HE OBJECTS TO THE RIVER FRONT.

THE NEED OF A VOTE OF THE CITIZENS contractors was as follows:

"To the Select and Common Councils:

"GENTLEMEN—As your honorable bodies are already aware, the Supreme Court has striken down the legislation of the years 1887 and 1889 relating to street improvements in this city and have hereby imposed upon the municipal corporation, not by implication only, but by their unquestionable dictum, the liability for the payment of the cost of improvements made under said legislation to a sum which will aggregate not less than $2,000,000. This decision of the Court was aunounced in March last, and as soon as its import could be correctly ascertained, the city authorities, through corporate channels and through the conference and counsel of citizens called by the Mayor in town meeting, took the necessary steps to procure from the Legislature such curative enactment to supply the defects revealed by the Supreme Court as was thought to be expedient and feasible. The City Attorney is now engaged, as directed by resolution of your honorable bodies, in applying the recently obtained legislation to the necessities of the occasion, and, while I believe that the city will through this means derive a very large sum of money, perhaps sufficient to meet the whole liability eventually, the hope cannot be indulged that she will be able from this source to satisfy the impending chains at once or even in a reasonable time. The uncertainty in the public mind, whether or not the new assessments required to be made will themselves be subjected to the gauntlet of the courts and possibly non-confirmed there, may cause many persons to withhold payment until prospective legislation shall have been determined.

The right to obstruct or retard collections To the Select and Common Councils The following is the Mayor's message to Councils referred to in the Council proceedings on another page, in which he gives his reasons for vetoing the Poor Farm ordinance: To the President and Members of Select Council: "To the President and Members of Select Council;
"GENTLEMEN.—I respectfully return to your honorable body without my approval, 'An ordinance (No. 655 of Select Council) authorizing and directing advertisements for proposals to the city of Pittsburg for the sale to said city of real estate to be used for the relief and employment of the poor,' etc., etc. "This ordinance is objectionable in two respects. In the first place it confines the purchase to a river front, and in the second place it does not specify even approximately the number of acres required. Speaking in general terms I believe that the best interests of the city demand that all ordinances, specifications and advertisements inviting proposals for material and work, or for the sale to the city of supplies, apparatus or real specifications and advertisements inviting proposals for material and work, or for the sale to the city of supplies, apparatus or real estate, should be so framed as to open the door to the widest possible runge of competition. It will doubtless be generally admitted that this position is in barmony with the established rules of business, and in full accord with the spirit of the law governing such matters. Such, however, has not been the established policy of this city. On the other hend, the tendency has been to narrow the sphere of competition. As a consequence our streets are paved with a certain kind of material; our fire equipments are confined to apparatus having some exclusive device; and the proposals for the sale to the city of hand for a Foor Farm are limited to a half dozen of people who own suitable property on a river front.

Speaking From Past Experience.

Power and Recourse of the City. "The right to obstruct or retard collection will, in the end, prove beneficial in effecting a quietus upon disputed points and thus determining at the outstart just what power and recourse the city forever possesses. I have myself the highest confidence in the almost every farm in the county inspected by your committee was controlled by a synlicate that held an option on the property it a price less than half that demanded from every dollar of the old assessments by new ones. In the meantime the contractors and those who have supplied them with money, are painfully deprived of large sums equitably due and have no negotiable asset to represent their claims. I am advised and believe that they could proceed in court and obtain judgment, which would bear interest at 6 per centum and require satisfaction by a direct tax levy upon the property of the citizens at the next annual appropriation if not sooner.

"I expect a deficiency at this time from this year's appropriations of about $400,000. More than double that of last year, which, with the above claims or judgments of the contractors, will require an increase of the tax rate from 15 mills, as at present, to not less than 28 mills. Now, this is a heavy burden to impose upon the tax payers at one time, especially as the related benefits are special, progressive and distributive, and not applicable in any jeduitable ratio whatever to the uniformity of the increased tax exacted from the rate payers individually; whereas, if the city should use her credit in the bond market and afterwards collect the assessment from the parties directly benefited, the community is taxed for interest and eased by accumulations in the sinking fund uniformly, and in the end the costs and expenses of the improvements will have been at least paid by those whom law and common sense intended should pay them.

Benefit of the Sinking Fund.

Benefit of the Sinking Fund. interest on them. I was from the beginning in favor of the city issuing her own bonds and paying the debt direct, because the Supreme Court has left no escape from the liability therefor, but I thought with many others that the Legislature, then sitting, could afford equally authoritative and more speedy means of adjusting our affairs than any other means. The weight and authority of opinions, however, developed after more careful examination of all the facts, seem to have no other conclusion than that a vote of the qualified electors of the city will be wild and extravagant prices for land which, for farming purposes, is not worth more than $180 an acref I cannot think that as individuals and in the management of our own affairs we would pursue such a course. It does not seem just to the city. If we must have property fronting on a river the striking out of the restriction to which I refer will not in the least prevent its purchase. But the omission of this provision will extend the field of competion; and, as a result other available farms in the county will be proposed, and at prices, too, if I mistake not, that will compel those who control property on the river front to review their estimates and reduce very materially the excessive values placed on their land.

As to the Necessity of a River Front. est of the proposed loan, while not essential to be discussed at this time, should be intimated to the people, and I think a five-year loan at 4 or 5 per cent interest could be placed now.

Very respectfully,

"E. S. Morrow."

We Can't Well Afford It, "Is it not reasonable to suppose that by such action we might be able to save $50,000 or $75,000 to the city? Is it not worth the effort? But, again, is a river front essential to a poor farm? I have no hesitation in we need the room. If you need anything in the line, it will pay you to see the immense stock, to say nothing of the big cut in the price. They must go. You know what that means. See them at James W. Grove's. stating that I do not believe it is. I know provine such the arminge. If the first part of this argument be true, what then becomes of similar institutions maintained and supported by cities and counties that have no mark streams and rivers? If there he truth in the second, it is only proper to add that it is an unhappy condition of things that makes it necessary to pollute the stream which supplies our city with rater, by emptying into it the filth and sewerage and fend matter that might be used to better purpose in fertilizing the soil. From Cincinnati we have the testimony that a river front is not at all essential. It might be a convenience, nothing more. Artesian wells supply their poor farm with an abundance of good water. From Philadelphia we have testimony of a like character. Boston, Baltimore and Columbus speak in a similar strain. New York says that land fronting on a river is, as a rule, too expensive for farming purposes.

"Thus we might present cumulative evi-By taking the excursion on the B. & O. R. R., Thursday, July 2. "Thus we might present cumulative evidence from other large cities tending to establish the fact that there are many managers of institutions similar to ours who do not share in the opinion that a Poor Farm should necessarily border on a river. Such a location is a convenience, but not a necessity. If the convenience could be had for reasonable compensation it might be well sity. If the convenience could be had for reasonable compensation, it might be well enough to have it; but that such a thing is impossible has been conclusively demonstrated by the experience we have already had. And furthermore, it may be proper to state that within a comparatively brief period of time the available river fronts within the limits of this county will be menopolized by manufacturing industries and growing towns. To such a site, therefore, the encroachments of population will in a few years constitute anew the objections so persistently urged against the location of the present farm. these questions earnestly and in the full belief that they are worthy of consideration. I know that suitable employment should be provided for those who are supported at the expense of the city, but I believe that a farm sufficiently large to furnish pasturage and produce the vegetables required by the institution would supply all the work the inmates are able to perform. For such purposes a farm of 75 or 100 acres would be abundantly large, and in my judgment the ordinance should be so framed as to limit the purchase accordingly. By Mayor Gourley in His Veto of the them practically useless in the performance of manual labor. While the inmates of the insane department possess more physical strength, it will hardly be seriously maintained that men of disordered intellects and slattered minds are capable of rendering reliable or effective service in the cultivation of an extensive farm. It is moreover true that a very large proportion of those who find house in our poortiouse have never had the opportunity of acquiring a knowledge of agricultural pursuits. Being ignorant or the duties of farm life, their labor cannot be advantageously utilized in that department of industry.

Controller Morrow's communication argu-dicate that held an option on the property at a price less than half that demanded from the city. Property that was held by the right following at a SEO to $350 an acre was generously offered by a philanthropic syndicate to the city at $500 or $500 an acre. Taking advantage of the city's efforts to buy a home for her unfortunate poor, these enterprising speculators deemed it a religious duty to themselves and the community to thrust, if possible, their arms into the treasury of the city and take out $150,000 or $200,000 to be equally divided between themselves and the legitimate owner of the property.

"The interests of the city cannot be promoted by the encouragement of this kind of enterprise. On whatever business principles it may be based, however ingeniously it may be explained, in its practical application it must be recognized as a sort of legalized robbery. It simply mears the taking of money from the treasury without giving an equivalent in return. It is a species of spolation to which the public have in a measure become accustomed, but which is, nevertheless, an outrage on the rights of the people. Upon the wild frontier, in the midst of a rude, untutored people, it is no uncommon occurrence for travelers on a secluded highway to be waylaid and robbed; but the plunderers of great cities are the excrescent growth of an enlightened civilization. And what of our second attempt? Concerning one of the properties offered it is unnecessary to speak. The uniavorable comments made at the time regarding it, by the press and the public, must be still fresh in the memory of each member of your honorable body. The party representing another property had, immediately prior to the presentation of his proposal, obtained an option on a large part of the land offered at two-fliths of the price demand d by him from the city. Still another; had been offered to private individuals at two hundred dollars an acre less than the price pet forth in his proposition to the Controller. But one of the farms recommended by your com "Of course, if the curative legislation falls to bring the collections as reported, the city would have her bonds to pay, but the sink-ing fund could take half the amount required to be issued, and she would so far save the interest on them. "It ims been said by a very intelligent gentleman of extended experience in the management of a poor farm, that even male paupers who are able to work inswer no valuable purpose in tilling the soil. Lazy, shiftless and utterly without ambition, they seek every opportunity to escape the very appearance of work. The hope of cultivating a large farm with such labor is vain, deinsive and unsubstantial. Chicago with her 200 acres and 1,709 paupers cannot raise sufficient vegetables to supply her institution. As to the growing of wheat, rye and oats, the experience of other cites goes to prove that such grain can be being in the open market for much less than it, costs to produce it through the instrumentality of pauper labor.
