ashioned bier.

A West Virginia Incident. By the light of torches that night the men hewed out a rough coffin and the bier was made from poles and the next day in relays of four we carried the man to his grave. Winding to and fro over the valley just as the sun was sinking behind the hill we came out on the brow of the hill where a grave had been dug. An old patriarchal man who seemed to have charge of the ceremony ordered the hier set down the side of grave and requested the friends and neighbors of the deceased to take a last look at the corpse before it was laid away.
There was sort of a helpless, appealing look in voice and eye. He said: "There is no minister present to say those words which are customarily uttered over the dead, but if you will all kneel with me I will try and pray for the well being of the departed."

I had heard eloquent men of the nation on the stump, in the pulpit and at the bar, but that eld man gave utterance that afterneon to the most eloquent prayer, from its very terseness and simplicity, that I believe ever fall from mortal lips.

The golden sunlight of a dying day lighted up the the hills and left the valleys dark. Standing on that knoll with the glories of the sunset all about him and his long gray hair fluttering in the wind and glistening is the light it was a picture more impressive

than if he had been a scarlet-clad cardinal standing under the sheen of a thousand lights. His simple prayer was:
"Father, we send Thee another soul; Thou knowest the burden he had to bear, and we ask Thee for Christ's sake to be merciful. I wasn't ashamed of the moisture that filled my eyes as I turned away from the grave on the bleak mountain side, and never the history of that warborn State ascended a petition to God's great, white throne as beautiful as was uttered over that humble

A Hard Task, Indeed.

The general public are not always aware how hard it is for a man to climb a steep hill leading from the prison gates to the plateau of respectability. During one of my trips up the Allegheny Railroad, while selling lumber for a firm, I ran across a preacher who filled up his spare time, when d engaged in looking after the welfare of slock, in nummacturing and selling patent medicines. He wanted to build some houses on some property that he owned in a little town up the river, and desired to archase some lumber. I visited him, ked over the matter, and sold him a bill of stull at satisfactory prices, agreeing to scilver it within a week or two. A few days afterward I was astonished to have one of the firm suform me that he had received n letter from the preacher canceling the order, which he had given me a few days

Neuplused at the turn affairs had taken, I took a train and went up and saw the gen-tleman and inquired why he canceled the order. In a stammering, halting manner informed me that he had heard of my past and couldn't conscientiously do bust ss with me, as it was against his principles to handle pitch, as there was always a risk of being defiled. I told him I did not know his moral condition as well as he tnew it himself, but I thought any man those moral nature was in such a condition that buying a car load of lumber from an ex-convict would necessarily damage him, must have a conscience on which charcoal ould make a white mark.

Another Discouragement. The winter came in and some gentlemen who were interested in an enterprise in the East End desired to obtain a man to act as manager. My history was told them, and I as recommended to the position. An interview took place between us, and I was given the position, which I filled in a satisactory manner until the following spring. The enterprise did not prove remunera-tive as anticipated, and it was abandoned. A little bit discouraged and sad hearted, I could myself out of employment, and while was promised by my last employers that hey would certainly secure me a position in a short time, rather than run any risk, I re-turned to the lumber yard and went to work again as a laborer. I had faithfully performed the duties which had been assigned to me the previous winter, and had succeeded in creating the feeling that I was fitted to fill some better position than had cet fallen into my lot. loseph D. Weeks, of the American Manufactoria, was about starting a new paper at that time and to his astonishment his mana-ger, Mr. Protsman, Sr., proposed that I hould be one of the men employed as an divertising agent and take partial charge of the circulation. The position brought me in contact with the prominent men of the country and it is a curious fact that the the higher walks of life, but among the middle and lower classes. I won the respeet and esteem, I think I can say in all and when the paper was finally sold to some people in New York, Mr. Weeks sufficient confidence in me to offer the a position as his representative in New York City for a term of years. While I felt highly complimented, I was am-hitious to engage in a broader field. At Work in the South,

Not being side to receive the opening I desired, I, accompanied by another newspaper man, went to Alabama and rep-resented Mr. Weeks' paper there for some months in a manner satisfactory to all concoed. On my return from Alabama Mr. resentative in the East, but I had formed views and having seen for sometime that the changes made in the streets and collunys of Pittsburg was sure to result in a large increase in population, I concluded to go into the real estate business. I met While pursuing my calling of real estate agent, I dealt more or less in West Virginia lands. Becoming acquainted with everal prominent men of that State, I conved the idea of building a railroad from Charleston up the Elk river to the Mononconnecting with the southwest inch of the Pennsylvania at Fairchance. ought me in contact with ex-Senator Cowden, of Wheeling, who later on de-Congressian Atkinson, to form a company in the city of Pittsburg with the introduc-tion of General Green B. Raum's refriger-rigerating Company. necompanied by a colored man in his ems an organizer of the proposed company

Bought Stock in Raum's Scheme.

Mr. Eaum came on after the system was on exhibition about a week, and his stand-ing in the political world as well as the fact tested the invention in Wheeling, W. Va., out for himself.

In the spring of '91 he happened to be in New York on some business connected with a banking scheme, and putting up at a hotel on Broadway, New York, one day history, as I can prove by letters in my possession which had been sent them by persons in Pittsburg at the time I went to Washington when I was elected director. Washington when I was elected director him and recalled to his memory that he and vice-president of the Universal Re-dent of Pittsburg, came from Chicago and, attracted by the account that he had read in the papers of this invention, I made a contract with him by which he and his associates agreed on the 27th day of February last that they would start a sub-company in last that they would start a on the 27th day of February last that they would start a sub-company in Cook county, Illinois, with a capital stock of $55,000,000, of which $2,000,000 in stock.

Those who have heard the Colonel with was to be delivered, full paid and non-assessa-ble, to the said party of the first part, and the Christian religion would not believe addition thereto $100,000 in cash under | with what a fervent tone he exclaimed: these conditions, and $50,000 payable in 90 dars from the date thereof and $25,000 out of the receipts during the first year and $25,- which,was ever inflicted on an innocent man.

being conveyed to the grave on an old-tashioned bier.

One more within one year from date.
Furthermore, that said Hayes should pay within 30 days $5,000 to the said party of the first part, provided the exhibition be made in Chicago, and demonstrate that the party of the first part for a period of six days can maintain a temperature in a refrigerator of between 49 and 45 degrees Farenheit and preserve the articles contained therein. At the order of the Board of Directors I proceeded to Chicago and personally conducted the exhibition. I was accompanied by Gen-eral Raum and joined later by Mr. Frank A. Smith, the inventor. There were some things which happened in Chicago that I

When I returned to Pittsburg I informed my business associates of the facts in the case and wanted to tender my resignation, which they refused to accept. Some other business in which I was interested made my-presence in New York absolutely neeessary. I was absent several weeks, and during my absence I sent my resignation in to the Universal Refrigerating Company. General Raum insisted I should have it re-called, but I wired him that my resignation was irrevocable and must stand.

The Meeting With Mitklewiecz.

It was while I was attending to the exhibition of the Universal Refrigerating Company in January, in the city of Pittsburg, that I was introduced to the Count Eugene de Mitkiewiccz. Frank A. Smith, the inventor of the Universal Refrigerator Company system, desired me to take up the con-cessions which he claimed his friend the Count could have for the asking from the Chinese Government, and which consisted of contracts to build railroads, establish of contracts to build railroads, establish banks, telephone lines, and postal service. He claimed it was the egotistical conduct of Wharton Barker which had prevented the consummation of this enterprise long before. The Count came over here unsolicited by me and told me his story. I told him I was poor, had no money to invest, and didn't see how I could be of service. He returned again in the course of a week or so and Smith and himself agreed that if I would investigate the enterprise they would pay all my expenses and give me a share amouning to $2,000,000 worth of stock in the com-

I spoke to a lawyer, a friend of mine here in the city, and accompanied by him started East to secure an interpreter with ability to translate Mandarin Chinese into English— an interpreter of whom the Count had no knowledge-so that we might satisfy our-selves of the truth of the Count's statements that the Chinese officials, both in this country and in China, were his coadjutors and his friends in this enterprise. After prolonged search, in which I visited all the colleges of note east of the Allegheny mountains I found an interpreter who made a translation of the documents in the Count's possession, and acted as interpreter in conversation with the different attaches of the Chinese legation at Washington, who corroborated all the Count's statements. After considerable work, I finally reached Colonel Elliott F. Sheppard, of New York. who personally informed me that if ex-Sen-ator Blair was received as Minister of the United States in China he would take part in the enterprise of securing said concessions from the Chinese Government. I introduced the Count to the Colonel. The Count had everal interviews with him and later went West to meet him.

Any Amount of Promises. On his return from the trip he showed me a letter signed by Colonel E. F. Sheppard, in the Colonel's own hand writing, addressed to His Excellency Tsui Kuyin, the Chinese Minister at Washington, in which, as near as I can recall, not only would the money necessary to start this enterprise be forthcoming, but that he would agree to have 20 young men, selected each year from mong the Chiner youths of the Empire. rought to this country and educated as engineers, telegraph operators, etc., their tuition not to cost more than from $1,000 to $1,500 per year ench.

I write this because in a letter forwarded to me by Miss Mosby, and dated August 13, at the Mail and Express office in New York, Colonel Sheppard, through his private Secretary, William Worrall, informs Miss Mosby that Colonel Sheppard wishes to say "he knows little or nothing of the company you refer to, and has no interest in it." That Colonel Sheppard visited Washington and had a three hours. $1,500 per year each. is beyond his ability to disprove, and that he also succeeded through my own and the Count's efforts in having the Chinese Minister dine at his house in New York City when some of the best known of the financial world were present. If there was any deception practiced in regard to Colonel Sheppard's standing on this question it was done by Mitkiewiecz without my being cognizant. I embarrassed myself very seriously in aiding Count Mitkiewiecz to pay back to the Chinese Minister some $21,000 which he had lost by the failure of the North River Bank in New York City, and which the minister said must be made good before any concessions could be ap-plied for or granted. The assertions that have been made in the papers regarding the Count and his swindling operations in the various parts of the country, as far as my investigations go, is unfounded and utterly false. That the Count was fully aware of my past history away back in April was be-yond dispute. I believe he will also corroborate the statement that I now make that after talking it over with him I told Miss Mosby every fact in connection with my life long before I sought to become more than a mere acquaintance."

In regard to Mr. Miller's statement of his business operations I can say that I have been cognizant of almost all of them, and last fall accompanied him to West Virginia

while he was engaged on one of his railroad enterprises with ex-Senator Cowden.

THE MEETING WITH MOORE.

AN UNEXPECTED AND IMPORTANT TALK IN NEW YORK.

The Well-Known Pittsburg Lawyer Tells Miller He Has the Confession of One of the Real Bond Robbers-The Determination to Secure Proofs of Innocence, It can never be said of John W. Miller by suyone with whom he came in contact that he ever sought to deny the fact of his past trouble, while it is true, wherever he honorably could, he wished, if possible, to let the dead past bury the dead and have peoling system, known as the Universal Re- ple judge him as they found him, and not as he was spoken of. Whenever anyone The inventor, Frank A. Smith, came here | brought up that old story he always pleaded him. From the hour he left the prison un-Monongahela House, proceeded to show the public the merits of his invention. I relied til he met Colonel W. D. Moore in New ntirely on his statements and simply acted York City he has eagerly grasped every opportunity to gather together the evidence which would enable him to prove his innocence to the world. When Colonel Moore

informed him one night that he could give Cowden and his associates had accomplishing the task which he had set out for himself regerating Company at a salary of $5,000 a county, Pa. That evening, while dining with year, which I never got.

A gentleman named Hayes, a former resiand relating his experience for the past five years from the time of his discharge from the Western Penitentiary, Mr. Moore, rec-

"Thank God! I am at last free to tell the Miller, I have seen you with determined front and smilling face fight your way from a laborer in a lumber yard to a position of affluence and trust, and I have often wished to tell that which I knew would accelerate the pace with which you travel." The Man Who Retained Moore.

One can only imagine Miller's astonishment when told, "Do you know that Hamilton or Archie Montague as he was better known retained me when I appeared for you in Clarion county, and confessed to me that you were innocent of any and all participa-tion either in the robbery of John Connors or the negotiation of the stolen property?'
Only those who have shivered in the shadow can imagine the feelings which seemed to pervade his, Miller's, whole being as the sunshine of the dawn of vindication A confession of the real perpetrator of this horrible crime meant that he should no longer walk with bowed head and burden laden shoulder in the presence of his fellow men. Colonel Moore and Miller then securing a private room began to compare notes. He told me what he had found out in the years that had passed since that shadow had come him and his fellows. Miller has between since said: "I never will forget what a thrill of surprise and hope permeated my whole being as he said: "Any time that you call on me I will swear to the truth of the confession made to me by the real robber of John Connors, Sr., at Catfish on the night of the 23d of March, 1881.'"

In the morning when he arose the enthusiasm passed away, and he felt that un-assisted and unaided it would be impossible to lift this giant shadow from a dead past. When, a few months afterward, he stood with bowed head before one of those pure beings to whom God said when he turned Eve from the garden of Eden "Thy seed shall crush the serpent's head," and he told her the dark shadow which had overhung his life and crippled his future, she said to him: "In days to come you innocence shall be blazen before the world," trusted her and believed her.

Determined to Prove It.

The old determination, that in former days had enabled him to conquer difficulties, which men claimed were impossible to over-come, came back to him and he was inspired by the love from a pure good woman spurred on by the thought that if the shadow was not lifted from his name she must decend from heights which she occupied to walk in the valley of shadow by his side.

After traveling through four States he aroused Colonel 2 oore Saturday night from a sick bed from which he had attempted to arise that day and fainting and fallen back on that couch which he had been confined for many days and begged him for the love he bore his children and grand children to right the wrong that had been done him to clear the shadow from off his name and permit him to stand on a plain of equality among his fellows.

The manner in which this had been done and the ability of character which inspired the narrative is left for the reader to judge. It is not expected that minds, untrained to discriminate and weigh evidence, such as a court of law will allow, can dispassionatel view this proof and sworn affidavits which have been gathered together for the purpose of showing the exact status of Mr. Miller's case and comparing them with the evidence produced at the trial of this case, should pronounce any other judgment than to say that he was entirely innocent in any crime or complicity in it. At the trial of the case in the Clarion County Court among the mass of evidence taken covering some 40 pages was the testimony of this broker, Nelson, in which he asserted that he then recognized Miller as one of the men present in the Little Lamb saloon when he bought the bond and when paying the money to

Some Reported Contradictio On another occasion he contradicted the above statement and said that he had never seen Mr. Miller before. After the jury brought in a verdict of guilty, he came to Mr. Miller, in jail and acknowledged that he had committed perjury and that he was sorrow that he had done so. Colonel Moore in speaking of this man's testimony at the trial, said: "Mr. Nelson swore before that Mr. Miller had been present at the Little Lamb saloon and had assisted in the negotiation of the ed Washington and had a three hours' and had assisted in the negotiation of the bonds which I believe to be a shameless and interview in relation to this very company wicked falsehood as I know from the statements of Hamilton, unbiased as they were in every way, and from all the facts in the case that Mr. Miller could not have been implicated in any of these transactions."

It is singular, also, that this man Downer, who was the go-between for the man who sold the bonds and the broker who purchased them was never apprehended and compelled to show their interest in the transaction. Nor, indeed, was the broker himself ever arrested, and yet he retained possession of them, and, after suits in the ounty Court, carried it to the Supreme Court, where it was decided that he should retain them as his property.

Outside of Nelson's statement Miller claims there is no evidence connecting him in any way, shape or form, either in the robbery, the sale of the bonds, or the money obtained from the sales. After the trial, conviction, sentence, and Miller's escape to Canada, this same John Connors, Sr., sent an affidavit to Miller's counsel in Canada, in which he declared that he did not charge, nor intend to charge Miller with shooting him with intent to kill, nor with doing any shooting at all.

The prosecuting attorney of the County adds his quota to the weight of evidence in Miller's favor, and sends an affidavit containing precisely the same statements as set forth in Connors' affidavit, Truth of the Statements

No human being who knows anything regarding this case can believe that a man and his wife and two other witnesses could be gotten years after this hundreds of miles apart, as they were, to testify in the presence of a detective and a reporter in a most circumstantial way regarding the shooting which had occurred ten years before. day and date and even the hour, the kind of cartridges, the kind of a revolver with which the shooting was done, unless it was true.

Colonel W. D. Moore, loyal and true to that oath which he took when admitted to the bar to defend a client to the best of his ability, gladly testified to a confession made to him by the real perpetrator of the crime when he was assured that his death prevented the possibility of harm. John G. Mullon testifies as to the whereabouts of this man from early morning until the mid-day on which it is claimed he spent hours in negotiating the sale of stolen bonds in a dive in the back alley. The sheriff of the county from which he was sent, the lawyer who defended the other men indicted with him, and his own counsel add their testimony to the mass which tends to prove this man's inno-

An Impossible Feat. It might be possible to suborn one witness, but it seems impossible to traverse four States and suborn 20 and make their story hang together and overcap and weld into each other until it stands as a secmingly impregnable fortress of facts, all going to show that a wrong had been done and the Goddess of Justice blended, and had allowed her sword to inflict punishment on an inno-

The affidavits are here displayed to the gaze of the world, and it is only asked that it be taken up dispassionately, carefully weighed and set one against the other for the public verdiet. Besides this there are hundreds of letters
