the suspended ministers, and stipulating that instead of the Synod formally trying them, it reaffirms the great principles on which the organization is based. He held that his plan would be fair to the appellants and insure justice to fair to the appellants and insure justice to all concerned.

Prof. Wilson contended that having again and again reaffirmed their loyalty to the church the Synod must take the same action as did the Pittsburg Presbytery. Discipline, he held, is an ordinance of Christ and it is manifestly disorderly to allow libeled ministers to vote on the resolutions proposed. He felt certain that if the trial did not proceed the church would fall. The sustaining "Few know that Mr. Porter could have been Judge several years ago, and if I remember rightly $150 were all that was needed. He was offered several delegates at this price, and I will never forget how he strode out of the room with the remark, If I can't be elected fairly to a judgeship, I won't buy my way to it.' Would, I be afraid Dave Porter wouldn't give me as square deal if I appeared before him? Well, I guess not."

LOCAL PEOPLE NOT PLEASED.

But the is an ordinance of Christ and it is manifestly disorderly to allow libeled ministers to vote on the resolutions proposed. He felt certain that if the trial did not proceed the Church would fall. The sustaining of the Presbytery by the Synod would not eject the young men. All they had to do was to say that they were sorry, but that they had refused to do.

Elder Walter T. Miller, of New York, contended for free discussion, though it take all summer to settle the matter. He moved the Printing Committee have printed 500 copies of the resolution and proceedings of the Presbytery for the guidance of the ing to the fact that it pays to buy for eash. If we buy for cash it enables us to under-If we buy for cash it enables us to underbuy, and selling for cash makes it possible for us to undersell. That's the story in a nutshell; and isn't it good logic? And isn't it good policy, too, to buy where you can buy closest, best? Now we are determined to do a large and increasing carpet and drygoods trade and know there is but one way to do it, and that is to offer you better value than supeone else to not only anote but than someone else, to not only quote but give you lower prices than others. Our low expenses, the fact that we buy for cash and sell for cash only, our determination to do a big trade, that we have no way up, big rent to pay enables us to quote the extremely low prices we sell at. These facts will explain why we can sell you a good, heavy two-ply carpet, in beautiful patterns, at 29c, which others will not ask you less than 45c for and at 38c their 50c cornet. These are which others will not ask you less than 45c for; and at 38c their 50c carpet. These are the reasons why we give you their 65c carpet for 50c, and elegant all wool earpets at 58c worth 75c. And so with brussels—a 65c one for 50c, and beautiful styles of 85c brussels at 68c, and $1 25 velvet at $1 and so on and on with lace curtains and drygoods. Whether you intend buying or possibly are just looking around for intending future purchases, we ask you to see our carfuture purchases, we ask you to see our car-pets, and will leave the verdict with you whether we do or not what we claim.

Dr. Huselton was not there, but the Coroner and Dr. Roberts, the resident physician, met. The former criticised the actions of the hospital authorities severely, but the latter insisted that they had but carried out the instructions of the superior officers, and kindly reminded Mr. McDowell that if he had any fault to find with the institution he should complain to those who caused his discontent.

A DISPATCH reporter saw Coroner Me-

A DISPATCH reporter saw Coroner Mc-Dowell last night in regard to the affair. He said: "I am not seeking notoriety in this matter, but I am very free to say that some-body at the hospital used very bad judgment. In the first place no physician has a right to hold a post mortem except on the orders of the Coroner, unless he is em-orders of the Coroner, unless he is employed to do so by the deceased friends. In this particular case it was neither humane nor officially necessary to further mutilate a body that had been crushed to piecea in a wreek. It was the next thing to brutality to think of such a thing, and so long as I am Coroner I do not intend that the body of any human being shall be butblered to piecea unless it is ing shall be butchered to pieces unless it is absolutely necessary. There is too much of this kind of work done."

A call was made at the hospital. Dr. Roberts said the reason they refused to give up the body was they were not certain the Coroner had authorized it. Continuing, he said: "And I suppose the reason the Cor-oner got so angry was the fact that his un-dertaker did not get the body. The reason we wanted to hold the post mortem was to determine whether the man had died from the injuries received in the accident or the effects of the liquor poured into him."

Dr. Huselton—Well, I represent the Pittsburg and Western Railroad, and I propose to hold a post mortem before we allow the body to be taken away. This is a very obscure case, and we want to know what the man died of.

Coroner McDowell (growing angry)—Well, I represent the people of Allegheny county, and I don't propose to have a man who was crushed under a wrecked engine and kept there for four hours, to be cut to pieces to find out what he died of.
