OPINIONS THROUGHOUT THE STATE AND NATION

With all the interest centering upon the Presidential contest of 1892, which in less than one short year will be in full blast, until yesterday a convention of either of the two great parties in any part of the country had directly and officially announced its choice for the all important nomination.

In relation to the Pennsylvania convention, a small one indeed, but perhaps only the forerunner of others, to lead the way and declare that a Pennsylvania man should occupy the White House, thus really firing the opening gun for one of the most important political contests in the history of the United States. The convention was a Democratic one and the man who was indorsed by the highest office in the land is no other than Governor Robert E. Pattison.

An emphatic sound from Clarion.

The rock-ribbed Democrats of Clarion county, who are so firmly joined to their idols that even when Pennsylvania voted Republican by 80,000 they gave a majority of 1,000 for Grover Cleveland, yesterday assembled in convention to name a county ticket and transact such business as might come before the body. The attendance was large and enthusiastic.

Incidentally and before the striking event of the day, the convention adopted the popular vote system championed by Hon. A. W. Sewley, who acted as chairman, and nominated Jesse Kiehl for Sheriff. W. L. Corbett, delegate to the Constitutional Convention of 1872, was nominated as a candidate before the convention, and the resolution provided for by the last Legislature, and then came the feature of the meeting. The committee on resolutions reported the following, which was received with every demonstration of approval:

Text of the Resolution.
Resolved, That we heartily indorse the administration of Governor R. E. Pattison and recommend him as the Democratic candidate for President in 1892.

Resolved, That we condemn the profranchise policy of the Republican party and squandering the people's money and reducing the splendid surplus left by the economical administration of President Cleveland.

Resolved, That we condemn the high tariff act known as the McKinley bill, and also the subterfuge under the name of reciprocity. We still believe in the Democratic National Convention recommending the National Congress to pass an act admitting raw materials free of duty, and thus enable our manufacturers to compete with the manufacturers of other countries.

As soon as the cheers which greeted the mention of Pattison's name in connection with the Presidency had died away the resolutions were adopted by a unanimous vote, and the young Governor of the Keystone State had the honor of receiving the first official endorsement of the Democratic party to talk with the leaders after the convention showed that while the action had been unopposed, it was none the less earnestly indorsed by the vast majority of the party. Pattison himself disapproved of the movement nothing could prevent him having a solid delegation from Pennsylvania to the National Convention at Chicago.

The Governor Pleas'd, But Diplomatic.
As soon as the tidings of the action of the Clarion County Convention were received an effort was made to secure an expression from the occupant of the executive chair, as a result the following telegram was received from Harrisburg at midnight:

Governor Pattison and his cabinet were working to-night with their coats off in efforts to get rid of the legislation before them. While in the midst of his labors the Dispatch correspondent was granted an audience with the Governor on the subject of the action of the Clarion County Democratic Convention in indorsing him for the Presidency. The Governor was surprised to hear of the partiality of his political friends in Clarion county, having had no information of it except through the medium of the Dispatch. He was asked whether he had anything to say concerning the matter and promptly replied that he was too much absorbed in his duties to have time to justify him in saying anything as to the indorsement given him. The Governor looked pleased, however. Nothing further could be obtained from him, and he soon was in conference again with Secretary Harty, Attorney General Hense and Adjutant General McClelland.

Opinions of Pittsburg Democrats.
Pittsburg Democrats do not attach particular importance to the Clarion county declaration in favor of Pattison for '92. The general opinion of the rank and file of the Democrats in this county is that this county party people had some special reason for desiring to compliment the Governor, and so went on record as championing him for the Presidential nomination, and that Pattison was a Democrat, and could not be named on the same hemisphere.

Those gentlemen who are regarded as setting the pace for opinion and action in the Democratic ranks were not visible at the dinner last night. But among those who were was a Dispatch reporter conversed with Judge Harty, who said of the Clarion county people as merely in the light of a compliment rendered to Pattison. He has no possible chance of carrying the state, which will go for Cleveland. "Of that there is no doubt."

Squire Larkin remarked that Pattison was undoubtedly a very strong man and would have plenty of following. For this part of the county ticket was nominated: Poor House Directors: James Armstrong, of Franklin township; W. S. Eshward, of Uniontown; to the convention's action. Pennsylvania makes a President any day. As far as Pattison was concerned, Governor Campbell, of Ohio, should be beat McKinley, would be as strong a man as Pattison, if not stronger.

An Eastern politician who carefully scans the political situation was in the city yesterday, and he was not making a light, which would also tend to decrease the Western delegation.

Yesterday the Allegheny county delegates to the Republican State Convention met in the office of the late State Treasurer, William Morrison, at the residence of Mr. Morrison. He also declares that John Robinson, of Philadelphia, will beat John Daisei for the chairmanship of the State Republican League three to one. He explained this by saying that the convention is to be held in Scranton, away from the central roads, where he has a high probability of being elected. The Western members of the League will be represented and will favor Robinson.

Legal Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers.
It is contended that while the commission had the power to prescribe the duties of the board, it could not control, direct or supervise the board in the exercise of its powers, nor in the agencies by which or the methods in which the board would perform the duties prescribed by the commission.

It is asserted that the Executive Committee of the board as constituted is the mere advisory responsible creation of the President of the board. Assistant Secretary Nettleton says the department will take no action on the matter until the Board of Lady Managers has been determined by the courts.

A Royal Messenger.
Each man being selected, and agreeing to fight right off was the means of attracting about 200 men to the ring. The principal players were the two men chosen, the referee called time. Three rounds were fought when Ryan said: "Levit, this fight is over. We are not going to fight any more. Let's have a hitting match, our hands are tired." The referee called time and the two men were taken out, and after that all enmity subsided.

HEIRS TO MILLIONS.

But That Did Not Avail to Prevent Their Death in a Swimming Pond.

Drowning of Three Boys.
One a Son and Another a Grandson of the Late John McKewn.

The Heroic Attempt at Rescue
Which was Responsible for the Sad Fate of Two of the Victims.

An Entire Community in Mourning
(Special Telegram to the Dispatch.)

Washington, Pa., June 22—One of the saddest accidents in the history of Washington occurred at Doak's park, one mile east of this place last evening. Three small boys, named Walter Jones, John McKewn and John Chaulis, were bathing in the pond at the park when all were drowned in the deep water before assistance arrived.

It seems that young Chaulis had leaped off the spot which he had chosen for his bath, intending to take a dive, as they had often done before. He must have struck a stone or snag on the bottom, for he did not rise to the surface. He was seen to struggle in the water to save his drowning friend. McKewn seized Chaulis, but in some manner became embarrassed in swimming, his arms probably being fettered by his half-conscious friend.

Still Another to the Rescue.
When Walter Jones saw that McKewn also was sinking, he, too, without a moment's hesitation, plunged after the two. When he reached his friend, he saw that Jones was also in danger. He made a heroic effort to get him out of the water, but in so doing he himself became exhausted and sank. The three little fellows, clasped in each other's arms, at the bottom of the 16-foot pond.

McKewn was the son and namesake of the late millionaire oil king of that name, and young John Chaulis was a grandson of the dead millionaire, while Walter Jones was the son of another wealthy man. The three little fellows, clasped in each other's arms, at the bottom of the 16-foot pond.
