YESTERDAY'S ASSOCIATION GAMES.

Joe Heideger is crowning himself with glory in the domain of the Kaiser. Under ate of Berlin Joe writes another letter to the sporting editor of this paper and it contains news that will be of the greatest interest, not only to his friends, but to all people interested in trotting horses.

After spreading himself to the extent of several pages about the beautiful scenery and excellent beer to be found in Germany, Joseph deals with the trotters and trotting races over there. He had just landed from Hamburg when he sat down to pen his letter. He says:

"Well, I won three good races at Hamburg, and that was good enough for a starter. The horses I won with were: Alexis, by Francis Alexander, 2:191/. He wen two races for me. The races were for 4-year-olds, and I did extremely well by winning them.

"But my big victory was with Agnes, by Prospect Wilkes. Agnes carried off the great 5,000 mark prize in a jag for me and I made a great hit.

'My father arrived in Berlin on the 13th of May. On the 15th there was a grand lower reception given to the Kaiser, and orsemen of all grades took part in it. The ception was out on the track, and was one of the finest affairs I have ever laid my eves upon. Talk about style and high-toned andeur! All carriages were covered with the finest flowers, and at least there were about 50,000 people present. We had to jog our trotters up and down the homestretch to entertain the Kaiser. He enjoyed it greatly. My mare Blue Bell, 2:21, is the biggest favorite in Germany, and has won more money than any trotter there. She was literally covered with flowers, and so

Rev. Mr. Baxter, the Alleged Prophet, Makes Some Strange Predictions About the English Derby-Frank Ives and Jake Schaefer Quarrel and Come to Blows. (BY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH)

London, May 31. — The Epson summer meeting of 1891 will live in sporting history from the fact that the Derby and Oaks were each won by the favorite despite weather calculated to upset the predictions of the calculated to upset the predictions of the wisest of tipsters.

Rev. Mr. Baxter, the profane parson, who poses as a prophet, predicts that there will be only four more Derby and Oaks races because "the ten-horned wild beast became scarlet colored or red republican and deeply dyed with democratic bloodshed."

But the Jockey Club follows its wicked way unheedingly and even scoffingly. People generally are getting tired of Baxter's bathos; yet Baxter actually has many followers, although he has been over and over again self-convicted as an impudent impostor. The leading members of the London Wesleyan Council cannot be reckoned among Baxter's disciples, for they have such a firm belief that the kindred evils of horse racing and betting are increasing and likely to-multiply as the years roll on that at council laceting yesterday a resolution was passed unanimously in favor of sending a memorial to editors of the leading daily newspapers urging them to discountenance gambling by excluding betting records and racing tips. One child-like enthusiast airily proposed the appointment of a committee clamped with the immediate establishment of a London daily journal which should exclude both betting intelligence and divorce proceedings. But as this would have involved the spending and losing of thousands of pounds, and as nobody present manifested an inclination to provide ways and means personally or by proxy, the proposal did not find a seconder. The nemorial has not yet reached any editorial sanctum in London, and one shudders to think of the reception it will get should it ever arrive at its intended destination. Colonel Shepherd had no prototype in London. The over-immsculae Stead, when he edited the Pall Mail Gazette, was fully alive to the money value of sporting news.

The assailant was Frank Ives, who himself is a great billiard player, and who only a few weeks ago won the title, "champion of America, Schaefer and Slosson barred," from Eugene Carter, in their match game at the H-inch balk line style at Chicago.

Ives and Schaefer arrived here yesterday, and were to play in Rochester this evening. Ives had been drinking yesterday, and he and a friend commenced to play a game against Lew Shaw and Schaefer. Ives and his friend were beaten, and Ives then yelled out:

"I can beat any billiard player on earth," coupling his remark with an indecen; epithet. Schaefer walked over as if to causion him. Without warning Ives pulled back and with awful force struck Schaefer over the right eye with his clenched fist. Jake staggered back and Ives made a move as if to hit him again, when Shaw and others who were in the place at the time, jumped in and prevented the second blow. In the fight Ives' hat fell off, but not waiting for that he rushed out of the place. His cue and satchel were at a restaurant further up town, and these he went after. At the restaurant he left word that if anyone called for him to say that he was gone. It is supposed that he left town on the first train.

ONE TOBIN SUSPECT CLAIMS AN ALIBI

(SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.) JOHNSTOWN, May 31.—This day, Sunday, being the second anniversary of the flood, was observed in a most solemn manner in this city by the thousands directly bereaved by that great calamity. In the morning a visit was made to Grand View Cemetery, where a magnificent column of flowers was placed on the plate marked "unknown." where 800 victims rested whose friends and relatives had not even the poor satisfaction of making the last resting place of their dead. Here several dirges were rendered by the band and the party returned to the city

In the afternoon a column formed, made up of the several German societies and nds, and the march was again taken up toward the cemetery. Once more the saddened people gathered around the place of rest for the hundreds of unknown, and Rev. Dr. Glasow offered a fervent prayer. Mayor Rose followed with an oration, delivered to the memory of the thousands who perished. As the Mayor continued his address, and the fatal hour approached when, two years ago, thousands were hurled by the angry waters to a terrible death, sobs of the deepest grief arose from every side; and when it was announced that the dread hour had come, the great concourse of bereaved bowed their heads, sobbed aloud and offered up a prayer for those now at their feet.

During the day the friends and relatives of the dead, whose bodies had been identified and marked by neat marble slabs had decorated the graves of their beloved with flowers, and many spent the entire day by the graves in silent meditation and prayer, the whole forming such a solemn and impressive scene as has rarely ever been witnessed before in the world.

RIVALS HOMING PIGEONS.

New Castle, May 31.-A queer story co from Spring Hill, Union township, which is authenticated by good citizens, of the marvelous flying power of a big brown bat, which William Hester, of that place, has been training to fly from place to place. Last Wednesday Mr. Hester took the uncanny-looking thing to his place of business in the city, and, having made arrangements at home to note the exact moment of its arrival, let it loose. As near as it could be recorded, the bat made the distance between the two points, which is about a mile, in 27% seconds. When liberated, the quickness with which it starts off in the right direction is wonderful, and its speed is amazing. Mr. Hester will take the bat to Youngstown in a few days, and will try letting it loose from that point; and if it gets home in good time, he will agree to try its speed and powers of endurance with any homing pigeon.

was requested to leave by Mrs. Tobin, as she was going out of the city. He was accompanied by William O. Brien, and the theory is that the two returned to the house after Mrs. Tobin left for the purpose of robbery. The theory further is that they were surprised while at work by Tobin, and in the struggle that ensued the latter was killed and the house burned over him. Videto was arrested in Chicago, where he was working under the name of Hul, and he is known there under several other names. He is an all-around crook, and is also wanted in Erie for burglary. O'Brien is in the Erie jail, and several citizens of this place have gone there for the purpose of identifying him. Videto takes his arrest very coolly, and says that he will easily be able to prove an alibi.

Supreme Court would reverse the decision of the State Court and put him back into the Governor's chair, he had very little hope of such a decision.

The only chance for him lies in the enabling act making the Territory of Nebraska a State, which provided that all residents should become citizens. He thinks this, however, will have no weight against the United States statutes. Mr. Boyd never suspected that his father was not a citizen until after his election, and even then it was the indiscretion of a Democratic friend that let the facts become known in the West.

The meeting was given up to speech-making, the first being an address of welcome by Mayor Fellows. The sensation of the afternoon was a sarcastic assault made by Grand Master Wilkenson upon Lieutenant Governor Watres, who had erred in referring to the mutual benefits derived from beneficial organizations mainly controlled by railroad companies. This evening a secret session was held, of which little was made public. It is believed that the main subject discussed was more harmony among railroad organizations.

Within 12 hours of the sale every foot of the lumber was destroyed by fire. Mr. Marsh claims that no property was delivered to him; the Sheriff claims Marsh bought it, while the creditors, for whose benefit the lumber was sold, are clamoring for their money, no matter who pays the bill.

Zeigler left town about 10 o'clock last night under the influence of liquor. He had taken his gum boots for a pillow and made his bed on the railway track. There being a heavy fog, the engineer who took the Z. & O. special down the road at midnight ran over him without knowing it.

MURDER OUTS AT LAST.

The Slayer of a Virago Wife Confesses After Eight Years.

WAYNE, NEB, May 31.—Matilda Szwald, the wife of John Szwald, who has recently confessed to the murder in California, came to her death in this city on the night of the 24th, or early in the morning of September 25, 1884. At the Coroner's inquest the husband of the deceased woman testified that they had been married about three months. She had been married twice before that. Their married life had been an almost continual quarrel, the woman being of almost ungovernable temper; that she had been more and the property remains a morning star through-ward to us than Uranus. Neptune's diameter is only two escends and a half of arc; he rises a little after 4 o'clock in the morning, and is still in the constellation of the Bull.

Mars, once so large and fiery red, has somewhat drifted away from our interest, farmishing another proof of the old adage about being out of sight and out, of mind. We have waiched the principal planets one after another, in obedience to laws that they cannot resist, draw closer and closer to the source of all light until they have been lost to curview, only to reappear on the other side of the sun to specific the work of the distance from us, being about 2,800,000,000 miles away, so that an excellent op She had been married twice before that. When he returned in the morning he found the door locked, and proceeded to cook his breakfast in a shed near the shanty in which they lived.

That he then called the children, who got up and opened the door, when he discovered the body of the woman, which was hanging by a rope within a few feet of the door.

The story of Szwald was received without suspicion, as the deceased was laboring under a fit of temporary insanity. Mrs. Szwald was a very large woman, and when the neighbors rushed in the body was hanging near the doorway with both feet firmly planted on the floor. Still, the theory of foul play was not advanced and Szwald was allowed to depart and the affair was soon forgotten. The children were Mrs. Szwald's by a former husband, and were quite small.

Mercury remains a morning star throughout the month, but we can seldom see much of him, and our greatest interest in his whereabouts is generally centered in looking him up when he is evening star. The great event in Mercury's career for this year has already occurred, and in his transit across the face of the sun he played a role of considerable importance, the results of which are watched for with considerable eagerness. Mercury and the moon are in conjunction on the 4th, but it will not be sufficiently close to attract any great amount of attention. Another important event in the sun's career for the month is the fact that there will be a partial eclipse on the 6th, which, although not visible in New York, can be seen in that part of North America which lies north and west of the line drawn through the northern part of Newfoundland, Quebec, Toronto, Detroit, St. Louis, and a portion of Texas and Mexico. REGULATING OCEAN CATTLE TRAFFIC.

The English Government Introduces a Bi That Will Meet Oppositi waning crescent finds Venus and Mercury such close neighbors that she calls upon them both on the same day. This proves to us that all these bodies are not very far removed from the sun, the old moon is about to be burned up, as the ancients used to think, and the two planets are so close to the sun that we can hardly discern them with unaided vision. Besides these natural difficulties there exists the fact that the meeting takes place so very early in the morning that few persons will be up to see it. LONDON, May 31.-Mr. Chaplin, President of the Board of Agriculture, will introduce in the House of Commons to-day a bill to regulate cattle traffic on the Atlantic. Jupiter is also morning star, and rising almost four hours shead of the sun, surrounded by thronging clusters of brilliants, he forms the central point of a most beautiful celestial picture. Uranus, as viewed by the naked eye, has no particular interest to us, and, indeed, unless we have been keeping watch of him during the last two months, we can hardly hope to see him now. It is only by comparing his position with that of some of the brighter stars in his vicinity that any trace of him can be kept, as neither in size nor brilliancy does he differ much in glory from his immediate surroundings. His apparent motion is so very slow, owing to his great distance, that it is only by accurate observation that we can see that he moves at all.
