

"Be very watchful of the house, Cora," was the parting injunction given by a fashionable mistress in Allegheny to a presumobly trustworthy housemaid, as the carriage door closed and she and her husband were whirled away to the station, from whence they took the limited for New York not

The wholesale plundering of the Brunot esidence a couple of weeks since, while the amily were solourning at their country home in Veronia, had made this little home in Veronia, had made this little matron a trifle uneasy and caused her to change her mind and request the maid to remain in the house during their absence instead of taking a vacation and visiting her mother as had been planned. This the maid seemed very willing to do, and it was with a mind completely at ease that the lady joined her husband in the New York faunt.

Lighted for a Grand Occasion

The neighbors all knowing that Mr. and Mrs. Brown were in the metropolis, were naturally greatly surprised on the second evening after their departure to see their use illuminated from garret to basement, and, to see guests in a continual stream entering the house and rapily filling the hand tering the house and rapily filling the handsome double parlors. Through the lacedraped windows could be plainly seen the ladies arrayed in costumes minus necks and sleeves and the more discretely attired gentlemen. Presiding over the assemblage, with bows and smiles, gowned in one of her mistress' pretitest and most bewitching toilets, was the young lady, Corn, who as best she could was imitating the charming grace of the woman whose clothes she had donned and of whose house she was supposed to be very watchful. whose ciothes she had donned house she was supposed to be very watchful. The neighbors by this time began to understand the matter and waxed wroth, indeed, over the imposition on dear Mrs. derstand the matter and waxed wroth, in-deed, over the imposition on dear Mrs. Brown, who, perfectly unconscious of the desceration of her pretty home, was enjoying the pleasures of New York life. Presently the merry strain of music issued from the pariors and on the lovely, delicately-tinted carpet, without crash or aught to protect it. ng was commenced.

Would Not Brook Interference The indignation of those watching the performance knew no bounds at this point, and many were the entreaties made to the lords of creation who were observing the festivity to go and request the revelers to desist and leave at least a semblance of beauty to the carpet and furniture. But the bravery of the entreated enes was not equal to the test, lined to become uninvited mests, with the exception of one, who as-umed an air of bravado and started for the

In the meantime, joility and mirth reached in the height and the company repaired to the elegant dining-room, where, with the family silver, best table linen and cut glass, ice-cream and cake, fruits, candles and nuts were partaken of. Something must be done, the neighbors all agreed, but after the sad experience of the one brave man, personal interference was deemed out of the question, so, with one accord, it was decided to telegraph to the people in New York.

The Wires to the Rescue. One of the number was appointed a delegate and hied himself to the telegraph office, where he dispatched to Mrs. Brown the following: "Corn is in the social swim; made debut at your expense last evening." her debut at your expense last evening."
The telegram, with thunder bolt proclivities, struck Mrs. Brown "all in a heap" as she expressed it afterwards. She lost no time, however, as she and Mr. Brown, with their gripsacks and umbrellas, were passengers on the limited that arrived here the following evening.

Intending their coming to be a surprise they of course had sent no word and were driven home in a cab. Miss Cora, rather languid from the festivity of the preceding night, had not cleaned away the remains of the feast in the dining room, nor had she tidied up the pariors, so it was very tangible evidence of the debut that her mistress saw when she entered, Explanations were not desired, but within 30 minutes from the time Mrs. Brown returned, Cora, with her bandbox and trunk, departed from the scene of all her grandeur. She may find some consolation, ever, in the knowledge that her party has been the subject of more society gossip than any other event that has taken place in Allecheny this season, and that, in her own direle, she has broken all records by the exceeding great beauty and magnificence of her premier affair. The question with the society dames and housekeepers now is which is preferable, burgians or parties, and which tall we will the risk of during the through the entire month from all appearances. The month of roses has always enjoyed—and probably always will—a great popularity among those contemplating matrimony. It is true this year it is nearly cold enough to freeze all sentiment, but that makes little differthis year it is nearly cold enough to freeze all sentiment, but that makes little difference to those actively engaged in getting married, as they have no time for sentiment just at that period. Strange, isn't it, that brides are almost always cross, irritable and out of temper generally on the day of their wedding? In some two years devoted to brides and their weddings, such has been my experience, though an apparent effort is always made by them to appear agreeable for the sake of the next day's notice.

With that long experience of bridal unpleasantness it was quite delightful to come in contact last week at 8 in the afternoon with a young lady who was to become a bride at 5 o'clock and find her, though chad in a bath gown, perfectly charming and radiant with smiles that were neither forced nor stereotyped. The family, too, were all in a good humor, strange to say, and affectionate and merry repartee was a feature of the moment. Proof enough that the new household to be established will be a paradise of joy and pleasure if the groom is gifted with the same joyous nature—and they say he is—as the bride, whom even the worries and anxieties of getting married could not make anything but sunshine.

mr. Aivin C. Dinkey, a prominent young business man of Braddock. The date is June II. The marriage will terminate an interesting and romantic courtship of some eight years duration, and yet the coming bride and groom are quite young, Miss Stewart not yet having reached her 2dd birthday, and her future husband being but two years her senior. However, their engagement was publicly announced not more than a month ago. The affair will be a very beautiful but unostentations one, owing to the death of a young brother of the bride, Robert E., Jr., which occurred some months ago. Invitations have been issued only to about 60 of the immediate friends and relatives. Rev. Samuel J. Shaw, pastor of the United Presbyterian Church of Braddock, of which Miss Stewart is a member, will perform the ceremony, which will take place in the parlors of the bride's home on Grant avenue, North Braddock, at 6 o'clock on the evening above mentioned. The honors will be taken by Miss Leonora Hunter, daughter of Dr. William L. Hunter, of Turtle Creek; Miss Mand McMasters, daughter of Captain John H. McMasters, of North Braddock, both lovely cousins of the bride Miss Lily Boyd, of Turtle Creek, and Miss Minnie Dinkey, sister of the groom, of Braddock, Messrs, John M. Stewart, brother of the Lily Boyd, of Turtle Creek, and Miss Minnie Dinkey, sister of the groom, of Braddock; Messrs. John M. Stewart, brother of the bride; Grant Anderson, Charles E. Dinkey, brother of the groom, and Robert Maginni, all of Braddock. After the honeymoon, which will be spent in travel in the Kast and through the South, the happy couple will settle down to housekeeping in a handsome and well-furnished residence in North Braddock, purchased by Mr. Dinkey.

THE SEASON AT CAPE MAY.

Visitors Already Flocking to the Popular Resort-Blaine Coming.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE DISPATCH.] CAPE MAY, June 6 .- The season at this resort opened with a boom to-night owing to the large crowd that came to attend the railentions which assemble here Monday and continue two weeks. A special carload of delegates came to Congress Hall tonight to the opening of that house, and two special car loads came to the Stockton from New York. A large number of Philadel-phians are here, both at the cottages and hotels. Pittsburgers are few as yet, save among the thousand or more who are here as delegates to the conventions.

The Pennsylvanic Railroad will increase the number of trains and shorten the time by straightened tracks on the West Jersey Railroad between here and Philadelphia Railroad between here and Philadelphia. Through cars are to be put on their road after July from New York. Over the Reading branch, which is the Philadelphia and Seashore line, and which is to be completed by July 20, under a forfeiture for any day thereafter, a more direct route to New York and the New England cities will be had.

At a meeting of the city authorities and a number of non-resident cottage owners, a movement was made toward improving the beach front by a better beach drive. The pavilions, which have been erected on the beach, are models and will afford great comfort. These pavilions are to be lighted at night with are lights hung under the top of the roofs.

It is reported the Secretary of State, James G. Blaine, will spend one month here this season. He will no doubt be benefited, should he do as is rumored, and then he would be near the President, who will probably bring his family here next week for the season.

An interest has been awakened at Reynoldsville and they are aroused and determined to make the coming annual the most interesting meeting ever held in this part of the State.

On Memorial Day Charles A. Ogden, a lawyer of much prominence, delivered the principal address at San Antonio, Tex. He advocated the building of a gigantic monument, which should overtop the Washington Monument, and to be erected in memory of the valor and patrictism of Federals and Confederates alike. The G. A. R. post there took the matter up and extended an invitation to all posts of the G. A. R. and camps of Confederate veterans in Texas to co-operate in the movement. It is said that the movement is likely to assume a national character. On Memorial Day Charles A. Ogden Whaley, formerly of the Sixth Indiana Volunteers, on last Monday evening. J. H. Stevenson, of No. 6, was the orator.

Quite a number of ladies attended the ope neeting of No. 6 last Thursday evening to hear the speeches of the old Seventy-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers. They took great interest in the history of this famous regi-ment in which their husbands and fathers had served.

THE history of the Seventy-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers was pretty fully nar-rated at the last meeting of No. 6. Comrade J. B. Hay was the principal speaker of the evening. The gallant old Seventy-eighth was well shown up. Other speeches were made by Captain Boggs, Comrades Keirn and W. McClelland.

CAPTAIN HENRY SCHMIDT, of Company Fourteenth Regiment, left last Thursday evening for a three months' trip through GENERAL MCCLELLAND has issued an order calling the particular attention of company commandants to the necessity of making up their payrolls, especially in regard to service pay. Endless confusion is caused and many men loso their extra pay every year by carelessness in this matter.

Last Thursday evening Lieutenant Horace Lowry, of Company E, Eighteenth Regi-ment, enlisted in the ranks of happy bene

The ceremonies are to continue for three four days, and a per diem cost of 60 cen per man will be involved.

The date of the encampment of the Second Brigade has been changed from "July 25 to August 1, inclusive," to August 8 to 15, inclusive. The cause of the change is said to be due to a desire to give the Governor's staff and inspecting officers a chance to rest after the fatigue of their duties at the Eastern encampments. The change seems to suit the local companies all right, who, however, if they had a preference, would ask for the encampment at once, as it is feared that should the trade union strikes end soon it will be hard to get a number of the men who are members of companies to leave their work after such a protracted idleness.

ADJUTANT GENERAL MCLELLAND issued an THE date of the encampment of the Secon

ADJUTANT GENERAL MCCLELLAND issued at order yesterday calling the attention of the Guard to the amended military law just passed and approved, giving each company $200 for armory rent. Heretofore companies in cities and boroughs of less than 15,000 pop-ulation received but $100 a year. About 60 ulation received but $100 a year. About 60 companies are benefited by the change. Another new feature in the law governing the guard provides that all commissioned officers who shall have held continuous rank for a period of ten years, or who shall have served 15 years since the year 1861, may, upon their honorable retirement from service, be carried upon the roll of the retired list, and shall be entitled to wear on State occasions the uniform of the highest rank which they may have held.

THE residents of Arnold station, where the Second Brigade will go into camp, do not take kindly to the idea of the soldiers rudely awakening them from their rural quiet, and it was hinted during the past quiet, and it was hinted during the past week that the opposition would yet cuiminate in the refusal of one of the property owners to allow the use of his grounds for the purpose. According to a number of the people along the line of the Valley road it is not the members of the guard that are feared, but the hangers on and camp followers, who are impossible to keep away on such occasions. The coming encampment will present excellent opportunities for patrol work in order to keep the members of the country regiments out of the city. Two raitroad lines and a steamboat landing will have to be watched constantly.

Daux corps seem to be the source of more

DRUM corps seem to be the source of more trouble to the local regiments than all the companies put together. At the meeting of the Fourteenth Regiment officers last Tuestompanies put together. At the meeting of the Fourteenth Regiment officers last Tuesday evening the drum corps question was pretty thoroughly discussed, and the unanimous opinion seemed to be that inasmuch as but two or three of the entire corps showed up for inspection, the best plan would be to fire the entire lotand commence work over again. Captain Hamilton stated that he had been carrying one drummer on his rolls for some time, but had never had the pleasure of the gentleman's acquaintance, and presumed that the man must be dead. Efforts will be made before camp to work up a new corps. In the Eighteenth the condition of affairs is almost as bad, and it is probable that the regiment will go to camp this year with a decidedly small corner on music, as the officers are thoroughly disgusted with the constant wrangle and expense required to keep any sort of decent corps together. Some of the officers in the Eighteenth favor doing away with the corps altogether and hiring a band when music is required.

The Fourteenth Regiment took a good sized

The Fourteenth Regiment took a good sized representation of the local militia to Philadelphia last Friday evening to attend the ceremonies of the unveiling of the Hartranft monument, at Norristown, yesterday. The regiment was accompanied by a number of officers of other organizations. During the past week the officers of, the Fourteenth were considerably worked up over an article that appeared in a local paper reflecting on the judgment of General Wylle in selecting the Fourteenth in preference to other and older regiments in the Brigade, and the credit of the article was laid at the hands of the officers of the Eighteenth. In justice to Colonel Smith and the other gentlement the should be stated that, while the Eighteenth had no opportunity of refusing the trip, like the Tenth had, yet the almost unanimous sentiment from the first had been against it, and a general satisfaction was felt when the Fourteenth was ordered. The idea that a great and growing jealousy is constantly gnawing at the hearts of both organizations exists only in the diminutive minds of two or three petty officers who let no opportunity slip by to boom their favorite hobby. THE Fourteenth Regiment took a good sized

How often we see a lady who called beautiful but for a muddy Lowry, of Company E, Eighteenth Regiment, enlisted in the ranks of happy benedicts, and as a consequence is now receiving the congratulations of his many friends. Mr. Lowry is a great favorite in the Eighteenth, and his brother officers wish him joy in his new departure.

The Eighteenth Regiment has secured a range for shooting purposes at Verona, on the Allegheny Valley Railroad, nine miles from this city, and it is expected that within a week's time it will be ready for practice work. The range will be fitted up with all the latest improvements, including the revolving targets such as are used at the Coleman range at Mt. Gretna.

An election for Lieutenant Colonel in the Eighteenth Regiment will be held on June 15 by Colonel Alex. Hawkins, of the Fifth Regiment. The commission of Colonel F. I. Ruiledge expires on that date, and he will have the unanimous vote of the commissioned officers for re-election. Colonel Rutledge has always been one of the most carnest workers in the regiment, and much of the credit of its present standing is due to his efforts.
