[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.]

BOSTON, June 13.—Another game was wrested from the Pittsburgs to-day by superior stick work on the part of the Bostons, and the supporters of the home nine had to pinch themselves to rest assured that they were not dreaming. They already see visions of the pennant and are inclined to overlook all past sins which the ball tossers have committed if they will only keep up this batting freak. While the batting of both sides to-day was lively and hard, the fielding was unusually poor. The fielders could not handle the ball cleanly; they fumbled a good deal more than is shown by the score and there were lots of times when the spectators held their breath while some fielder was hustling for the ball that had slipped through his fingers.

A Short Lived Smile.

Old Man Galvin's smile only lasted two innings to-day. Then the Bostons began to give the outfielders a lot of exercise and in two innings rolled up five runs, four of which were earned. The visitors hit freely enough, but they didn't succeed in bunching their hits as much as was desirable. Long played a brilliant fielding game most of the time and in the fifth inning made a double play that electrified the crowd, by jumping high in the air and catching a hot liner from Maul's bat.

Browning met with a series of mishaps in the eighth inning while trying to catch a fly from Long's bat. It was a long fly and Browning ran until he thought he ought to be under the ball. Then he turned suddenly, and made a neat back somersault. He started to run again and repeated the performance. Of course he didn't catch the ball, but he did catch a lot of good-natured guying when he walked in from the field.

The Bostons went first at the bat and did nothing until the third inning, then they banged the ball for three singles and a three-bagger and three runs were scored. In the next inning the visitors did some more leather hunting, and the Bostons added two more runs to their credit. Then they took a rest, or rather the Pittsburgs began to play ball and Galvin's arm again found its cunning and for three innings the Bostons were blanked.

They Tied the Score.

The visitors, however, had not remained idle, and when the seventh inning was ended the game was a tie. Beckley had scored one run in the first inning on his own single and one by Browning; a fumble by Clarkson and a hit by Maul. In the third they scored again, Browning taking advantage of a base on balls and a wild pitch, reached second, from which location he easily scored on Mack's timely single. Browning scored his next run in the fifth inning, for dropping the ball in center field, with the assistance of a sacrifice and a hit by Maul. In the seventh inning they tied the score and the Bostons began to tremble at the splendid uphill game the visitors were playing. Beckley hit safely and Quinn's fumble gave Browning his base, sacrifices by Mack and Maul and a two-bagger by Miller sent in two runs and the visitors thought they had first mortgage on the game. It certainly looked so until the Bostons began an argument with Calvin, which won the game for them in the sixth. Hits by Tucker, Lowe and Long and a sacrifice hit by Stovey gave them three runs. The visitors could not break down that lead and Boston secured a better grip on third place. Score:

STILL A GREAT RACE.

The Giants Now in First Place in the League Pennant Struggle.

The contest for the National League pennant during the week has been an exciting one, inasmuch as the New York team have stepped to the front. Amid very much excitement the Giants and the Chicagos met on Friday, both teams standing even in the race. The Giants won on Friday and yesterday, giving them a good lead. The Brooklyns have shown up wonderfully all week, and they are on an upward course, evidently. The Cleveland team continue to play a plucky game and a steady one, though not a pennant-winning one. Philadelphia is dropping down, and Pittsburg is making a sorry and disappointing show. Cincinnati is playing better than usual. Following is the standing of the teams up to date:

J. PALMER IS WEARY.

He Says the Club Is Playing Good Ball, but Luck Is Against Them.

J. Palmer O'Neil, weary, but not foot sore, alighted from the limited last evening. "How did we come out to-day?" the President asked the reporter quickly, for he hadn't heard.

"Boston won."

"I thought so," he answered rather sadly," but we will make some of the teams tired before the season is over. What is the matter with the club? Nothing except that we have struck a streak of bad luck. The boys are playing good ball, and nobody knows how we miss Bierbauer. There are no internal dissensions, and you can say that Manager Hanlon will continue to hold his position. Browning has a lame ankle, and there you have the long and short of it. We are not discouraged, even if the games have been going against us, and with Bierbauer back in his place our luck is bound to turn. When the club comes West you will notice a great change for the better."

PITCHER STRATTON DISABLED.

He Returns Home and Talks of Retiring From Baseball Entirely.

It may be that Scott Stratton will speedily be compelled to retire from baseball playing entirely. Yesterday he returned from the East with an injured arm. He has in some way or other hurt his right shoulder, and he was unable to pitch on Friday.

Yesterday he consulted Dr. Dickson on the matter and the latter advised him to try and work it off. If he cannot do that the doctor advises him to give up pitching entirely. he has to do this Stratton states he will retire from bafeball altogether. He will give his arm a try to-morrow.

He says the team is all right, but that they cannot get down to their best form.

The McKeesports Get There.

[SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH]

MCKEESPORT, June 13.—McKeesport's reorganized team put up a wonderful game today and won from the Climax after a desperate fight. Dunn and Manning, McKeesport's pony battery, did the work in the points for the home team, and their work was gilt-edged as far as effectiveness was concerned.

The Climax hit the ball hard and often, but it was always to the infield where it was handled easily. Dallas, Woods, Rowe and Clark, the infield of the home club, did some of the most wonderful work ever seen on the grounds, between them accepting 13 out of 44 chances offered.

Rose umpired to the satisfaction of every one except one individual in the grand stand, who was promptly called down by the management. Rose is the first regular umpire who has yet been on the home grounds, and everything was run smoothly by him and his decisions were given promptly and impartially. The score:

As Others See Us.

No one player can win a game, or lose one, but his absence from a team sometimes makes a big difference in its success. Such is the case with the Pittsburg club and Louis Bierbauer. The crack second baseman is a winning player, who has been inoculated with Ward's style and methods. Since he has been out of the Pittsburg team there has been a gap in, not only at second base, but in its life and energy as well. The Pittsburgs seemed to realize their temporary weakness in the Philadelphia series and played what was characterized by the local newspapers as a sleepy game. They woke up last Saturday and played with more ginger than in any one of the previous games, but were unfortunate in losing the contest in the twelfth inning. The players, and most of them are stars, have not been doing themselves justice and a decided improvement may be looked for. The team has dropped from second place to seventh since it began its Eastern series. Galvin was hit hard by the Phillies on Thursday for the first time this season. Such things will happen. The day that King pitched in Philadelphia the New York World had a big black headline, which read: "World's Day in the Box." But the baseball readers were deluded thereby. It only referred to the Prince of Wales testifying in the baccarat scandal case. Hanlon had his finger split open at the Polo ground Tuesday while practicing in the field before the game. He will be laid up for a few days. Miller and Reilly have exchanged places, Miller playing at third.—Sporting Times.

THE PRINCETONS WON.

A Great Game Between the College Cracks and a Large Crowd Present.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Princeton won the inter-collegiate championship by defeating Yale in the deciding game played to-day before 9,000 persons. Hundreds of lusty-voiced college men hailing from the classic shades of Old Nassau Hall and the leafy elms of the New Haven campus, with their cousins and their sisters and their sweethearts, if they had any, took complete possession of the Manhattan Athletic Club's baseball grounds this afternoon. Enthusiasm was at fever heat.

During the preliminary practicing of the two teams the rival cohorts of Yalensians and Princetonians let their lungs loose upon each other and the air fairly shook with their howls.

The Princeton tiger seemed to have a little the best of it in the overture, but the "Rah-rah-rah" of Yale came out with a sharp snap every time the yellow-striped animal from Jersey lifted up his voice.

College colors were fluttering gorgeously everywhere. All the young women present displayed the blue or the orange and black, according to their sympathies, and hundreds of little flags and banners waved enthusiastically whenever there was anything done on the diamond that called for recognition or approval. It was evident that there was more Princeton money in the crowd than the friends of the Blue men were willing to bank against.

Young secured the victory for Princeton, pitching a wonderful game in spite of indifferent support. His batting was also one of the principal features of the contest. Bowers was hit hard, but Yale's good field work kept down Princeton's score. Party feeling ran high throughout the game, and the noise made by the admirers of the teams was almost deafening. Score:

Princeton	0 2 1 0 0 0 2 0 0—5
