ONE WAY TO OPEN ALL SAFES Further conversation with Mr. James Further conversation with Mr. James tirely apart from anything bearing on above statements, revealed the fact that cording to his statement, Nelson was as a specimen of an intelligent scoundre one would find in many a day. He how Nelson had talked for hours with about a method which he was busy s ing up for opening safes. Nelson cla that he had demonstrated, to his own faction, that any safe could be opened be tween the time the owner left it in the even the the the owner the next morning without the use of tools of any kind by simply turning the knob of the combina-tion. The combination must be worked a great number of times, perhaps several thousand, before the holts would be free, but no matter how intricets the combinabut no matter how intricate the combination, he was sure it could be done by this method. He gave other information re-garding the Missouri land frands, which it is the intention of the people who heard it to verify as quickly as possible; and they are satisfied, from information they themeclves possessed previous to talking with Mr. James, that there will be some startling light let in on the question as to why Burns and son were the only ones who went to the penitentiary for land frauds in which a number of the most prominent men shared the profits.

WHERE THE MONEY CAME FROM.

There is one thing quite evident, and that is gleaned from a conversation with Miller, that he is determined to fight this matter that he is determined to high this matter out until his opponents produce evidence, and such evidence as honest men will call conclusive, regarding his past, or until he has hushed every volce that brings charges against him that is worthy of the attention or the notice of the public. He has a docu-ment in his possession which has been in existence since 1885—this fact being well known to several prominent men in the known to several prominent men in the city of Pittsburg, three, at least, who were present when it came into existence-which details minutely and exactly where he got this much-talked-of $1,800 that were taken from him the day of his arrest. Any one will see at once that if this was in existence six years ago it cannot be con-cocted to suit the occasion, as Miller could have had no idea that he would want to use it six years afterward, and the circumstances which gave rise to its birth were entirely beyond his control. It is at the service of the public, he declares, whenever it chooses to see it.

Miller has met every attack made by his enemies, as fast as possible, by securing new proofs to offset the charges made against him. In a conversation with him last night he said

MILLER FLUSH BEFORE THE BOBBERY. "The impression exists among many people that, until the robbery of old John Connors there was no money in my possession. I want to disprove that in a manner that can-not be questioned, and I will do that by re-ferring in one instance to E. P. Roberts & Sons, the jewelers of Fifth avenue. Their books will show that on March 22, the day previous to the robbery of old John Connors, at 10 o'clock in the morning of that day 1 bought from them a gold hunting case watch. The watch case was numbered 43,950; it had a Rockford movement No. 14,520. The ttch and chain cost me $142. On April 11 I also purchased at the same establishment a diamond stud, 1 1-16 and 1-46 carats in weight, for which I paid $130. You can turn to the books of D. Allen, the well-known shoemaker of Smithfield street, and you will find that he made me a pair of cloth-top shoes and a pair of Congress gaiters on March 22 the day before the robbery, for which I paid him $14 a pair. Alfred Jessop even has the pencil with which he wrote the order. He has been with Allen since 1873. Charles F. Mohr, the well-knowntailor of Smithfield street, can show by his books that on March 22, I left an order with im for summer clothing amounting to over $100, and that afternoon left for Cleveland

In the language of the "patient and long suffering public" of the West End, they last night entered a most businesslike pro-test against "snail locomotion and chickencoop street cars." As a result, the Pitts burg and West End Street Railway Company will have to brace up and give its patrons rapid transit and better accommodations at once or a competing line will be built. Several days ago notices, of which the following is a copy, were posted in large numbers about Chartiers, Crafton, Ingram, Mansfield and the West End:

Notice-A public meeting will be held in Norice-A public meeting will be held in the Daubs building, Friday evening, August 28, at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of formulat-ing a plan for more rapid transit for the West End and vicinity. WEST END CITIZENS.

This innocent-looking little notice seemed to be fully understood by the patrons of the West End Railway, and at the appointed hour prominent residents of that part of the city and neighborhood commenced gathering about the hall. It was evident they were in earnest and deeply convinced that ticket." they had a serious grievance to consider.

WEST ENDERS DEAD IN EARNEST.

They stood around the street corners in little groupes and discussed the best modes of procedure until the opening hour. Finally a light was struck in the room in which the meeting was to be held, and within ten minutes the apartment was filled to its capacity. Fully 400 people were present, representing, it was stated, over $1,000,000 worth of property affected by insufficient street car accommodations. From the turn which affairs' soon took, it was evident that the people present were was evident that the people present were not only anxious to protest against the present road, but ready and willing to build a new road, providing a right of way can be secured. They said they were done begging of the West End company, and now proposed to demand that the public be accommodated in the matter of street car travel, or that the charter of the present road be annulled. "We come here this time," said a prominent man in the meeting to a DISPATCH reporter, "to

The meeting was called to order at eight o'clock, by Prof. T. T. Taylor, who imme-dintely put a motion electing Joseph Hays, the well known attorney, chairman. Homer McGaw was selected as secretary. In stating the object of the meeting, Mr. Hays took it for granted that all under-stood the disadvantages under which the West End residents had so long labored. He said the people o' that unfortunate part of the city lived too much on the street cars.

NECESSITY OF MODERN METHODS.

"The horse cars were all right in their day and generation," he said, "but we now feel the necessity of more modern and rapid transit. It now takes the most part of an hour to go to the city, and in that time we can go to Sewickley or almost anywhere else on the steam cars. We all realize the reason for the non-development of the West End and vicinity, which is owing to not A SOUTHSIDE JEWELER KILLED having better means of getting to and from the city. "I have been looking around side people generally yesterday that the Charles G. Weber killed in the Statesville, to see how to get out of the dilemma," he said. "This is a most valued country about N.C. railroad wreck was the well-known the West End-ss valuable as any in the county. Duff, Mrs. Weber's brother, started immediately for North Carolina. Mr. Weber had for some time been suffering with Bright's disease, and had been under with Bright's disesse, and had been under various forms of treatment. He learned a few weeks ago of a physician in New York City who could cure his illness, and two weeks ago started with his wife to visit him. He left his wife at Atlantic City and went to New York. The physician advised him to go South for his health, and he was on his way there. Mrs. Weber re-turned to this city from the East and did not accompany her husband South. Mr. Weber was one of the best-known and most highly respected business men on the Southside. He was one of the oldest jewelers in that part of the city. His brother, Theodore, has a jewelry store not been profitable, so it is claimed, notwithstanding extra prices, and this diffi-culty is hard to overcome. How are we going to solve the difficulty? Some suggest a tunnel from Birmingham to Shalersville being a former resident of Cleveland. It is absurd to say that they did not see me, or the franchise of the West End road. A better way would be to devise some means by which we could secure the right of it is a notorious fact that the officials of the prison lost no opportunity to show me to any officer visiting the prison, with the hope that they might identify me. Mr. Wise, inspired by Prof. Taylor's re-marks, again took the floor and made a strong speech. He said that the West End people had been importuning the West End Com-pany long enough, and asked what relief could now be expected. "Why not put our shoulders to the wheel," he asked, "and have more rapid transit? We must go to the street railway people, if we go at all, and say not that they should, but that they must give us better accommodations, or that we will build a road. Let us have a rail-road of our own. What is the use of wait-ing another quarter of a century? Pittsburg and Mexican Tin Company, in Durango, Mexico. The shipment is one of 20 tons, and is the initial of a large trade which the company is now in a position to undertake. It will enter the open market in competition with the imported article, and the product of this and the American mines may reasonably be expected in time to supply the requirements of the country. The Pittsburg and Mexican Tin Company was organized about a year ago. The stock is held in this city. The shipment referred to is the first made by the company and road of our own. What is the use of wait-ing another quarter of a century? Mr. Ralph made a speech in the same strain, and was followed by William K. Zeigler, the grocer. "They say they will give us rapid transit, but when?" he asked. I believe that if we would go to the Man-chester road and tell them that we would build a bridge across the river that they would extend their lines to this side. If they can't build the bridge we will lead them the money, and I am one to promise that I will not ride on the West End road until we get the new road, and that I will then patronize it. follows on the development of the com-pany's property made during the past year. The first annual meeting of the shareholders will be held in this city to-day, and facts in connection with the mining of tin will be presented which will dispose of the asser-tions that tin is not to be procured for American use except from foreign shores.

Prof. Taylor here suggested that the com-mittee to be appointed, which had previous-ly been referred to, also be instructed to see if the charter of the West End road could not be annulled if they did not furnish their methods with prostracommediations. The amount of tin which it is proposed to place on the market, for the present, is be-tween 20 tons and 30 tons per week. The material is reported as of excellent quality and will more than compete with the im-ported article patrons with proper accommodations. "They do not provide accommodations, as provided in the charter. We are compelled to stand up-" A voice-"Not if you present a green ported article.

The enterprise of this company may have the effect of instilling courage into the owners of the Dakota and California mines, which, though opened up, are not producing tin for the market. A tariff of 4 cents per pound is placed on imported tin for two years, beginning with 1893, and if 5,000 tons of American tin are not produced in both these years the duty is to be removed. The production of tin so near the States as in Mexico may have the effect of stimu-lating the growth of the tinned plate indus-try. If Americans are slow in taking ad-DEADHEADS CAN GET SEATS. This interruption was followed by a roar of laughter, which was explained by the fact that deadhead tickets on that line are of that color. "The building of a bridge for the Man-chester line is a good idea," said Prof. Tay-lor, "and I approve it." A voice-Let us have the bridge, anyway. A motion was then put appointing a com-mittee to confer with the West End Com-pany, the bridge companies and the Man-chester Company, and to investigate the feasibility of the different routes for a new road. The Chair appointed the following: Thomas T. Taylor, John S. Ralph, Charles Daub, Thomas Hershberger and Homer L. McGraw. try. If Americans are slow in taking ad-try. McGraw. As a comparison of the extra cost of liv-ing in the West End as compared with the East End a man with a penchant for mathe-matics presented the following: One trip a day from the West End will require two hours' travel going and coming. This amounts to 730 hours in 365 days, or 73 working days of 10 hours each. The cost of a trip from Chartiers to the city and re-turn is 22 cents, making $80 30 per year. The time to and from the East End, the same distance, requires but one hour a day or 36½ days of ten hours each per year. The cost of 365 trips at 6 cents each amounts to $21 90 or $58 40 per year less than the same number of trips to the West End. The average man's time is worth $3 a day. The time he spends on horse cars between Chartiers and Pittsburg would amount to $219 00 in a year at that rate if he made the trip every day. Add this to his fare of $86 30 and it amounts to a total of $299 30 a year. John Jenkins, ex-manager of tinned plate works in Wales, is at present in the city. He arrived here from Wales a short time ago, to investigate matters for Welshmen. He is also interested in certain patents which he is arranging to dispose of. He proposes to invest some of this capital in tinned plate works in this country. Mr. Jenkins says he has patents which are valuable for tinned plate working. Asked why he should bring them over here instead of using them overthere in Wales, he said that labor there was so cheap the manufasturers had no object to join in using machinery or labor-saving devices. which taken by itself, would indicate that a city could not be a part of a county poor district. Attorney James F. Robb, solicitor for the County Poor Board, calls attention to the fact that that act of 1852 was a special one, and could not be repealed by the act of 1879 as it stands the latter being a gen-eral law, without any provision for repeal-ing the special one. Mr. Robb says the matter was inquired into before the renomination of the present incumbent, Mr. Patterson, a citizen of Mc-Keesport, was decided upon. Mr. Robb states that the county poor district outside of McKeesport would gladly agree to a severance, as, though that city pays con-siderable poor tax, it is nevertheless a heavy weight on the rest of the district, with its works of various kinds constantly turning out poor house grist far beyond its tax-producing capacity, but he says it can-not be helped at present. WHAT IS HAPPENING IN THE TWO CITIES

The case of Thomas Condry, alias Eggie conroy, charged with being connected with the Rudert murder, is still exciting considerable interest. His claims to an alibi are retty generally believed. THE DISPATCH correspondent at Youngstown was wired to investigate the story that he had been in investigate the story that he had been in the penitentiary at Columbus at the time of the murder. PREPARED TO PLAY THE DUDE.

"To an unbiased mind this would indicate that I either wished to prepare myself to represent the dude' element at the Connors robbery or else I was one of the most cal loused villains that ever existed, to deck myself out with jewels and new clothing to participate in the robbery of an old man the next day."

'Further, it is a curious circumstance to a thinking man, that during all the years I was incarcerated in the penitentiary, and especially during the excitement created by the killing of Detective Hulligan, of Cleveland, and when his brother officers were as thick as flies on a sugar cask, around the penitentiary looking for evidence that l lead to the arrest of the murderers, that not one of them ever picked me out as know of my presence in the prison, because it is a notorious fact that the officials of the

ANOTHER ALIBI AT HAND.

It is well-known to many people here in the city that during the time that it claimed by some interested parties that was serving a sentence of a year-that is from 1879 to 1880-in the Columbus penitentiary, I was living right here in Pittsburg. This can be proven beyond the shadow of doubt. In conversation yesterday with Detective Geary, of the Pittsburg and Lake Erie Railroad, who was one of the detectives of the police force of the city of Pittsburg in 1881, and who really arrested Miller, O'Mara coming in after the arrest had been made, said: "I never believed Miller guilty. I never suw anything in the conduct of the man during the time of his arrest, or during the trial in Clarion county, that would indicate he was 'crooked,' as we term it. Neither was there any evidence brought out during the trial that, in my mind, justified his con-viction, and as far as my knowledge goes, since his discharge the man has lived and acted as an honest man would; and if, pre-vious to his arrest, he had been a thief or a bad character, I do not think that he could have nowibly lived in the means had been have possibly lived in the manner he has without some of his old associates being seen with him or being in communication

NOT A SALVATION SOLDIER.

Captain Evans Denies That One of H Followers Went Astray.

Captain Evans, of the Salvation Army, denies the statement of a man named Louis Smith that the latter is a member of the army. Smith was arrested on the Southside Wednesday night while playing a game of poker with two companions on Jones & Laughlin's trestle, at the foot of South Twenty-sixth street.

He gave a history of the old method of reaching the city by ferry and the old bus route, which he described as but little worse than the present arlittle worse than the present ar-rangement. "There are no accommodations now," he said. The passengers are packed in like sardines, and hard working men and girls, tired out by their day's labor, are compelied to stand up. AMERICANS OPPOSE IT.

The Foreign Bricklayers Voted for a-Continuance of the Strike.

When the bricklayers met three weeks go last night they took a vote which was both instructive and interesting. The vote was on the question as to whether the strike should be declared off or not. It was finally decided by a majority vote to continue the strike. The interesting part of the matter is that the American members of the craft voted to a man to declare the strike off, while the foreigners were unanimous in
