HIS OWN DAUGHTER OFFICIATES.

Governor Lowry Pronounces an Eloquent Eulogy on the Scene.

MANY DISTINGUISHED MEN PRESENT

JACKSON, MISS., June 3.-The people of Jackson, Miss., are aroused to the highest enthusiasm. The military of the State, together with the old veterans, are here from every section. The ceremonies incident to the unveiling of the Confederate monument attracted to the city crowds larger than the immense throngs that filled the city yesterday. Large delegations were met this morning by Mayor Henry and his aides, accompanied by a band, and the sidewalks were lined with veterans and enthusiastic spectators, who gave vent to their feelings at intervals in cheers and shouts.

At 10 o'clock this morning the National Guards of this State, under command of General Billups, marched from their quarters to the City Hall, where the procession formed, and after marching through several streets proceeded to the monument, where the unveiling took place. In the parade was a float bearing 15 young ladies, repre senting the various Southern States.

The Davis Family Represented. '

Then came carriages containing the officers of the Ladies' Confederate Monument Association. Mrs. Haves, the daughter of Jefferson Davis, accompanied by her husband and son, was in this part of the procession. Then followed carriages conaining distinguished Confederate veterans, followed by the organized camps of Confederate Veterans and the remains of half a dozen famous Mississippi Confederate regi-

At 1:30 o'clock the signal was given for the procession to move, while the "rebel vell" issued from thousands of lungs. The Stars and Stripes were carried at the head of every division and likewise floated from the top of the Capitol. Side by side with them were carried many torn and tattered Confederate battle flags.

The stand was erected just east of the monument and in full view of it and over-looking the valley below. At 11:15, when the procession arrived at the Capitol, the vard and the space around the stand was literally packed with the eager crowd; every available place was filled, including the windows of the adjacent buildings. The Ceremonies at the Monument.

The stand was occupied by the 15 young ladies, representing the different Southern States, the participants in the ceremonies and a large number of guests. The space in front of the stand was occupied by the Confederate veterans, and the space at the left by the Mississippi National Guards.

The exercises were opened with music

The ceremonies were opened with music the band, after which Rev. Father H. A. Pickert, of Vicksburg, offered prayer. He was followed by Hen. C. E. Hooker, who, in behalf of the Ladies' Monument Association of Mississippi, delivered a brief, but most impressive address in presentation of the monument to the State, after which, amid the booming of cannon, Mrs. Margaret Hayes, daughter of Joff Davis, pulled the string that connected with the veil, and next moment the white statue of a soldier surmounting the monument was disclosed. by Chaplain Rev. H. F. Sproles.

The re-election of General John B. Gor don as Lieutenant General yesterday by an unanimous vote, was received amid the wildest cheering and enthusiasm. The next annual session of the United Confederate Veterans will be held in New Orleans June

BOGUS VIRGINIA BONDS.

The Presentation of One of Them Lends to a Very Startling Discovery.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.] RICHMOND, June 3 .- Colonel Ruffin, the Second Auditor of State, has recently come in possession of information which lends to the conclusion that there may be forged or spurious bonds of this State in existence and one has been sent to his office recently. It is for $500, and is numbered 775, issued under the act of March 29, 1861. It has all the cupons attached from 1861 up to 1886. This bond was sent here some weeks ago to a well-known man by John B.

When the bond was presented at Colonel Ruffin's office suspicions were aroused, which resulted in an investigation. It was discovered that a bond of the same description, corresponding in amount and of the same number, had been funded under the McCulloch act. Colonel Ruffin secured the services of detectives and traced the history of the purchase of the bond, "It was learned that Bernard Sheridan, a builder of New York, sold the bond to a Wall street broker. Mr. Sheridan said that he got the bond from his foreman, Bartholomew Healy. The latter's story is, that in 1883, while eating the Tombs, a stranger came in and offered him the bond for $5. ### AN EXECUTION POSTPONED.

Edward Blair, Who Was to Die at Columbus To-Night, Is Granted a Respite.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH, I COLUMBUS, June 3.-The Governor has granted a respite to Edward Blair, the Putnam county murderer who was to have been hanged at the penitentiary annex to-morrow night. All arrangements had been made for the execution. The date now fixed is August 21. Blair killed a station agent named Henry for the purpose of roobing the safe in his office. He was an escaped convict at the time the crime was committed. His case has had the full run of the courts and the Supreme Court this week overruled a motion for leave to file a petition in error to the lower court. The object of the respite is to give the attorneys of Blair an opportunity to take his case before the State Board of Parsions, in the hope of securing a commutation to imprisonment for life.

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.] UNIONTOWN, June 3 .- For the first time during three trials for his life Jacob Staup was allowed to go on the witness stand today and tell his story of his trouble with and killing of Alphens Glover. At the time of his former trials the law forbade the defendant in capital cases from testifying in his own behalf, but that disability was removed by an act passed in 1885. His testimony was as follows:

"My full name is Jacob Staup, and I am in my 70th year. I was born and raised in Maryland, and came to this county in 1861. I was in the One Hundred and Sixty-eighth Regiment, and was nine months in the war. My farm adjoined that of Alphens Glover on Beaver creek. On July 26, 1872, I was engaged with the boys hauling wheat, and in the evening after we quit work, I told the boys to turn the horses out in the lot. I then took my rifle and went down the road, where I heard my hog squealing. I met Verdi Glover on the east side of Judy run, coming with the cows. I went on past her, and about 100 yards further on I met Alf Glover with his dogs. I asked Glover why he was dogging my hogs, and he said: 'I will dog them if they don't stay out of my field.' I told him if they did not stay out of his field I would pen them up, but did not want them dogged. He cursed me and said: 'You feel big with that gun.' I said I did not need any gun, and handed the I was in the One Hundred and Sixty-eighth

'I did not see who took it, but I saw Glover had a club in his hand. I had hardly turned around when Verdi ran between her father and me, and begged him not to curse me so. He took her by the arm and threw her away. He then struck me on and threw her away. He then struck me on the head with the club and knocked me the head with the club and knocked me down, and began beating me until I was unconscious. I did not hear any shot fired, and the next thing I knew I was sitting at the foot of an oak tree and my wife was bathing my face with camphor and holding my head, which had a lump as big as half an egg. I did not shoot Alphens Glover, and I am as innocent of that as a new-born babe. I had no revolver with was on the deal. had no revolver with me on that day. Staup then related the marvelous story of his escape; of how a man walked into his cell at midnight and waked him up; how he was lifted up by a rope, and through the roof, and how two men were in waiting and hustled him off, and finally how he wandered about the country for 16 years. The examination of witnesses for the defense is in progress, and the case will hardly reach the jury before Thursday noon.

PLAYED THE PRINCE.

part of the always most-attentive audience gathered in the Court of Queen's Bench when Mr. Arthur Stanley Wilson, son of the millionaire owner of Trauby Croft and the leading owner in the well-known Wilson line of steamers, plying between Hull, London and New York and many other ports, entered the witness box as the first witness for the defense.

Mr. Wilson testified to the fact that on the first night of the baccarat playing at Tranby Croft, September 8, he saw a red counter representing £5 on a piece of paper in front of Sir William Gordon-Cumming. The latter's tableau won, Sir William had his hands in front of him, and he also had another £5 counter in the palm of his right hand. The Baronet, according to this witness, then looked at Sir Edward Somersets, and seeing he held a "matural" and a court card, he (Sir William) at once dropped the £5 counter from his right hand, and was thus naid on both of the counters. dropped the £5 counter from his right hand, and was thus paid on both of the counters he had thus placed on the table.

The Evidence Produces an Impression. This evidence given by Mr. Wilson with-out any hesitation and in a manner which seemed to impress the jury, and which de-cidedly impressed the audience, caused a great sensation in the court room. Contin-uing, Mr. Wilson said that he saw the same thing done by Sir William again the same evening, and that he told Mr. Levett that the Baronet was cheating at eards. Mr. Levett that the Baronet was cheating at eards. Mr. Levett said that was "impossible;" that he (the witness) must be mistaken.

Mr. Wilson added that he then told Mr.

Levett to watch Sir William. Mr. Levett, said Mr. Wilson, followed his advice and he also saw the Baronet cheat in the manner already described. Mr. Levett, upon being convinced by personal observation that what Mr. Wilson said was true, exclaimed: "This

Mr. Wilson said that he saw Sir William cheat again. Cumming had a £5 counter on the table, and directly he discovered that the card turned up was favorable to him he pushed a £2 counter forward with a pencil which he held in his hand and was paid £7. The witness then detailed the subsequent The witness then detailed the subsequent conversation which he had with Mr. Levett in the latter's bedroom, saying that when he told the latter of what he had seen, Mr. Levett exclaimed: "My God, to think of Lieutenant Colonel Sir William Gordon-Lieutenant Colonel Sir William Gordon-Cumming being caught cheating at cards."
Continuing, the witness said: "I asked, 'what on earth are we to do?" To this Mr. Levett replid: 'For goodness sake, don't ask me. He is in my own regiment, and was my own captain. What am I to do?'" Mr. Wilson said: 'I then told my mother of what I had done and mother said: 'For goodness sake, don't have a scandal here.' I then told her that I would have a proper table prepared for baccarat playing so that a repetition of the conduct we had observed would be rendered impossible."

The Game on the Second Night.

The Game on the Second Night. Referring to a question on the subject, Mr. Wilson said there was absolutely no agreement to watch Sir William play on marked on the baccarat table. Continuing, Mr. Wilson said, amid such breathless silence upon the part of everybody else in the courtroom that literally the dropping of a pin would have been heard, that it then came round to the Prince of Wales' turn to take a card, and he took one and said: am baccarat," the card being bad.

Some Very Positive Testimony Immediately upon hearing this, said the witness, Sir William slowly pushed just over the line a £10 counter. It was four inches away from the original £5 counter. The plaintiff's tableau won and the Prince of Wales paid him a fiver, overlooking the other counter which the plaintiff had pushed over the line. Thereupon Sir William ex-claimed: "Beg pardon, sir, there is another 'tenner' here which you have forgotten." The Prince of Wales said: "I wish you would put stakes forward more conspicu-ously," and paid the additional ten. Later in the game said the witness. Sir William in the game, said the witness, Sir William flicked another counter over the line with his pencil.

When the disclosures were made the Prince of Wales questioned Sir William, Mr. Berkely Levett and Mr. Lyceet Green Mr. Berkely Levett and Mr. Lyceet Green in regard to what they had seen of a wrong nature during the playing, and Mr. Green asked to be confronted with the plaintiff. Replying to further questions Mr. Wilson said that from that time until the action for damages brought against the defendants was commenced he had never said a word to anybody in connection with the affair.

On cross-exemination the witness said he

On cross-examination the witness said he had no occupation and that he had been at Cambridge University for a year, but he added: "My father thought it only a waste of time my staying there." Roars of laughter at Mr. Wilson's expense followed this admission. In answer to further questions Mr. Wilson said that baccarat was played at Troby Croft in 1889, but his father objected to it and it was not played there again until upon the occasion of the Prince of Wales' visit in September, 1890. Not Much Gained in Cross-Examination

The cross-examination of Mr. Arthur Stanley Wilson was a process of some length, but Sir Edward Clarke, who conlength, but Sir Edward Clarke, who conducted it, only succeeded in scoring an occasional upsetting of any of the facts detailed in the original story told by the witness. The minor points brought out by Sir Charles Russell were repeated during the cross-examination, Mr. Arthur Stanley Wilson repeating his testimony as to the cheating with the greatest of coolness and unconcern, and, leaning on the rail of the witness box, he gave an illustration of the manner in he gave an illustration of the manner in which several acts attributed to the plaintiff were done. Mr. Wilson's cross-examination was not finished when the court adjourned until to-morrow.

In spite of the roars of laughter which

In spite of the roars of laughter which greeted his relation of his Cambridge experiences, Mr. Arthur Stanley Wilson made a capital witness. In his cold way the youth related, as one of half of a dozen examples, how he saw Sir William Gordon-Cumming, on his side winning, look for an additional counter and only found a £2 counter in an inconvenient position. Young Wilson said that he then saw the Baronet push son said that he then saw the Baronet push son said that he then saw the Baronet push this counter forward so as to add it to his stakes, and then detailed how he saw Sir William paid the extra money which, ac-cording to the defendants, the plaintiff was Dramatic Account of an Interview.

More dramatic still was young Wilson's recitation of an interview which he says took place between himself and young Berkeley Levett, telling how "My Dear Chap" appealed to "My Dear Fellow," and "Old Fellow" stared "blankly" back at "My Dear Chap," and both agreed that "This is too hot." All this evidence and a great deal more young Wilson gave with great deal more young Wilson gave with dramatic tone and gesture, confidentially, as if acting in a charade.

When the court adjourned Sir Edward Clarke, for the plaintiff, appeared only to have reached the fringe of the subject with young Mr. Wilson, who distinctly denied the existence of a compact to watch Sir William Gordon-Cumming during the second night's play, and said that he could not imagine how a statement to that effect hed imagine how a statement to that effect had got into General Williams' account of the affair.

WANT A CITY FORCE

Hotel Men Find Fault With the Private Detective Agencies.

SOME CARELESS WORK CONDEMNED

Mr. Witherow, of the Duquesne, Thinks They Should Be Abolished.

OFFICERS RESPONSIBLE TO NOBODY

The amusing experience of Mr. Chisholm, the Cleveland nail manufacturer, with two smart detectives from a private agency here, who took him for a counterfeiter, produced considerable merriment among hotel men and iron people yesterday. Mr. Chisholm is well known in Pittsburg, and when Inspector McAlcese asked him if he could identify himself, which was perfectly proper, he said with a twinkle in his eye that he knew Harry Oliver quite well, and then he named over a number of local iron manufacturers whom he thought might recognize him in a pinch.

Detective Murphy wants it understood that the mistake was not made by a Gilkin-son man, but by a private from the Holmes agency. Before Mr. Gilkinson was killed these agencies were one and the same. Since then they have dissolved partnership, and Mr. Murphy asks that the right people bear the odium of the blunder. Mr. Chisholm got considerable guying from his fellow nail men, but he enjoyed the joke, and invited all hands to drink, including the detectives.

Wants Private Agencies Abolished. William Witherow, of the Duquesne, said yesterday that such mistakes should not happen. He thinks private detective agencies should be abolished by law, as they seem to be responsible to nobody. The city should have a well organized detective force, and they should do all this kind of work needed. He said also that alleged detectives frequently abuse their neighbors. tectives frequently abuse their priveleges, and resort to blackmailing schemes to worry and resort to blackmailing schemes to worry people and get money.

Chief Clerk Crosby, of the Anderson, spoke in a similar strain. He remarked that they were always willing to assist the officers in their work, but sometimes the business was conducted so loosely that they were compelled to call a halt. He then spoke of a detective who not long ago slipped into the house through a side entrance, and said he had a man in the hotel spotted, and he wanted to go up trance, and said he had a man in the hotel spotted, and he wanted to go up to his room. Mr. Crosby didn't know him, and as his appearance was anything but prepossessing he asked him to show his authority. The detective had neither badge nor papers, and the clerk answered that for all he knew he might be a clever thief and thought it best for him not to go upstairs. The detective insisted that the man he was looking for was on the fourth floor, though he had never been in the house, and he claimed that by listening at the keyhole he could locate him. Finally the watchman was instructed to watch the fellow to see what he would do and he was allowed to go up.

Fired Him Unceremoniously. He took the elevator and got off on the econd floor. He tramped through the ouse unconscious of his guard, and finally opened a guest's room and peeped in. The latter ordered him away. The detective then came down into the lobby of the hotel and sat down. After awhile he undertook to go up the elevator again. Mr. Crosby concluded he had gone far enough, and he requested him to take his frame to the street, which he did in double quick time. The next day a well-known detective called at the hotel and apologized for the fellow's actions. He was a detective, but his manner of working was so slipshod as to excite

"Now what do you think of that for detective work?" continued Mr. Crosby, "We tective work?" continued Mr. Crosby, "We certainly can't recognize seedy-looking individuals without authority and allow them to tramp over the house. The detective who apologized for his man said I had done right. Detectives are liable to make mistakes like other people, and they are excusable, but they should never depart from business and common sense methods if they wish to be successful."

LER&CO KAUFMANNS Great June Sale of Millinery!

Much of the grand success scored by our New Millinery Department is due to the life and wide-awake methods brought into vogue by our enterprising manager. As a newspaper should be a chronicler of all the news of the day, so our new millinery department was turned into a chronicler of all the new styles of the season. A continuous and correct kaleidescope of fashion! Every day presenting a new sight, and the novelties of yesterday giving way to those of to-day; these, to still newer ones brought forth by the morrow,

In this everlasting change of styles the knife that cuts down the prices is ever ready to strike hundreds of comparatively new and fash-
