Miss Thomas told him Chris-tie had left the house in the afternoon. Miss Thomas' story confirms a theory that had long obtained among those interested in the case, but which has been withheid from the public. Almy was madly jealous of Prof. Pattee, and of this jealousy most cruel and unjust suspicion was born, involving the professor and Miss Warden. After the meeting at Mt. Gilead on Monday Major McKinley was tired out. He went down to Columbus to get a good night's sleep and to confer with members of the Executive Committee about campaign affairs. The Republican editors of Ohio met in Columbus during the day, and many of them had remained over. W. S. Cappeller, that dyed-in-the wool hustler from Mansheld, led a delegation up to the Major's room. The situation in the State was freely discussed, and they all admitted that the prospects were encouraging and hopeful.

OFF FOR DELAWARE.

Indebt and early this morning the Malor and the newspaper gang proceeded to Delaware, which was the town on the pro gramme to be visited. It is one of the pretriest villages in the State; an ideal, restful sort of a place, with rows of trees lining the streets. The placid citizens live in beautiful homes, and little happens during the year a disturb their uneventful residence. Delaware College is at one end of the town, the Court House about the center, but beyond hese two attractions the people have nothing else to show the stranger.

To-day, however, the Republicans of the town and county got themselves together for a grand rally. When they are stirred up these people are very enthusiastic, and the way they howled for McKinley cheered the heart of the tariff champion. His reception was by all odds the noisiest he has had in his tour of the State. The county convention was held, and this was the occasion that brought the Republican leaders to the town.

GREETING FOR M'KINLEY.

When the Big Four train drew into Delaware, over a thousand people were assem-bled at the depot to greet Major McKinley and his associate on the ticket, Hon. W. T. Cope. A great cheer went up as the fatoiliar faces of the two candidates appeared and a reception committee, consisting of Mayor Culver, Ron, J. D. Vandeman and Hon, James Lytle, stepped forward and escorted them to the carringes.

some 500 men wearing McKinley badges were drawn up in line at the depot and they gave three justy cheers and stepped off to the Hotel Donavin, headed by a band. The town was profusely decorated, the streets were filled and there was continuous cheering along the route to the hotel. A call was made for a speech, which was responded to by Major McKinley, who spoke a the balcony of the hotel. He said that the Republican party of Ohio were never more interested, more enthusiastic, more cornect and more resolute for victory. What we want in this country," said the Malor, "are good markets, good money, good wages and steady employment, and the policy of the Republican party gives us all

VISITING THE TEACHERS.

The convention adjourned, out of respect o the Major, and the delegates flocked to the hotel and depot to see him. After the reception was over he was invited to visit the County Teachers' Institute, which was being held in the town. The Major consented and made a short speech to the pedagogues. His remarks were well received and they applanded him vigorously. He said their work was great and responsible.
