No Law in Pennsylvania to Punish Those Who Attempt Suicide

EVEN IF THEY FAIL TO SHUFFLE. An Old English Statute That Isn't Found in the State Blue Laws. A MISTAKEN IMPRESSION CORRECTED

Someone lately thought he had discovered the the old English law for the punishment of suicide was in force in this State, like my obsolete statutes that have been alowed to die but were never repealed, and might be enforced. The Sunday law of 1794 is sort of moribund, but every now and then there is a spasmodic action, caused some-times by fanatics and at others by meddlers, and every trial only serves to show the absurdity of attempting to run modern life on plane of 100 years ago. But the English law in the subject of suicide was never in force in this State, and of late it has fallen into legrandie in England. It would be strange for the last 100 years the State had allowed opportunities to enrich itself at the excase of suicides and their families to al-ogether slip. Insurance policies are almost reckly paid on the deaths of suicides, and in he case of the noted Franklin B. Gowen a unriter of a million was paid his heirs by asurance companies, and without protest, fall the estates of suicides were escheated the Commonwealth need not levy very nuch taxes.

Progress on the Subject of Suicide. It is interesting to note the progress that as been made in thought and reasoning on this subject, as well as on many others, since the days of Blackstone. Jurists were very ingenious then in framing theories to suit the aims of the governing class, and on this subject, as on almost any other, Blackstone s interesting, but it might be added that ne lawyers nowadays he is a back nun curious love he sets forth. Is is a daily growing belief that people largely own themselves, and that they are not made, as in Blackstone's time, for the State but the State for them, so if life is not worth living to someone, many people are charitable enough to pily the felo describble enough the felo describble enough to the property which they might have largely accumulated themselves. But here is what Blackstone and to say:

Blackstone's Size-Up of Self-Murder. Self-murder, the pretended heroism, but real cowardice of stoic philosophers, who destroyed themselves to avoid those tils ich they had not the fortitude to endure, ugh the attempting of it seems to be though the attempting of it seems to be countenanced by the civil law, yet was pun-ished by the Athenian law with cutting off the hand which committed the desperate deed. And also the law of Engand wisely and religiously considers that no man hath power to destroy life but by commission from God, the author of it; and as the suicide is guilty of a double offense; one spiritual in invading the prerogative of the Almighty and rushing into his immediate presence un-called, for, the other temporal, against the king, who hath preservation of all his subking, who hath preservation of all his sub-jects; the law has therefore ranked this among the highest crimes, making it a peculiar species of felony, a felony com-mitted on ones self. And this admits of peculiar species of felony, a felony com-mitted on ones self. And this admits of accessories before the fact as well as other feloules; for if we persuade another to kill himself, and he does so, the adviser is guilty of murder. A felo de so, therefore, is he that defiberately puts an end to his own existence or commits any unlaw-ful, malicious act, the consequence of which is his own death; as if attempting to kill another he runs upon his antagonist's sword; or shooting at another, the gun hunsts and kills him. The party must be of, years of discretion and in his senses, else it is no crime. But this excuse ought not to be strained to that length to which our Cor-oners' juries are apt to carry it, viz., that the very act of suicide is an evidence of insan-ity, as if every man who acts contrary to very act of suicide is an evidence of insan-ity, as if every man who acts contrary to reason had no reason at all, for the same argument would prove every other criminal non compo, as well as the self-murderer. The law very rationally judges that every melancholy or hypochon-drize fit does not deprive a man of the ca-pacity of discerning right from wrong, which is necessary to form a legal excuse, and, therefore, if a real lumatic kills himself in a ucid interval, he is a felo de so as much as another man.

Possibilities of Punishment. "But now the question follows, what punment can human laws inflict has withdrawn himself from their reach? They can only act upon what he has left be They can only act upon what he has left be-hind—his reputation and fortune; on the former by an ignominious burial on the highway, with a stake driven through his body, on the latter by for-feiture of all his goods and chattels to the King, hoping that his care for either his own reputation or the welfare of his family would be some motive to restrain him from so desperate and wicked an act. And it is observable that this forfeiture has relation ryable that this forfeiture has relatio to the time of the act done in the felon's lifetime, which was the cause of his death. As if husband and wife be possessed jointly of a term of years in land and the husband drowns himself the land shall be forfeited to the king and the wife shall not have it by to the king and the wife shall not have it by survivorship. For by the act of casting himself into the water he forfeits the term, which gives a title to the King prior to the wife's title by survivorship, which could not accrue till the instant of her husband's death. And though it must be owned that the letter of the law herein borders a little upon severity, yet it is some alleviation that the power of mitlantion is left in the breast of the Sovereign, who is reminded by the oath of his office to excente judgment in mercy."

From the barbarism of our good and pious forciathers, which increasing knowledge has delivered us, may the Lord make us trait thankful. iraly thankful.

It is some comfort to know that subsequently our English ancestors relented somewhat, and the Sovereign became ashaned to exercise his prerogative in full, so it was subsequently exalted that the blood of a felo de se is not corrupted nor his lands of inheritance forfeited, nor his wife barred of her dower, and in the time of George IV, it was decided that the practice of driving a stake through the body should be discontinued, and the remains might be buried in the churchyard or other burial ground of the parish, the interment to take place within 24 hours from the finding of the inquisition and between the hours of 9 and 12 at night, but none of the rites incident to Christian burial were allowed.

It was reported that Coroner McDowell and found the law to be in force in this State out his attorney stated that he knew nothing of it. A writer in the American Ency lopedia, states that it does not appear that the barbarous English law was ever in for in any part of the United States even when Legislation Interesting to Ladies. The following bill has been introduced in the Legislature of Pennsylvania, viz.: "Whereas, Baking powders are manu-factured in this and in other States and are advertised for sale as absolutely pure;

"And whereas, Official examination shows them to contain ammonia and other injurious ingredients; therefore,

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Com-monwealth of Pennsylvania in General As-sembly met and is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, that every can or package of baking powder containing am-monia and offered for sale in this State shall have a conspicuous label thereon with the ingredients printed thereon in plain type not smaller than great primer, and any person who shall have or offer for sale without such label thereon shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. "Section 2. This act shall take effect July 1, 1891."

Why not include alum as well as ammonia? One is as injurious as the other and both are used to lessen the cost of the baking powder and increase the manufacturer's profits. The use of alum and ammonia is not confined to use of alum and ammonia is not confined to the so-called cheap powders, and it will startle many housekeepers to know that the bill as introduced in the New York Legisla-ture specified that the "Royal" baking powder though advertised as "absolutely pure" is shown to contain ammonia.

The Scientific American recently compiled from the official reports a list of baking powders centaining ammonia and alum.

Those most prominently sold are give below. Is yours in the list? Sterling, Aunt Sally, Royal, Davis O. K. Miles, One Spoon, Patapseo, Atlantic & Pacific, State,

Atlantic & Pacine, State,
Silver, Zipp's Grape Crystal.
A bill requiring the ingredients of baking powder to be published cannot be passed without a struggle; for such a bill would probably meet fierce opposition from the manufacturers of alum and ammonia baking powders, with a hope that they might continue to make enormous profits by might continue to make enormous profits by palming off such goods as pure.

The fact remains, however, that the people have a right to know what they are eating, and it is well to bear in mind that the Cleveland Baking Powder Company has for years recognized this right by publishing on the label every ingredient used in making their powder. Thus users of Cleveland's Baking Powder are assured of its land's Baking Powder are assured of its wholesomeness, as they know it is composed of pure cream-of-tartar, soda and flour, nothing else whatever.
