

lence and respect for the lunfor Senator, and in the election of the Republican candidate the acceptance of a man who was nominated at the dictation of Mr. Quay.

The State rejected both the plank and the candidate, and a political revolution ensued. The Republican party was deteated in Pennsylvania, its most conspicuous stronghold. It might have been supposed that the leader who had inflicted such a wound upon his party, and to whom it had given so overwhelming an evidence of a lack of confidence in him, would have retired from public prominence. Mr. Quay, however, contented himself with an elaborate defense of his rec-ord before the United States Senate. This was both untimely and inconclusive; untimely, since it came after all possible damage that could result to his character had. been effected by his silence under the grave charges repeatedly made against him from responsible sources through the long critical period preceding the election; inconclusive since he failed in it to adopt the simple and the only course in relation to the treasury scandal that could have made clear his in

The Neglect to Call on MacVeagh.

Had Mr. Quay accepted the suggestion that he should call upon Mr. MacVeagh and the other gentlemen who were said to have been present when his alleged defalcation in conection with the Treasury was covered by Mr. Cameron, to testify in his favor, he would have adopted the obvious means for securing vindication. But this he did not do and failing to take such a course his defeuse falls to the ground and his previous position remains unchanged.

Notwithstanding these facts he still retains the party leadership and his lieutenants, either acting under his direct though hidden command, or only in strict accord with the principles of his school of politics, by the attitude they assumed toward the ballot reform bill, have violated the express pledges of the party, have openly defied the will of the overwhelming majority of their onstituents and have been guilty of a stupid political blupder. The amendments first made by the State Senate Committee to the Baker ballot bill were of such a nature as to transform the very spirit of that measure from one in the interest of free and fair elections to one designed to perpetuate the corrupt practices designed to perpendice the corrupt practices under which the State had so long suffered, and by which these leaders have so long reained their power.

Tricks Which Will Be Remembered.

But those who designed and favored these moundments, and who thereby declared themselves in favor of a fraudulent ballot, will be remembered by the voters of this State, and when the day for a consideration of the qualifications of our public servants shall have come, the names of those who have thus defied the commands of their constituents will not be forgottens For the defeat of the bill abolishing the local school boards in Philadelphia, which was designed to free our public schools from political influence and from a divided and cumbersome control, a Republican Legislature must also be held responsible. The measure had the approval of the great majurity of our best citizens of all creeds and b parties and time was ripe for its

It is well recognized that if any considerable number of the Knights of Ohio, who would otherwise vote the Reof Ohio, who would otherwise vote the Re-publican ticket, should throw their votes against McKinley on account of this plate printer's trouble, the election of McKinley would be in jeopardy, and to say that the Re-publican leaders, including President Har-rison, are anxious to please the Knights, even at the risk of doing something which slightly goes against their secret wishes, is stating the matter mildly. President Har-rison has steadily stood in the way of the removal of Meredith. It is said the printers are willing to forego their demand for the discharge of Meredith and to retreat from their determination to take vengennce on McKinley if the dis-missed ones are honorably reinstated. It is possible that this may be the outcome of the conference which will be asked of Sec-retary Foster by the General Executive Board.
