CORA CRIES IN COURT.

Tears Brought to Miss Wyatt's Eves by Her Lawyer's Eloquence.

FITZSIMMONS REFUSES TO TALK.

He Consults His Atterney and Keeps Off the Witness Stand.

ANOTHER OF THE TRIALS ALMOST OVER Interest in the Fitzsimmons case seems to be daily on the increase. Yesterday the criminal court room was literally packed with eager spectators from the moment the court opened until its adjournment at 5 o'clock. Fitzsimmons seems to have lost the bravade which characterized him during the opening days, and has settled down to a grave and attentive listener. He has grown a trifle paler, and there is now a nervousness in his actions. Mr. and Mrs. Clark-bear up well under their strain, and Cora Wyatt, who has all along put on a bold face, broke down completely yesterday afternoon and wept bit-was shown a bunch of keys taken from Clark, and said it was not customary for machinists to carry such keys. On going from the train. on which he saw the prisoners he found a crowd around Schmitt's store and heard of

Dr. Gaborne, of Homestead, testified to dressing Fitzsimonnous' wound in the lock-up. The wound had been received 12 hours before, judging by its appearance.
Dr. Peerman, of Homestend, testified to iting Clark for hemorrhage of the nose in January. Clark's reputation was good. Character Witnesses for Clark. A number of character witnesses were exstified relative to the money orders he and received from Fitzsimmons. He said the note read: "Inclosed find 860. I will settle for the machine." He denied that he and testified that he settled for the machine, d denied that he had a jeweler's price

Mrs. Clark was next sworn. She said she ad gone to see Laura Snowden about a ma-bine. Mrs. Snowden talked about the hmitt robbery, and said that Fitzsimmons ad given her some lawsley which the given her some jewelry which she sent ay. Mrs. Clark answered that she had one of the jewelry. She was shown a ring, ad said she had had it on that day. It be-aged to a schoolmate of Miss Wyatt. On cross-examination the witness said her on cross-examination the witness said her controls examination the witness said her control to Mrs. Snowten was made on the day the detectives were at the Clark house. She said the jeweler's price list book found at the house belonged to Fitzsimmons, and she supposed Miss Wyatt had taken it to the count to write letters on. Mrs. Snowden told her if she had any goods she had received from Fitzsimmons to get rid of them, as he was suspected of the Schmitt robbery. Miss Annie Lloyd was the first witness of the afternoon. She testified to having loaned Cora Wyatt a ring which was one of the rings worn by Mrs. Clark at the time of her arrest. Witness testified that she never saw ora Wyatt with a watch. Cora Wyatt was then called. Her testimon Cora Wyatt was then called. Her testimony was that her home was in Uniontown, and she came to Homestend in June of last year, and lived with Mrs. Clark, her sister. She came down to attend school at Curry University, to study shorthand and bookkeeping. The watch she showed Miss Whalen and Miss Hastings was given to her to carry one day. It was given to her by Fitzsimmons, and the same evening she gave it back to him, as he was to get a chain for it, and that was the last she saw of Fitzsim. sack to him, as he was to get a cuan to a cond that was the last she saw of Fitzsim-nons until he was arrested. Witness did not know what business Fitzsimmons was in, but supposed him to be mer. She had no knowledge of the jewelry store robbery; when Mr. called at their house he asked to see Murphy called at their house he asked to see that pretty little watch she had, and she replied she had no watch. Miss Wyatt denied telling Miss Whalen and Miss Hastings that the watch had been given her as a birthday present, but did say that she expected to get a watch from her mother. When she gave the watch back to Fizzsimmons it was in her sister's house, and her sister was present at the time.

Warned Not to Commit Murder, Miss Wyatt denied ever being in Fitzsimions' room, and never talked with him about watches or jewelry. Witness was in the house on the evening when Mr. Clark went downstairs, and called up that Fitz simmons was there, and her sister, Mrs. Clark, called out, "For God's sake, Budd, go out; den't kill anyone else." Mrs. Wyart, mother of Cora, testified that Cora was 18 years old. Witness promised Corara gold watch when she graduated at Curry's

Mrs. Ellen Clark, a handsome and mother Airs, Eiren Chris, a handsome and mother-ly-looking woman, testified that she lived in Cumberland, Md., and was a teacher in the public schools. She is the mother of Charles Clark, and visited him during last Christ-mas, having received word from him that he was sink was sick.

At this point Attorney Reardon caused as a something of a sensation by calling Fitzsimmons as a wirness. There was a hurried consultation between the prisoner and his counsel, Major Montooth, at the conclusion of which Fitzsimmons arose, and in answer to Judge Slagle's query suid that he refused o be sworn.
Oliver J. Sturgis and Mr. Hunt testified to Oliver J. Sturgis and Mr. Hunt testified to having known Cora Wyatt since childhood, and that she bore an excellent character. This closed the testimony.

After a short consultation by the attorneys for the defense, Attorney Cox submitted some points to the Court. One was that a wife cannot be jointly indicated with her husband. The defendants could not be convicted of entering a building to commit a felony or larceny, because of the mere possession of stolen goods; again, the defendants could not be convicted unless they received property which they knew was stolen, and there was no evidence of such. Attorney Beardon submitted two points. First; that Laura Snowden was an accomplice, and the law specifies that such testimony must be received with caution, and there can be no conviction unless it is corroborated. Second, that testimony of good character raises a question of reasonable doubt.

Mr. Robb opposed Mr. Cox's points on the

Mr. Robb opposed Mr. Cox's points on the ground that both Mr. and Mrs. Clark had testified that neither had control of the other, so that the points submitted were eliminated. As to Mr. Reardon's points, Mr. Robb held there was plenty of corroboration.

Points Claimed by the Defense.

John F. Cox was the first to address the jury. He called attention to the fact that they had been denied separate trials for the Clarks and Cora Wyatt. The purpose of asking separate trials was that certain testimony would be offered that would prejudice the case against their clients. Mr. Cox maintained that the Clarks and Cora Wyatt were not guilty of the crimes charged gainst them. The Clarks were unfortunate in having Fitzsimmons as a roomer in their house; otherwise their liherty would not now be imperiled. Fitzsimmons had come to them and they rented him a room, not as a matter of triendship, but as a matter of commerce. The first the Clarks knew of Fitzsimmons being suspected of the Schmitt robbery was on the ith of March, when Detectives Murphy and Gilkinson came to their house. The speaker claimed that Murphy and Gilkinson had no right to go to the Clark house, as they had no warrant; they were mere citiasking separate trials was that certain testi they had no warrant; they were mere citizens, with the word "detective" attached to them, and their only object was to gain a reward offered by Mr. Schmitt. The speaker held that Laura Snowden, who had turned traitor, was a self-confessed criminal, and likened her to Judas Iscariot. Mr. Cox closed with a most pathetic appea for Lora Wyset, which caused that girl to cry bitterly and brought tears to others in the room, as stated above. Autorney William Reardon followed in the room, as stated above.

Attorney William Reardon followed in behalf of the Clarks and Cora Wyatt. He covered about the same points as Mr. Cox, and mised some langiter by characterizing Chark as a chattering fool. He said that ander the law Laura Snowden, because of her testimony for the Commonwealth, is a free woman, and cited a decision of the Supreme Court to sustain him.

A Defense of Detectives. Attorney John S. Robb, who has conducted the case for the prosecution, opened with a defense of detectives and officers in general. Mr. Robb then took up the testimony in detail and made a masterly argument to the jury. He claimed that Laura Snowden had been corroborated in every particular. In REMOVE the causes that make your hair lifeless and gray with PARKEN'S HAIR BALKAM.

PARKEN'S GINGER TONIC cures inward pains.

speaking of the Clarks he remarked that it was very singular that they never had any conversation with Fitzsimmons about the robbery. Their testimony, he claimed, was falsehood from beginning to end, and he dwelt on the Clarks' receiving money orders from Daniel Jackson, who was none other than Fitzsimmons, from Rochester, N. Y. The speaker claimed that Fitzimmons was simply away selling the stolen plunder and sending them money for their part of the "swag." As to Corn Wyatt, her story that she only had the watch given her by Fitzsimmons for one day was proven to be false by competent witnesses who saw it with her a week before her birthday and a week after Fitzsimmons had left the Clark house, and that the same watch was among those found buried under the Clark house in a glass jar. Mr. Robb concluded by asking the jury to find the prisoners guilty as indicted.

They were found not guilty, but were ordered to pay the costs. pletely yesterday afternoon and wept bitterly. This happened while Attorney John F. Cox was addressing the jury. The other weaten in the courtroom, as well as some of the men, were moved to tears at Mr. Cox's pathetic appeal to the jury for the youthful prisoner. The Schmitt case is almost at an end. All that remains is the Judge's charge to the jury.

Mrs. Schmifer, who formerly lived at 123 and 125 Schmifer, who formerly lived at 125 and 125 Schmifer, who formerly lived at 126 the morning. She testified that Clark was at her house on January 31. She had known him 25 years and his reputation was good.

Suing for Damages to a Store Wagner Bros., shoe dealers on Main street, Sharpsburg, yesterday entered suit against A M Chalfant and Julius Lauterbach for $200 damages. It was stated that Lauterbach whose store was next door to the plaintiffs', had a sign extending from the street to the house and supported by a post at the curb. May 2, 1891, when Chalfant drove up, his wagon collided with the post, knocking down the sign and breaking the plaintiffs' plate glass window, valued at $100, and destroyed some shoes.
