Mr. Haworth's Orlando was essentially a labor of love. The lines of the character suit Mr. Haworth's genius to a nicety. Tiring of Maryland he decided to journey North, and when he alighted at the Baltimore and Ohio depot it was with the intention of going on to McDonald to work in W. P. Rend's mines. And it was from this point that his serrows commenced. Whether t was that his evident newness to the locality struck a sympathizing chord in the heart of the stranger, or he felt lost in this great big city, and, showing it, set another chord a-twanging in the strange bosom, does not appear, but when Mr. Lynch was accosted by a friendly voice at his ear, he was of fireworks. President Weihe Returns to Find

Many Contests Awaiting Him.

Big Demand for Eight-Hour Marble

Cutters in New York. MISCELLANEOUS INDUSTRIAL ITEMS

President Weihe put in an appearance at Amalgamated headquarters early yesterday morning after spending a week in the West. Work has accumulated on him during his absence until his position at present, counting the difficulties at various points awaiting adjustment, is rather a perplexing one. He spent part of the day conferring with John P. Sheehan, President of the Second division of the First district, in regard to the trouble at Moorhead Bros. & Co., and the indications are that this is the first dispute that will receive the official consideration of the President. The chief object of the conference was for the purpose of putting President Weihe in possession of all the facts in the case and the present condition of affairs at Sharpsburg. The arrangements that are reported to be in progress at the mill under the direction of the firm indicate that an effort is to be made early next week operate the plant with non-union men, but an effort will be made to have the matter adjusted so as to avoid this. Mr. Weihe will be independent, however, still holding that the association considers the scale signed at Sharpsburg, and that Mr. Moorhead cannot now consistently refuse to recognize it. May Be More Trouble at Duquesne. The trouble at Duquesne will not require President Weihe's attention, as Vice President Carney stated yesterday that the fight there is over. All the men have been advised to secure their former positions at once, but here another fight is likely to follow, as there are many men among the strikers whom the firm will not take back new police badge for that city, which will under any consideration. This fact is be both neat and novel. The new badge known to the men, and probably explains why they have made such a desperate fight, and tried to hold others in line with them. Last night there were still some 20 deputy sheriffs on guard, but they will likely be withdrawn to-day, as everything is quiet, no further trouble anticipated, and the only scramble being to get back to work. The big mill is running full, and enough men are now at work to allow regular changes of shift. The three men for whom warrants are out for assault—Blotzer, Breen and Darmin-have not yet been arrested, and in view of present developments it is thought they may fix the matter up, as the firm is said to be back of the charges.

President Weihe will spend two or three days at home trying to arrange Association matters, after which he will go to Steelton, where the real fight of the year is now on, although at no time in the history of the big organization has there been so many tests of such magnitude as now.

General Opposition Anticipated. It has been intimated many times within the last six months that a break would occur, in which one after another would occur, in which one after another would fall in line in opposition to the Amalgamated scale, and it is more than half believed by many that the contests of 1891 are the beginning of this general movement.

The latest report from Steelton is that the colore i men employed in the mill are aroused over a report that they were trying to form a lodge of the Amalgamated Association. Yesterday the following self-explanatory notice was issued by them:
"A rumor having been circulated that the colored employes of the steel company were about to organize themselves into an Amalgamated lodge, we take the occasion to say that we were not wanted at first, and that we will not now join under any circum-

"A COMMITTEE OF COLORED MEN." Beset by Many Difficulties.

Good order prevails among the strikers and strong pressure is being brought to bear to prevent men returning to work, but there has been no disorder. The Steel Company has called upon Chief Burgess Heagy to preserve the peace, but he has no authority to appoint more policemen and cannot get the council of the borough to meet. President Weihe in his talk yesterday said in regard to the complaint of D. B. Oliver that the association discriminates in favor of the Carnegies, that the facilities of the latter firm, which far excel those of Mr. Oliver's, explain the discrimination.

While West Mr. Weihe investigated disputes in seven different cities, and secured an amicable settlement in six out of the seven. At St. Louis the difficulty with Mr.

Neidringhaus remains unsettled. It is reported that there are prospects of the plate mill of the Millvale Iron Works being put in operation at once.

Settlement of the Controversy Over the Wages of Deputy Sheriffs.

The big furore that was raised yesterday relative to the payment of the deputies who were on duty at Duquesne during the trouble at the mill there has been disposed of by a statement from both Sheriff Me-Cleary and an official of the company to the effect that the firm will pay their wages, as is always customary in such cases.

Charles Edward Locke preached the initiatory sermon of the camp meeting, announcing as his text, "Sit Ye Here While I Go and Pray Yonder." It was an earnest presentation of the great theme of prayer. In substance he said: "Some things are discovered to us by reason, while other things are revealed by the Scriptures. Some persons have sought to effect a perpetual estrangement between reason and revelation. These apply the mathematical process to all matters, and refuse to accept everything which cannot be demonstrated; but there are some things which arithmetical formulæ cannot reach. Reason, unaided by revelation could never have given to the human heart the exquisite may given to the human heart the exquisite employment of prayer to pray: He taught His diciples to pray. But it is objected to prayer that God does not interfere in the affairs of men or of the world. The argument is that in the beginning matter contained the undeveloped resources of all life and force and that by processes of analytics. and force, and that by processes of evolution without any extraneous assistance all things have unfolded. Nineteenth century re-search, however, has exploded this long defended premise. Spontaneous genera-tion of life has been relegated to mythology. Life does not come by evolution."

"By prayer," he continued, "God reveals His secrets to His creatures. All Kentucky Republicans Think They Have a Chance of Winning.

C. L. Pullman, the head of the street railway department of the Pullman Company, was in Pittsburg yesterday making some preparation for the convention which will be held here this fall. Mr. Pullman said that a better town in the country could not have been selected for a meeting of street railroad people than Pittsburg. The various systems, cable and electric, down to the old-fashioned horse car, are represented in the city, and he remarked that the visitors could take their choice and make what comparisons they pleased. All the latest improvements in the business can be seen here, and it is anticipated that those who attend .the convention would spend a profitable and enjoyable time.

The Pullman Company will shortly turn out a new style of car for street railways that they think will be a great improvement over the present one. Mr. Pullman made arrangements with President Holmes to run several of the cars on the Citizens' line during the convention, and he expected to see Vice President George Rice, of the Duquesne line, but he was out of the city. He said it was a mistake to have such high steps on street cars, and he knew the ladies complained about it, but he said the cars were made according to instructions and it was not their fault. Horse Cars Gone Forever. "The old horse car," he said, "is a thing of the past. The street railway business has made wonderful strides in the last five years, but it is only in its infancy. The companies that expect to make the money must keep up with the times. Everybody will admit that the present street cars are a vast improvement over the old ones with the small windows and low roof, but the people require something better. We have designed a car which we think will meet all the requirements. The steps are in the center of the car instead of at the end. The car is divided into two sections with a little vestibule between. A passenger in boarding a car can take his choice, and go to either section he pleases. A winding stairway leads to the roof where more seats are provided, and during the more scats are provided, and during the summer a canopy of canvas will keep off the rays of the sun. The gripman will be located on the roof, and the space he now occupies in the cars will be given up to passengers. A railing will be placed all around the top, and it will be much like a tally-ho coach. This is only a rough draft, but will give some idea of what the car will be like be like.

person is sitting near the gripman, he must tramp the length of the aisle, trodding on the toes of other people, and putting them in a bad humor. All this will be avoided. There will be no platforms for a big crowd An Ideal Street Railway Coach.

"Each section," he continued, "will be provided with steps at the vestibule leading to the street. Under the present arrangement much valuable space is lost, and the weight is not evenly distributed. The crowd always lingers near the door or on the weight. the rear platform. The section cut off for the gripman can't be utilized. By putting a place on the roof for him, the space he now occupies can be used by passengers. In case it rains canvas curtains can be drawn to protect the sides on the top. The ar-rangement of the roofs will be such that the sections down stairs will be more airy than the average car is at present."

Mr. Pullman showed the design to a number of street railway managers yesterday, and they were much pleased with it. Some of the cars on the new plan are now being built and will be exhibited in the city dur-present condition of electricity the cable road is the cheapest. Mr. Pullman said that during the day he had been told that the electric system cost 22 cents per car per mile, while the cable averaged from 14 to 16 cents. He claimed to know nothing about either, and is not sure that is correct It is only a question of time, however, until electricity will be the cheapest motive power beyond all cavil.

The property is part of a good farm located in the mountains about three hours' ride by rail from Pittsburg and a mile and a half from the station near a thriving country village. The idea is to build five cottages, four of which will be occupied by the daughters and sons, the fifth by the parents. Fin the center a kitchen, dining room, billiard room and servants' quarters will be erected. This building will also connect with the cottages. One of the porches will be so constructed that it can be used as a tenpin alley, another as a sewing, reading or lounging room. The kitchen and dining room will be used in common. Arrangements have been made between the buyers and seller that a vegetable garden will be provided,
