The Preliminary Movements of the Big Buckeye Campaign.

CAMPBELL IS STILL CONFIDENT,

But All the Signs Indicate the Success of Major Mckinley.

FORAKER IN THE LEAD FOR SENATOR

ISPECIAL TRUEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. I COLUMBUS, Aug. 2.-There is a great deal of uncertainty and misinformation about the political outlook in Ohio. Both of the parties have their tickets in the field and each is waiting for the other to make a move. The campaign is backward. There is not much promise of oratorical pyrotechnics or glittering parade before the first of September. If anything, the Republicans are taking the lead. They generally do in

The Democratic Commi tee has made no move as vet toward vote-getting, except the display of energy ing everything and addressing as many public gatherings as he can reach. The inermation is given out at the Executive office that the State Committee will not get down to work for two or three weeks. This lack of energy is commented upon ad-

LOOKING OVER THE GROUND.

Campbell and his supporters are said to be measuring the character of the campaign which they will be able to carry out. There are hints that needed funds which were expected are not forthcoming from the sources anticipated. The Eastern magnates do not like the silver plank in the Democratic platform, and Campbell has been hedging in the past few days on this issue, much to the discust of the platform makers.

James E. Neal, Chairman of the Demoeratic committee, is a believer in short and decisive campaigns. He piloted Campbell to victory in the last contest and much dependence is placed in his ability to manage. He is not cut on a small pattern and his ability is recognized by all who know him. His political opponents would rather have troublesome than he, for a field marshal

A DENIAND FOR THE MAJOR.

Major McKinley was in Columbus Fri-day and Saturday familiarizing himself with the preliminaries of the campaign. The correspondence which has been received at headquarters indicated a heavy draft on his sowers for the next three months. There were requests for his presence at Grand Army reunions, fairs and other events in Army remnons, have and other events in sufficient number to engage his time for a year were he to accept all. His desire to do as much as possible caused a postponement of the regular campaign opening to a ter date than he had expected.

Since Loupette's death it has developed and will work in harmony with the Chair-

NOT AFRAID OF THE ALLIANCE. The club work has developed this early in the campaign, according to the best evicharges to be gathered from Republican reserces, that the Altiance or farmers' movement will have little if any appreciable effect on the Republican vote. This has been noted more especially in the counties of the northwest, where rural clubs are being organized, and it is found the Republileds of Alliance sentiment there is not the least trouble in getting the entire Republican force to enroll themselves in the clubs of the League. Reports from the other sections of the State indicate a similar condi-tion, hence they conclude the party has but little to fear from this source.

The Republicans are also encouraged by the turn which has taken place generally in sentiment among the farmers, and they asert an assurance that they will not suffer a any degree at the hands of the third party should there be a ticket placed in the field at Springfield next week. Considerable has been said about the wool men being estisted over the results and workings of the McKiniey bill, and that they cannot be counted upon for support of the Republican eket. Major McKinley stated he had en over the State considerably, and had been in consultation with the leading wool near, and they are perfectly satisfied with ituation. He says they realize they would be getting were it not for the provis-ions of his bill. Under the old system of

The more enthusiastic Campbell men are full of hope and have no doubt of the result, though they do not base their claims on such tangible indications as those offered by the Hepublicans. A move among

Campbell supporters elicits the information that they expect to poll at least 3 per cent of the Republican vote of the State for Campbell. This is based upon the idea that the people have a great admiration for the character of nerve exhibited by Campbell in refusing to co-operate with what is known as the Hamilton county "gang."

There is no doubt this has made him a great many friends and may result in secur-ing him votes, but not to the extent which is claimed by his political friends. There are probably more of this class of voters in Columbus than any other section of the State and the per cent here would not approach that which is claimed by the Demo-

DEPENDING UPON INDEPENDENTS It is thought by the administration men; ilso, that the fact Campbell has made a fairly good Governor and is entitled to a second term, will bring to him quite a large independent vote, but the extent of this cannot be measured. The old liners bank considerably upon the idea that nothing can disconcert the ranks of the party and cause them to take after any new theories; that they will all be found in line

The Democratic leaders do not believe the Alliance movement will in any respect affect their interests in the campaign and vote-getting, except the display of energy that the Springfield convention will not made by Governor Campbell, who is claimwhich would have otherwise voted the Democratic ticket.

A forecast of the elements which are to ompose the convention indicates it is not to any great extent a labor move, but will be composed of farmers, delegates from a few of the labor organizations, but the con-trolling element in the convention and the one which will name the ticket and adopt the plutform is the old Greenback crowd and this will not interfere to any great ex-tent with Democratic voters. As between tent with Democratic voters. As between fint money and the platform of the Democratic party on the subject, the leaders do not expect any radical hegira from their

CLAIM THERE ARE NO BOLTERS.

Campbell and his men also claim the dissatisfaction in their ranks has been greatly overdrawn; that they will be found working solidly within the next few weeks, and they go so far as to issist that things have been put in such excellent shape in Hamilton unty that the Democrats will elect their full Legislative ticket and carry the county for Campbell.

The Democrats count on a Republican disaffection which will amount to 10,000 votes, and with these and a few other sources of minor strength, including the opposition to the McKinley bill as personified in his candidacy, will enable them to carry the State by a margin of safe propor-

On the supposition that the Senatorial question is not to cut too strong a figure in the campaign; with the balance in the way of standing majority on the side of the Republicans of Ohio; with the harmony which prevails among the Republican elements; Governor Campbell weighted down with a platform a portion of which he repudiates; with the advantage which protection principles affords, it is believed there can be no doubt of the triumphant election of Mr. of the triumphant election of Mr. McKinley.

OPINION IS DIVIDED

As to the Function of the Directors of Big Corporations.

BANKS ARE EXPOSED TO HARDSHIPS

Stockholders Come Off Much Better Than One Would Expect,

ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. NEW YORK, Aug. 2.-Matthew Marshal reviews the speculative and financial situation for to-morrow's Sun as follows:

As I expected, the views which I advanced last Monday of the functions of directors have not met with unanimous approval. Those of my friends who are themselves directors of course applaud my idea that nothing should be expected of men in their position beyond good faith and due diligence in selecting executive officers, but others, who are merely stockholders, and especially those who are small stockholders. think that this is not the whole duty of their official representatives in the management of the corporations to which they have intrusted their money.

They say that they have made their investments on their faith in the business ability of those representatives, and they expect it to be exerted in their behalf. If, instead of this, directors are to do no more than appoint agents, there is no need of them at all. The stockholders might as well hold an election of officers once a year, and then leave the business of the company in their hands till the next annual meeting comes around. If the intermediate monthly or quarterly meetings of directors are a mere farce and amount to nothing they can easily be dispensed with. But if there are to be directors at all, and they are to pretend to direct, they should direct in reality, and not lull into a false security those who rely upon their vigilance to protect their interests. MUCH TRUTH IN IT.

I will not deny that there is a great deal of sense in this sort of talk, and, as I said last Monday, since so many stockholders indulge in the delusion that these directors really discharge the functions popularly attributed to them, no conscientious, self-respecting man will accept the office without at least endeavoring to make it more than a sinecure. But, as I also said, with the best intentions in the world, and the most carnest efforts, it is not possible for a director to oversee the business of a corporation with the same thoroughness and at-tention to details that he devotes to his own

Even if it were possible, the number of those who have the inclination to try to do it is too small to meet the demand. I very much fear that no amount of indignation and scolding will reform the matter, and that corporations will continue to be managed, as they have hitherto, by their active officers, and not by their directors.

A CASE OF THE PAST. My attention has been called to the At-lantic National Bank case, which happened some years ago, where the directors were compelled to pay a large sum of money to the shareholders to make good losses which the bank suffered through their neglect of duty. My recollection is that in that case the neglect chiefly complained of was the retention in office of a dishonest cashier after he had been proved to be dishonest, and also in a ratification by the directors of some of his unlawful acts. The stockholders were, fortunately for them, protected by section 118 of the na-tional banking act, which, after declaring that the franchises of banks formed under it shall be forfeited by a violation of the proicity for all damages which the associa tion, its shareholders or any other person shall have sustained in consequence of such violations. PROTECTION IN STATE LAW.

Our State laws contain numerous clauses making directors criminally liable for their wiful wrong-doing, but I am not aware of any which, like that I have quoted from the national banking act, gives the shareholders the right to sue them for losses through their misconduct. Of course, this defect could be easily remedied by the Legislature, and in view of recent occurrences it is very likely that it will be.

I should not omit to mention that there are directors, who without the incentive of are directors, who without the incentive of a fear of legal penalties and in many in-stances without adequate remuneration, do far more for their constituents than merely to vote for officers. At the cost of much personal inconvenience, and frequently of considerable loss to themselves, they de-vote to the offices of the institutions they direct an amount of time and thought far he word that required by their strict daty beyond that required by their strict duty and with the happiest results. They make their institutions succeed, but they also help to diffuse the unfounded belief to which I called attention a week ago, that all directors are bound to do as much as they do, and are blameworthy if they do not. The stockholders who profit by the labors of such men are lucky, but those who do not have no recent to a contract.

do not have no reason to complain. ANOTHER OBSCURE POINT.

And this leads me to remark that, in my opinion, the great majority of investors in the stocks of corporations have an extremely inadequate idea of the difficulty of earning dividends upon them, and of the risks of loss incurred in conducting their affairs. The capital of a corporation, in the first place, is almost always larger than that of most private concerns, and its business cor-respondingly more extended. Otherwise there would be no need of its incorporating as a means of bringing together small amounts of capital into one great aggregate. With this increase of capital and of business, the opportunities of loss are multiplied, and, hampered as they are by a sense of their responsibility, the officers of the company pany do not usually feel at liberty to take risks which individuals do, and of thus making great profits at a single stroke. 1 making great profits at a single stroke. I know that there are exceptions to this rule, but, like those of the zealous and devoted directors I have mentioned, they are not frequent, and should be highly prized when they are found. Most corporations are conducted in a humdrum, routine way, and I wonder that so many of them succeed as well as they do. They make, when they make, by dollars and cents, and lose, when they lose, by hundreds and thousands of dollars.

HARDSHIPS OF BANKS. Banks, especially, have a hard time. They are the target for every sort of rascality, of which that perpetrated by the dishonest clerk of Shipman, Barlow, Larocque & Choate, and which cost two or three banks over $300,000, is the latest specimen; the State Legislature and Congress are both hostile to them; their taxes are enormous, and so is their outlay for rent and clerk hire. To meet all these losses and expenses they have to pick up innumerable little amounts of interest and discount, which, on a money market like the present, count up very market like the present, count up very slowly indeed.

Trust companies do better, because they handle money in larger sums; but they, too, are exposed to the attacks of all kinds of irresponsible borrowers, whose object is to raise solid cash upon moonshine schemes, and who too frequently succeeded in their efforts.

A GREAT ENIGMA.

As to the management of railroad com as to the management of railroad com-panies and of manufacturing corpora-tions, it is altogether beyond my compre-hension, and, therefore, I suppose I may fairly presume, beyond that of the average stockholder. Those that make money are, apparently, the survivors in a struggle for cxistence in which the weaker ones have gone under. All that an intending purchaser of their stocks can do is to guess at the future by the past, and hope for a continuance of good luck.

When I look back at my long Wall street experience and review the careers of institutions which make their headquarters there. I think the stockholders on the their headquarters of the careers of the careers tutions which make their headquarters there, I think the stockholders, on the whole, come off much better than they had any right to expect. While they are doing nothing, or at least attending to their other business, the men in whose hands they have placed their money have been toiling and sweating in their behalf, and turning out to them dividends to the earnings of which their co-operation has not in the least contributed. Taking into account the weakness of human nature and the temptations to which its selfishness is exposed I esteem this result a mark of great moral ad-CONSIDERING THE CHANCES FOR FRAUD esteem this result a mark of great moral ad-

A MATTER OF WONDER The wonder is not that there is so much fraud and rascality in the management of corporations, but that there is so little. I reminds me of what Lord Clive said to the Committee of the House of Commons, who were interrogating him concerning the ex-tortions with which he was charged in the Government of India: "Gentlemen, when I consider my opportunities, I am astonished at my moderation." In the same way when I consider how great are the opportunities of Presidents, Cashiers and Secretaries to lose money instead of making it, and to benefit themselves at the expense of stock-holders, I am astonished, not at their mod-eration, but at the predominance of integrity mong them.

That the public shares with me this feel That the public shares with me this feeling is proved by the readiness with which they buy stocks, and the prices which they pay for so many of them, relatively to the dividends which they yield. And purchasers, if they are dissatisfied with their investments, have always the right, which nothing can deprive them of, of selling out and transferring the risk of loss as well as the chance of profit to some one more con-fiding than they are.

SUNDAY LAW SUSTAINED.

EVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS TAKE CASE TO A FEDERAL COURT.

The Judge Does Not Decide Upon the Spiritual Part of the Question-The Defendant Broke a State Law and His Sentence Must Be Enforced. MEMPHIS, Aug. 2.-E. S. Hammo

District United States Judge, has handed down his decision in the now famous case of R. M. King, the Seventh Day Adventist. King was convicted a year ago of Sabbath breaking by plowing on Sunday in Obion county. He appealed to the Supreme Court and the sentence was affirmed.

Then the Adventists and National Secular Association took up the case. Lon M. Dickinson was engaged as counsel and the case was taken to the Federal Court last November on a writ of habeas corpus, the contention being that the conviction was contrary to the bill of rights of Tennessee and the Constitution of the United States, and that the defendant was held prisoner by and that the defendant was held prisoner by the Sheriff without due process of law.

The application was argued several months ago and Judge Hammond has had it under advisement ever since. The opinion is a lengthy and learned document and dwells exhaustively on every phase of the arguments advanced in favor of the religious prisoner. The defendant, how-ever, is remanded back to the custody of the Sheriff to pay the fine or serve the time in lieu, according to the sentence.

in lieu, according to the sentence.

The decision is based not so much on the constitutionality of the Sabbath laws as upon the fact that King was convicted under due process of Tennessee law, and it is not the province of the Federal Court to review the case. Malice, religious or otherwise, may dictate a prosecution, but if the law has been violated this fact never shields the law breaker. Neither do the courts require that there shall be some moral obliquy to support a given law before enforcing it, and it is not necessary to maintain that to vio-late the Sunday observance custom shall be of itself immoral to make it criminal in the eyes of the law.

"It may be harmless in itself, be petitioner believes God has not set apart-that day for rest and holiness, to work Sun-day, and yet, if man has set it apart in due form by his law for rest, it must be obeyed as man's law if not as God's law. And it is just as evil to violate such a law in the eyes of the world as one sanctioned by God—I mean just as criminal in law. The crime is in doing the thing forbidden by law, harmless though it be in itself. Therefore all that part of the argument, that it is not hurt-ful in itself to work Sunday apart from the religious sanctity of the day, is beside the
