

THE PITTSBURGH DISPATCH

Of the Country Has Greatly Stimulated the Demand For ALL AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

Allegheny County Farmers Depend on the West for Tools.

STEEL RAILS ARE SOLD FAR AHEAD

Among the many beneficiaries to trade springing from the great crops has been the unusually active season for agricultural implements. All Pittsburgh dealers in these implements report a record for the history of the trade. Last year, and in fact for a number of years, the sharp competition between the representatives of competitors, buyers and sellers, has resulted in cutting prices in order to effect sales. This year there is no record of cutting, as the goods sell themselves.

The agricultural implements handled in Allegheny county are most part built in Ohio cities—Canton, Massillon, Springfield and Dayton having the lead in this line. Several of these manufacturers have their branch industries in Pittsburgh have proved abroad, but it is difficult to discover the reasons therefor. It is much more common to see steel cut into the construction of agricultural machinery, with the exception of plow and harrow implements required by the Allegheny county farmers and manufacturers at points westward.

The local steel and steel plant managers to build the field, and not only supplies the sections of the field, but also extends beyond to the farthest South and West. The Allegheny county farmers are dependent on the West for their harrows, mowers, corn planters, binders and wagons. Things ought to be better, but the good season why all these articles should be made at the center of the iron and steel industry is not clear.

The Edgar Thomson works of a week's work at the Edgar Thomson works of a week's work at 15,000 tons of metal had been produced, and 14,000 tons of steel rails in the blast. All of the nine furnaces are in blast, and the steel works are running at full capacity. The Edgar Thomson works are running at full capacity, and the Edgar Thomson works are running at full capacity.

AN EARLY BULGE

Speculators in Grain and Provisions Who Failed to Take Advantage of It Are Very Badly—A Big Slump All Along. CHICAGO—The wheat market opened strong with shorts anxious and excited buyers, and their bidding caused the market to shoot upward at the outset; but this movement was not sustained, and the market gradually fell to the level of the previous day.
