MET IN A CONVENT NEAR-SALTILLO

The Maiden Stole Away, and Crossed the Border on Horseback With Her

A Pleasant Ontcome of a Visit of a Company of Students to a Nunnery.

She was a Mexican, he a native of Tennessee. The bewitching beauty of the girl and the medesty of the young man attracted the attention of people to the couple at the Union depot last evening. It was the old story. They had recently been married and were going to New York to spend their

"When I was a nun. Frank," the girl said, as she showed her pretty white teeth, "I didn't enjoy such perfect freedom as I do

The remark was overheard and to the excited brain of a reporter it at once conjured up a story of the romantic type. A married noth is, indeed, a rarity, but it is not surprising at all that a man should fall in love with a beautiful woman. She was pretty and mire. Her skin was swarthy, the eyes and hair dark, the features clear cut and regular,

Never Cut Out for a Cloister. She was a perfect specimen of Spanish womanhood with a reguish smile that the cloister could not chain. She never should have been dedicated to a religious life, in the first place, and here is where the mistake was made. It was no fault of hers that she followed a natural instinct, and jumped the high walls with her Romeo.

The story of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Joseph is quite romantic and out of the ordinary. A young doctor in Pittsburg, who was at the station to meet them, and a great friend of the groom, furmished the facts.

"Joseph and I," he said, "met at college and during the summer vacation we went with a party into Mexico to collect the fauna of the country and geological specimens. This was about five years ago. On the road between Monterey and the little town of Saltillo is located an ancient convent, and it was there Joseph met his wife. It seems in Mexico that girls are not given their choice about accepting the veil, but the parents select one from the family to follow a religious life. There is no other alternative and she is expected to obey.

A Rule That Prevents Romance. "The result is that in many Mexican con vents you find plenty of young women who are not actuated by a deep sense of duty. They are there because they can't help themselves, or because they don't wish to disappoint their perents. With this explanation it can easily be understood how the nun in question threw aside vows and con-micrations scruples and followed the teachngs of her heart, and I will say head also. Well, one hot afternoon as we were tramping along the dusty road beyond Monwishing we had something to wet our parched throats, the convent loomed for the old stone building, but found the gate locked. We made considerable racket, en one of the nuns came out. We told her we were thirsty and hungry, and asked if we could rest awhile. She invited us in and we sat on the grass inside of the stone wall. The lady was kind hearted, and she directed the girls to bring us food and drink, which they did freely. I noticed most of the nuns were young and pretty. They appeared to be glad to see a lot of young They smiled reguishly as well as sweetly, and after the awe of the place had worn of the boys took great pleasure in flirting with them. The Mother Superior scowled, but it was no good. The girls dain't see men very often, and they were determined to enjoy the sight while it lasted. I suppose we remained there an hour or more when we returned to Monterey well pleased with the afternoon's

Courting One of the Sisters. "As long as we stayed in Monterey first that I would frequently miss loseph. He would suddenly disaptors for a time, and then are up. None of us dreamed he was courtafter that uz one of the Sisters, but this was what he He was in the habit of meeting was doing. He was in the habit of meeting the girl outside of the wall, and the romantic courtship soon ripened into love. The day we were going to leave he confided the secret to me and wanted me to help n steal the nun out and get her to the order. It was a risky piece of business at that time as there had been some trouble along the frontier, and the country was full Mexican soldiers. I saw looming up behad no desire to spend any time in a dungeon. I knew very well if we attempted it, we would be arrested before we got out of the country. lessed was very disconsolate over the proeet but he said he was determined to take the girl with him to the United States and marry her. I thought it a play-ful fancy, and did all I could to dissuade him. I argued that she was a Mexican and he a Yankee. The chances are the love for each other would soon die out, and their lives would then be miserable. It was wrong to steal the nun rom the convent and take her into a strange and. Above all, the danger of being caugh was too great, and if such a bitch occurred they might never be married. This line of they might never the matrice. In a very un-lappy frame of mind he returned to the North and went back to his college Married to the Mexican Nun. "I had torgotten all about the affair, when, a short time ago, I received a telegram from in Tennessee, asking me if had heard that Frank had married a Mexout that the young man finished his education and then went back to Monterey. He still loved Ynez, the pretty girl in the convent. Frank hired a horse, and the girl made a break for liberty. They started to ride seross the country to the border, but fortunately the trip was without incident. Once on American soil they were married by a backwoods preacher, the bride still wearing the convent gar-ments. She then changed her clothes for a y street costume, and with great they went back to Tennessee. His father was greatly pleased with the daugh the girl's parents of what he had done. No reply had been received from them, and he approved they are very angry. He binks, however, that time will heal the breach and all will be forgiven. It is not often that men have such romantic exper-iences in getting married." Called Down for Neglect.

poverty by their father. Hauff, it is stated, refused to give his wife the necessary medical attention, and would not allow neighbors to see the inside of his house. On last Friday morning an unusual noise emanated from the place, and on investigation by the neighbors they found Mrs. Kauff sitting on a chair with a hitching strap wrapped around her neck and one end of it tied to the ceiling. As the woman is paralyzed and could not have placed herself in that position, the neighbors, it is said, accused Kauff of placing her there. A minister named Snow, of Boggs avenue, Mt. After making the investigation Superin tendent Dean went before Alderman King, of the Southside, and made three informs tions against Kauff, charging him with cruelty and neglect. A warrant has been issued for Kauff's arrest.

D. O. Hayes, Tim Hovey, Albert Sahner, Jeremiah Bunting, John J. Donnery, Sam uel Griffith, William Rieff, John Raesler and Henry Winters, the local delegates to the Green Bottle Blowers' Convention. came home from St. Louis yesterday morning. They report one of the largest, most important and most harmonious sessions of that body ever held.

In regard to the criticisms heaped upon the delegates for accepting the courtesies of the Annheuser - Busch Brewing Company while the firm's beer was under a boycott, the delegates say that it is considered that the boycott has worn off. This firm, it is claimed, gives employment to a large portion of the green glass trade, because they use millions of bottles annu-

By withdrawing from the Knights of Labor, the green bottle blowers have legislated their organization into a position occupied by them many years ago. They were originally known as the Glassblowers' Union of North America, which was changed to the Grand League. In 1874 this was changed to the Improved League. Then in 1886 the division came and the East and West took separate names, but in the same year both affiliated with the Knights of Labor as two distinct organizations. Three years later both assemblies united and remained as a single trades assembly until a few days ago. They will now be known as the Improved League of Glass blowers of America, or at least until they are fully settled. Speaking of the future of the organization Mr. Hayes, one of the delegates who returned yesterday, said: Three Courses Now to Pursue. "There are three courses for us to pursue -to remain as an independent organization or to amalgamate either with the Flints or the American Federation of Labor. If we join the Flints we become an integral part of the American Federation. The Flints have over 7,000 members and $100,000. While we are comfortably fixed financially, it remains for the Auditing Committee to say how much of funds we have. With the Federation we would not surrender our independence as was the case in the Knights. There would not be constant friction on account of a want of control in the management of our affairs." The delegates are loud in their praise of the manner in which they were treated in St. Louis. Tim Hovey, one of the Pitts-burg delegates, was honored with a place on the Executive Committee.

Big Crowd Witnesses the Spectacle Recreation Park-A Festival Day in the Ancient City Illustrated-Vesuvius Eruption, Followed by Fireworks.

A fine evening, and every attending cirenmstance auspicious, favored the inaugural performance here of the "Last Days of Pompeii," a spectacle that has been presented in every country, and everywhere received with much interest and applause. For weeks past an army of mechanics has been employed at Recreation Park, Allegheny, in fitting up the necessary structures incidental to the display.

The enterprise is a costly and hazardous one, and it reflects credit on the few gentlemen who were instrumental in bringing the entertainment here, that the performance last evening was an unqualified success. It is only necessary to mention that the performances proposed to be given here will cost $30,000, and that nearly 400 people are engaged in the representation, to show what the undertaking amounts to. R. W. Barnheisel, Sr., Percy F. Smith and George C. Jenks are responsible for the en-terprise, and their pluck in producing this famous and attractive spectacle is bound to be appreciated.

The body of John Geib is at the bottom of the Allegheny river, but cannot be found. Geib committed suicide Friday night, but it was not known he had done so until last evening.

On the night mentioned George Hoffman and Mr. Marshall were walking along the river bank near the foot of Madison street, Allegheny. Suddenly they saw a man in his shirt sleeves leap into the water. Hurrying toward the spot they saw him strike boldly out through the water. He swam about 50 yards, paying no heed to their cries, but making direct for some barges anchored out in the river.

The men watched him till he reached the barges and then he disappeared under them, and has not been seen since. Searching the bank they found a hat and coat. These were carried to police headquarters, but there was nothing to be found by which to identify the owner.

The police could find no clew to who the missing man was until last evening, when a small boy called at the headquarters and asked to see the garments. He was shown them and at once identified them as the property of John Geib, his stepfather. The boy's name is George Sindser and he is 16 years of age. BREAKING THE MONOTONY.

The Straight-Out Republican Question

Argued in the Court House. Dog days do not appear to be exercising their supposed baleful influence on society this year. The list of marital disturbances that receives attention in the Quarter Sessions Court has grown less and less each Saturday since the close of the June term, and the class of cases heard lately has not been of sufficient interest to keep the lawyers quiet. The monotony was varied on Saturday by W. D. Moore delivering a discourse on the merits of the "straight-out" Republican movement. W. J. Brennen tried to call for the previous question, and in this he was ably seconded by the tipstaves, but Captain Breek encouraged Moore, and Judges Collier and Slagle, with the assistance of District Attorney Burleigh, listened to such unimportant business as motions for continuance in murder trials and the odds and ends that are usually cleared off or rearranged on Saturdays.

ALDERMAN S. A. RICHARDS and Councilman

Harry Lowery and wife, of the Seventh ward, left last night on the fast line over the P. R. R. for a two weeks vacation at Atlantic WILLIAM NEAL, a watchman at the Stockyards Hotel, Woods Run, who was assaulted yesterday morning, was better last night, and will probably live. The police have a description of the assailants, but have not made any arrests. THE Oriental Endowment Order, of Cleve land, O., for the mutual aid of persons be-tween the ages of 10 and 70 years, has sub-scribed to the laws regulating foreign cor-porations and been allowed to establish a branch office at Allegheny.

HE DIDN'T HAVE THE TIME. Showing That Not Everyone With a Chain Has a Watch. It happened on the Sixth street bridge yesterday morning. The two individuals interested had been leaning over the rail looking down at the scaffolding now being erected round the central pier. One of them rejoiced in the possession of a some what ostentations watchguard which would not have been out of place as a dog chain. The other evidently spent his spare cash in other ways—principally at the nearest saloon. Approaching the man with the chain he observed:

"Might I ask you what time it is?" "Certainly, you might," replied he of the chain. The first speaker stepped back a yard or so and waited. The chain man, however, made no attempt at declaring the hour. To him again the other said:

"What time might it be, sir?"

"It might be midnight," came the cheerful response, "but 'tisn't."

"Look here, sir," yelled the querist, "can't you tell me the time when I ask

"Sometimes I can and sometimes I can't." replied the man with the chain. "Just now I can't as my ticker's with my uncle. See?" and he held out the big chain with a latchkey attached to its business end. Then the pair started for Allegheny, and five minutes later they might have been noticed in a Federal street saloon "setting 'em up" rapid succession.

CUT IN THE BACCARAT STYLE.

A Southside Doctor Who Is Bound to Keep Up-With the Fashion.

A prominent Southside physician starts Tuesday for a visit to Canada. Preparatory to the trip he visited a barber shop yesterday and had his auburn locks and beard trimmed in the latest style, but his appearance is so comical that it called forth various remarks from his friends. "Oh," said he, last even-ing, "don't ye know, me boy,, I will be in Canada in a few days, ye know, and I have the latest cut, ye know."

"What do you call it?" asked a friend.
"Oh, it is the baccarat cut, me boy, patterned after His Royal Highness, ye know all the style in London, me boy."

DRUGGED AND ROBBED.

John Riffle Accepts a Drink of Whisky and Is Relieved of $85. John R. Riffle, an ageut for Gregor Meyers, a liquor dealer of Ohio and Madison streets, Allegheny, reported to police head-quarters at an early hour this morning that he had been robbed of $85 while traveling from Johnstown to this city.

He stated that a young man approached him on the train, gave his avocation as a representative of E. L. Wagner, a cigar dealer of 324 Market street, Harrisburg, and offered him a drink of whisky. The drink almost made Riffle insensible, and while in this condition $85 was taken from his pocket-

SHARON STIRRED UP

Over a Quarrel Between Two Well-Known Citizens-One Hits the Other With an Inkstand-An Elder Deposed From His

The good people of Sharon, in Moon ownship are again greatly torn up over a rouble, not only in the church, but in an odd Fellows' lodge as well, and some of ention must have been engendered by the unlocking of the oil and gas treasures of the township, during the past two years. It has brought them much lucre, but the some of them sigh for the serene days between 1817, when Rev. Andrew says as far as he could learn from the near the township, during the past two years. It McDonald started the Presbyterian Church, McDonald started the Presbyterian Church, and 1889. For 72 years they farmed their land, tended their heards, were marrying and giving in marriage and life, though uneventful, was happy. They were noted as a God-fearing people who lived simply and generally died at a ripe old age. Almost every one belonged to church and the late Rev. Samuel C. Jennings knew the outgoings and incommings of all the people of the settlement during his pastorage of half a century over this little Areadia.

The church still holds its sway and there are few men about Sharon who are not mem-are few men about Sharon who are not mem-bers thereof or Odd Fellows. But of late troubles seem disposed to grow like weeds. Things went along smoothly until about three weeks ago, when a controversy sprang up in some way in Acme Lodge, I. O. O. F. up in some way in Acme Lodge, I. O. O. F.

Just what it was about outsiders do not seem to know, but, as the story runs, Messrs. D. A. Wiegle and Jacob Sefler have not been overly friendly for two years and they collided in the lodge.
It is said that Mr. Sefler, a very good citizen, but said to be good citizen, but said to be quick tempered, carried away by his wrath, caught up a heavy glass inkstand and hurled it with violence against Mr. Weigle's head, cutting an ugly gash thereon and making the claret flow freely. Friends interfered and the trouble seemed to have been settled, but subsequently the matter was reported to the church and Mr. Sefler being an elder it was deemed a duty to investigate him. A session was called and he was tried. As a result Mr. Sefler has been deposed from his office as an elder, has been deposed from his omce as an enter, the announcement being made last Sunday. Mr. Sefler appears to get enough sympa-thy in the neighborhood to soothe him. He is regarded as an excellent man, but one who is liable to lose his equanimity temporarily when roused and trust to the tim being more to the arm of flesh than to the sword of the spirit. The affair has cast a gloom over the church, as there are some outside scoffers who, as St. Peter predicted, should "come in the last days, walking after their own lusts," and who are inclined o make merry over the mishap

BOTH SOCIETIES TOOK A HAND. Anti-Cruelty People Intervene in a Case Humane Men Had Investigated,

Mrs. Nelson, of Alpine avenue, Allegheny, called at the Humane Society offices yesterday to see if she could not recover an adopted child aged 4 years which she says was taken from her by Superintendent Dean, of the Anti-Cruelty Society, on achem begin to think that the spirit of con- count of alleged abuse and ill-treatment. On June 9 last a complaint was made to the Humane Society accusing Mrs. Nelson of abusing the chifd, which was her nicee. says as lar as he cound learn from the hear neighbors of Mrs. Nelson the charge was true. He says he found the woman to be poor and keeping a little candy shop. The child, he says, had plenty to eat and clothes to wear, but Mrs. Nelson in reprimanding it sometimes appeared to be a little too severe. On account of the cir-cumstances she was in, suit was not entered, but she was given warning not to be cruel to the child. A few days ago it is said Superintendent Dean, of the Anti-Cruelty Society, took charge of the case, and entered suit against Mrs. Nelson before Alderman Warner. A hearing was held last Tuesday evening, and Mrs. Nelson was fined $10 and costs, in all amounting to $22. This, the woman says, took every cent she had, and left her pen less. On Friday she says Superintendent Dean called at her house and took the child away. She thinks that Superintendent Dean has been too severe on her, and applied to the Humane Society to institute proceedings for the recovery of the child.

Agent O'Brien, of the Humane Society, said they could not take hold of the case,
and advised her to consult an attorney.
