MILLER'S OWN STORY.

prior to the 27th day of July, 1881, and that he had been personally acquainted with him for all of said time; that about half past 7 o'clock in the morning on the 27th of July,

7 o'clock in the morning on the 27th of July, 1881, he went out with Miller to look at a buggy that Mr. Miller was going to buy; that he accompained Mr. Miller to the telegraph office, and that they went around to different places in the city of Pittsburg until about 10 o'clock, when they both returned to the hotel. When they came back to the hotel Mr. Miller wanted to make some nurchase. He asked if he could some purchase. He asked if he could change him a $1,000 bill. He told him he could not but referred him to his partner, Mr. Gamble, who went with Mr. Miller to the Fifth National Bank; both came back to the hotel in a short time and said they had had the bill changed.

Affiant further says that he had a conversation with Mr. Gamble in which M. Gamble said that he went with Mr. Miller to the bank and got him (Miller) the $1,000 bill changed. In about one hour after they returned from the bank, the cashier, Mr. E. A. Smith, came into the hotel and asked affiiant if Mr. Miller was still stopping at the hotel. Affiant replied that he was, whereupon Mr. Smith left the hotel and returned in a short time afterward with two detectives and arrested Mr. Miller.
Affiant further says, that after Mr. Miller was arrested, affiant had a conversation with Mr. E. A. Smith, in which Mr. Smith said, that a Mr. Whitney had bought the Catfish bonds and paid out four $1,000 bills, and as Mr. Miller and a $1,000 bill changed they were suspicious that he was one of the parties who sold Affiant says that during his acquaintance with Mr. Miller he has seen him have large sums of money in his possession, and months prior to this he had seen Mr. Miller have two $500 bills in his possession. And further this affiant saith not.

BALES M. CAMPBELL Notary Public. JOHN P. MCTIGHE,

EDWIN O. CHRISTY. Moore's Sick-Bed Sworn Statement.

State of Pennsylvania, County of Allegheny, City of Pittsburg, ss.: Before me, the undersigned notary publie, personally appeared W. D. Moore, Esq., who, being duly sworn according to law, says as tollows:

Somewhere between the 27th day of July and the 5th of August, 1881, a gentleman came to my house, 193 South avenue, Afle-ghehy City, at about 7:30° in the evening. He said to me that he had a friend in trouble, and wished me to appear as his counsel. He said that he himself was afraid of arrest, and that he desired to obtain me for counsel for himself and perhaps others. I said to him, "Who is the friend for whom you wish me to appear now?" He said: "James W. Miller, who is charged with this Catrish robbery, as they call it. The robbery of old Connors," he added. He continued, "I know him to be innocent of any connection with that rob-I said to him: "How do you know it?" He answered, "I helped to do it myself; that's the reason I employ you to defend me

"Well," said I, "that's very surprising to me that a man would come to my house and tell me that he was guilty of a robbery like that, and you certainly ought to know whether you participated in it and whether Mr. Miller was with you. Why do you take such an interest in this man's case?"
Simply, he answered, "I have been in the penitentiary myself, and I don't want to see any person go innocently to that place.
We can't appear to testify, you see we would all be care to testify, you see we We can't appear to testify, you see, we would all be arrested ourselves. We got the money and we can't hink it right to allow him to be unjustly convicted and pun-

"Are You Dealing Honestly and Truly

We got into the carriage into which he nme to my house, and drove over to the outhside. We stopped at the mouth of aw Mill run at a house which was partly brick and partly frame, as I remember, and partly below the level of the street. He left the carriage and went into the hor soon afterward returned with a large roll of money. We drove back, and he handed me $500, and I promised him that I would start to Clarion to the jail in which Mr. Miller was confined, as he informed me, and inform Mr. Miller of what had taken place, and if Mr. Miller was satisfied that I should appear as his counsel I would enter my appearance and do all in my power for his defense. On the next day, if remember rightly, I started to Clarion saw Mr. Miller in the jail, stated what I have here stated, and entered upon my duties as his counsel. When I met Mr. Miller in the jail, and after I had said to him the cause of my coming he said to me that he knew no such person as Mr. Hamilton, looked suspiciously, and said: "I think I know a man when he looks me in the eye. Look me in the eye." Well, he seemed then to be satisfied. I saw Hamilton twice after my return to Pittsburg, once at my house and once at my office. In my office he gave me the details of the so-called Catfish robbery. He gave me the names of the parties who were concerned with him in the robbery. He gave me

All the Details of Their Trip To Mr. Connors's house that night and what took place in the house, of what they obtained, how they obtained it, and how they returned to the city of Pittsburg. He told me that they entered the house, that they previously masked themselves. They found the old lady and the old gentleman room, and said to them that bey had come to search for counterfeit money, and that they canted the key of the safe. for The old man said they couldn't have it. And then we told them that we would have to have it, and these are the words we used:
"Or we would do some harm to them,"

EDWIN O. whereupon the old gentleman gave us the key of the safe, and to prevent outery or alarm, we tied them both and gagged them We opened the safe and took from the safe over $20,000 in money and bonds and we told them that we had tied John and his family. He said we left them in that condition. I believe that he told me that they came back to Pittsburg that night or the next morning. He said they negotiated mouth of Virgin alley, and that Mr. Miller was not present at that negotiation and had nothing to do with it, and so far as he knew, had no knowledge of it. He said the nego-tiation was conducted by a street broker named Nelson, a man whom I had never beard of before, and a man of whom I had no knowledge. Of Mr. Hamilton and his connection with this case, and of myself, I from the original affidavits which were in lave said nothing heretofore except to give an outline of the facts because, as I was retained as his counsel, I didn't feel at liberty to give his name or any clue whatever which the detectives or police could

But Now That He Is Dead, as I am credibly informed and believe, and the character of an innocent man is at stake, I feel at liberty to say what I should not have said. On the trial of the case in Clarion county every material fact in the statements made to me by Mr. Hamilton was confirmed and corroborated by all the testimony adduced by the Commonwealth, except that Mr. Nelson appeared and swore that Mr. Miller had been present at the Lamb saloon and assisted in the negotiation of the stolen bonds, which, from the testimony of Mr. Hamilton, unbiased in any way and the other facts in the case, I retary was ordered and directed to prepare believe to be a shameless and wicked false-

Mr. Nelson that could have possibly justi-ned the conviction. There was, on the con-Resolved, That this conclave, in a open trary, positive evidence that no such thing as torture or felonious shooting took place at all at Mr. Connors' house that night. Mr. Hamilton told me that in adjusting the at all at Mr. Connors' house that night. Mr. Hamilton told me that in adjusting the ropes around old man Connors his pistol accidentally went off without injury to anyone, and that the charge of felonious shooting was simply a lie. On the trial of the case and after Mr. Nelson's testimony I offered to disassociate myself from the case if they would allow me to make a substantial statement, which of course could not make a substantial statement, which of course could not make a substantial statement, which of course could not make a substantial statement, which of course could not make a substantial statement, which of course could not make a substantial statement, which of course could not make a substantial statement, which of course could not make a substantial statement which of course could not make a substantial statement which of course could not make a substantial statement which of course could not make a substantial statement which are be legally admitted. If Mr. Miller had remained in prison I feel sure the vindication which is now before the public could have been secured and that he would have been secured and that he would have been spartened because of the overwhelming testimony of his innocence and of any complicity in the Connors robbery. When I learned of his escape and of the attempt to extradite him, not upon the charge of burglary, upon which he would not have feel proud of him, even should all the newspaper assertions prove to know that, if he did sin in the past, that he has redeemed himself and placed himself above suspicion. That we repose the utmost confidence in every respect, both morally and socially, and feel that the general public, as well as ourselves, can make no mistake in upholding him in the hour of his misfortune. And we feel confident, and do not have the least doubt but when the charge of burglary. if they would allow me to make a substau-tial statement, which, of course, could not be legally admitted. If Mr. Miller had re-

Trumped Up for the Purpose of forcing his extradition by the Canadian authorities I forwarded voluntarially to the court an affidavit setting forth substantially but not so fully the statements contained in this affidavit. Incidentally there are two facts which I think bear upon the question of Mr. Miller's innocence. First, Miss Sadie Manning, to whom I had a note of introduction as Mr. Miller's friend, told me, and I firmly believe that she told me the truth, that on the night before his arrest Mr. Miller showed her a $1,000 note, and a $500 note, and being as she said in a condition not able to take care of either himself or his money, I told him to let me take care of it, which he did. Second, I had never seen or heard of Mr. Miller until after the inter-view with Mr. Hamilton in my own house, and Mr. Miller in the Clarion county jail Third, that every particular of the robbery narrated to me by Mr. Hamilton in my own house was corroborated by every witness at the trial of the case, except Mr. Nelson, of whom I have spoken heretofore in regard to the case. All of which is correct and true to the best of my knowledge and recollection, and belief. W. D. MOORE.

JOHN W. HAGUE, Notary Public. Detective McTighe's Deposition.

State of Pennsylvania, County of Alle gheny, City of Pittsburg, s. s. Before me the undersigned, John W. Hague, Notary Public, personally came John P. McTighe, who being duly sworn, says as follows: I am a detective in the employment of the police department of the city of Pittsburg, Pa., and have been for the last five years past. I have known James W. Miller for nearly three years. He has told his story to me repeatedly, but I, like many others, put no credence in his as-sertion of his innocence of his complicity of the Catfish robbery.

But as I have followed the chain of evidence, and have forged link by link of the great chain that proves his innocence, with-out a doubt. I have seen and personally interrogated the living witnesses who were sworn, that Mr. Miller was hundreds of sworn, that Mr. Miller was hundreds of miles away on the night of the aforesaid robbery. I interrogated Mr. Mellon, hotel keeper of Youngstown, Ohio, yesterday, August 21, 1891, and he gave a plain list of the facts which had occurred on the morning of the day when the bonds were sold in Dittebury that being the day were which Pittsburg, that being the day upon which Mr. Miller was arrested. He positively swore that Miller was in his company on that date from 7.30 A. M. until noon, when he was arrested, with the exception of 15 fore Mr. Mitler could communicate with them, was present and saw them refuse to identify Mr. Miller as the man they knew in former years, until he gave them in my presence dates and facts to convince them he was the man they knew. I know with Mr. Miller and myself;" He said: "I certainly am. Will you come out to the carriage go to the Southside;" "Yes," said I, "I them he was the man they knew. I know there was and had been no collusion between them and Mr. Miller, whom they afterward fully and completely identified. All of which is true and correct as set above, to the best of my knowledge, exam nation, information and belief.

How the Affidavits Were Secured. State of Pennsylvania, County of Allegheny, City of Pittsburg, ss.: Before me, John W. Hague, a Notary Public, personally came Edwin O. Christy, who, being duly sworn, says as follows: I am assistant city editor of THE PITTS-BURG DISPATCH. I have known James W. Miller for the last three years. At the beginning of last week I was assigned to the duty of investigating the guilt or innocence of James W. Miller, who was charged with being a participant in the Catfish robbery, either directly or indirectly. My duty was to gather the facts and lay them before the public, unshaded by any feeling. On Thursday morning of last week, in company of Mr. Miller, I went to Clarion county, and there commenced to pick up the thread of the story, which, before its close, led us to Cleveland, Ohio; then to Detroit, Michigan; down to Cincinnati, "Ohio, and back to Pittsburg by way of Youngstown, Ohio. During the entire time I was practically with Mr. Miller every moment. It required days and nights to trace out the various persons connected with the story. None of them knew Mr. Miller, nor would they be-lieve him to be the man they knew ten years ago until he gave them positive proof of his identity by stating facts and circumstances which they alone knew. I listened to the stories each one told; they all corroborated each other, and the facts, as set forth in the various affidavits, are precisely the same as the stories they have previously told.

In Cleveland, Ohio, we were joined by Detective McTighe, who was also a witness to all the depositions taken outside of Pennsylvania. I watched every point carefully, and I believe all the statements in the affidavits, and I can vouch EDWIN O. CHRISTY. Witness my band and notarial ? seal August 22, A. D. 1891.

THE REPORTER'S STORY.

CHASING THROUGH FOUR STATES AFTER THE EVIDENCE,

Miller Determined to Clear His Name The Struggle to Locate Dunn - The Final Affid-vits Secured-A Dramati-

Scene in Colonel Moore's Room For the past three years I have been intimately acquainted with James W. Miller, and have known of the weight he carried long before either he or myself ever thought of publishing any part of the story. He had made me the possessor of many of the secrets of his life. I knew all about his connection with the Universal Refrigerating Company and also knew of Mr. Mosby's visit before that gentleman arrived in Pitts-

Though Mr. Miller had frequently expressed a desire to bring out the true facts in this case and make a complete vindication, he was always held back by the hope that he would live it out, and would rather endure the present burdens than tear open the old wounds. On his re-turn to Pittsburg, immediately after Mr. Mosby's visit to this place, he stated his in-tention of clearing up all the clouds that hung over him, and requested me to accom-pany him in ferreting out the evidence. When I mentioned the matter to the editors of THE DISPATCH, by whom I was em-ployed they agreed to my proposal. On ployed, they agreed to my proposal. On Thursday, the 13th of August, accompanied by Mr. Miller, I started for Clarion, Clarion county, Pa., where, ten years before, Mr. Miller had been convicted of the Catfish county, Pa., where, ten years before, Mr.
Miller had been convicted of the Catfish robbery and sentenced to seven years imprisonment. We were received there kindly by almost everybody, but there, as at almost every point during our subsequent travels, but few people recognized Mr. Miller until he had made himself known. The prevailing sentiment to-day in that county decideally is that Mr. Miller was unintly condeally is that Mr. Miller was unintly condeally is that Mr. Miller was unintly conmight and day. The only sleep we took, what we could eath on the trains dedly is that Mr. Miller was unjustly con-

The Only Stumbling Block In Clarion the only stumbling block we met was that of finding the notes of evidence in the trial of Miller, Jackson, Harrop and in the trial of Miller, Jackson, Harrop and Ott. The court records showed it had been filed, but the evidence could not be found. Together we searched all over the papers in the Prothonotary's office. We thought that possibly the notes might have been taken out by Mr. Moffatt, who was one of Miller's counsels and who had made an application for a writ of error. In the meantime, however, Mr. Moffatt had been sent to Congress from his district and had also had two different law partners in the ten years that had elapsed since the trial. One of them had died but we commenced to search through the papers in these vari ous offices. At last in a big box at Mr. Moffat's residence was found the notes of testimony he had taken at the trial and which he attested as correct. In the meantime I had wired to all the stenographers who had ever taken a line of evidence in the Clarion county courts, in order to get some trace of the missing testi-mony. Fearful of arousing suspicion, I signed Mr. Mollatt's name.

Tallied With the Notes. In the files of the Clarion Democrat I also

In the files of the Clarion Democrat I also found the report of the trial, which was published ten years ago, and it was so absolutely correct that it tallied in every particular with Mr. Moffatt's notes. Later, however, in a conversation with Attorney B. J. Reid, I discovered that the notes had really been stolen from the Court House by some person he had employed to give him an abstract of the case when he made the application for the pardon of Harrop, Jackson, and tion for the case when he made the applica-tion for the pardon of Harrop, Jackson, and Ott. Mr. Reid had in no way been responsi-ble for the disappearance of the testimony, but the person he had employed instead of making a copy abstracted the official rec-ord. Believing this to be true I wired Attorney General Hensel in Mr. Moffatt's name. On my return from Ohio I found the following telegram on my desk, which had been forwarded by Mr. Moffatt, and proves that the papers are in Harrisburg:

HARRISBURG, PA. Stenographer's copy notes of testimony in Commonwealth versus Jackson, Harrop and Miller are on file in office and Secretary of Commonwealth. H. D. TATE, Recorder Board of Pardons.

After a Complete Story. After securing affidavits from different people who had occupied or do now occupy the position of public trust in the county, and hearing nothing but the most kindly expressed sentiments from the success of his undertaking, we made our way back to Pittsburg. Finding that the papers had published partial and vague accounts of the story up to date, and not desiring to bore the public with an uncomplete narrative, we made the necessary arrangements and departed to Cleveland, O.

On arriving at Cleveland, O.
On arriving at Cleveland one danger to be feared was that the newspaper reporters of the Forest City would become cognizant of our mission and forestall us by telling the facts which we came in search of. One of the first things we did was to telegraph to the camp of the Duquesne Greys outside of Erie, Pa., for Detective John McTighe, who was there enjoying his va-cation. He immediately responded and ar-rived on Monday evening and then began one of the most intricate searches for the one of the most intricate searches for the various personages who had been active in this drama of a decade ago. Mrs. Dunn was found at 11 o'clock at night and utterly refused to recognize James W. Miller, claiming that he was not the man whom she had known under that name. By relating some incidents which were known to very few people he succeeded to recalling himself to her memory and when his mission was stated and he told her what his desire was to do she repeated the story to me which to do she repeated the story to me which Miller had gone over time and again for years past. After a long search the next day Mrs. Ashley was found and when Mr.

Miller made himself known there was tear in her eyes when she asked:
"Where's your rosy cheeks and bright eyes. You must have either suffered terribly or been terribly abused to have made such an alteration in your appearance Following Up the Thread. Her daughter's residence was next sought out, and she being found, corroborated every particular of the story which was told by Mrs. Dunn and Mrs. Osborne, her

The next morning, accompanied by Mr. Miller, I visited the office of S. E. Adams, who was formerly prosecuting attorney for Cuyahoga county, Ohio, one of the fore-most members of the Cleveland bar. Accompanied by Mr. Miller, Mr. Adams visited the Central station and had the visited the Central station and had the police officials make a search of the police records to see whether any charge had been lodged against Mr. Miller or any record made of the shooting of Frank Dunn on the hight of the 23d of March, 1881. No charge had ever been lodged and no record had ever been made. Mr. S. E. Adams the same day took the affidavits of Mrs. Dunn, Mrs. Osborne and Miss Ashley which were listened to and compared with each other in the presence of Detective John McTighe

The next step in following up the chain necessary to prove this man's innocence was the locating of Frank C. Dunn. His wife had heard of him as being a newspaper publisher in the City of Detroit, State of Michigan. A glance over a newspaper directory in the Cleveland Leader office give us the information that Bathrick & Dunn published the newspaper called Saturday Night in Detroit in 1890. A telegram sent over the Western Union wire to Detroit came back marked "can't find."

A Chase in Michigan. Taking the steamer City of Cleveland for Detroit that night we arrived in Detroit the next morning, where after a consulta-tion, we formulated a plan which within three hours put us in possession of the fact that Frank C. Dunn was located in Cincinnati, O., to which point we at once pro

Arriving in Cincinnati Mr. McTighe visited police headquarters, and enlisted the services of Edward J. Moses, one of the best known detectives of the Queen City. Mr. Moses came to the hotel, and after listening to Mr. Miller's story, accompanied by Mr. McTighe, took his departure, and in the course of a half an hour summoned myself and Mr. Miller to a 'Squire's office, where Mr. Dunn was found, and atter some conversation recognized Mr. Miller, and expressed his willingness to give the affidavit which is part of this story. It was a curious thing to witness the meeting between those two men, one of whom had almost been sent to "that bourne from which no traveler ever returns," by the accidental shot of the man who now, with trembling hands, awaited the man's reply after he requested him to make an affidavit to the truth of the statement which would help to clear his fair name. This was given in our

From Cincinnati the journey was taken up without any delay for Youngstowu, Ohio, where John G. Mellon, one of the best known hotel proprietors in that bustling Buckeye city was found. Mr. Miller conversed with Mr. Mellon in the presence of myself and Detective McTighe some two or three minutes before he mentioned his name or made himself known to Mr. Mellon. When he recalled himself to the recollection of Mr. Mellon, and asked him to relate to myself and Detective McTighe every stance which happened on the morning of Miller's arrest in the City of Pittsburg, he repeated verbatim the facts contained in his affidavit, and repeatedly said:

Always a Wonder to Him. "It always has been a wonder to me how you could ever have been convicted for the robbery of John Connors." That evening the last stage in the journey to Pittsburg was begun, and there in a friend's house a mass of matter from which this story has been woven was sorted and save what we could catch on the trains, was the eight hours' rest obtained while crossing Lake Erie. I cannot speak in too high praise of the manner in which Detective McTighe worked out this case.

One of the most dramatic incidents in this hunt for evidence was the visit paid to Colonel W. D. Moore's house Saturday night about midnight. Colonel Moore was found reclining on a bed, suffering from a disease to which a man of less indomitable will power would have succumbed long ago. Mr. Miller placed before him the different affidavits which had been gathered, and with gleaming eyes and trembling voice said: "I conjure you by the love you bear to your children and grandchildren, and by the mercy that you shall some day ask from God, to make an affidavit in which shall be contained that confession of the real perpetrator of the Connors' robbery which trator of the Connors' robbery which you told me in New York was at my command whenever I was ready to attempt to prove my innocence."

A Very Dramatic Scene. It was a scene worthy of the brush of a painter as the old gentleman lifted himself in his couch, and taking a seat at a large table in another room began to dietate to Mr. Shields one of the most remarkable statements to which I have ever listened. Everyone present realized how much rested on the words which fell from the lips of that fine-featured, gray-headed old lawyer, and lear and distinct tones he made on the as in clear and distinct tones he made pub-lic for the first time a secret which had been locked in his own breast for years and which meant so much to James W.

As the narrative proceeded even the cool, determined officer of the law could not con-tain himself as he listened to what he said was one of the most cruel outrages and mis-earriages of justice which had been inflicted in his knowledge on a mortal man. After the story was told, in the dawn of the morning as we were about to take our departure, incidentally Miss Mosby's name was menioned and Miller, drawing himself up proudly erect, said:

proudly erect, said:

"Colonel Moore, I pledge you my word that after this story is published to the world, if it be necessary, I will accompany the writer, yourself and Detective McTighe to the city of my birth and prove that I have a right to wear one of the best names in this country."

I cannot help but admire the will power and the stern determination of purpose which kept this man on his feet as he traversed town and hamlet searching for the evidence which would enable him to lift his face and gaze into the eyes of friends and loved ones and say: "I have suffered unjustly," and receive their congratulations as they express their sympathy for the frightful suffering he had endured while passing through this ordeal.
