

SOME GOOD SHOOTING

Done by Members of the National Guard at the Salt Works Range Yesterday Afternoon.

THE DELAMATER TROPHY IS WON.

Sixteenth Regiment Marksmen Retain the Prize They Had For Two Years Previously.

EXCELLENT AIMING AT A DISTANCE.

One Man's Service Was Necessary to Save the Day for the Victors.

HOOTING is an art that few people understand. Those who do, though, take such an interest in it that it is hard for them to see why it is of so little interest to the general public. Give a sharpshooter a good gun and a good gun and he will spend days and weeks at the range, trying to better his score.

The annual contest for the Delamater trophy was shot yesterday on the range of the Fourteenth Regiment, at Salt Works, and resulted in a victory for the Sixteenth Regiment, which, being its third successive victory, the trophy becomes the property of that organization.

Early yesterday morning the different teams began to assemble at the Baltimore and Ohio station. There were greetings and general handshaking as each new arrival came up, for the majority of them are well known, having tested their skill time and again, sometimes against each other, and again shooting side by side on the bridge, without showing the slightest animosity.

ALL THE DETAILS ARRANGED. The first thing done upon arrival at the range was to prepare the targets and arrange the details of the match. Major Samuel Hazlett, Ordnance Officer of the Second Brigade, was in command, and he gathered the inspectors about him, and a general discussion about the details of the match was held.

After arguing, pro and con, on several points, everything was finally arranged. Then the drawing of lots for turn to shoot took place. Quite a lively interest was taken in this, as there were but two targets on each range, one steel and one of paper, and every one was anxious to shoot at the steel target. The drawing resulted in the Fifth, Tenth, Fifteenth and Eighteenth teams getting the steel target, and the Fourteenth, Sixteenth and Battery B the other one.

Battery B and the Tenth teams led off, and the sharp crack of rifle and the smack of the bullets striking the targets became imminent. It was 9:30 o'clock when the first shot was fired, and shooting continued without interruption until 6 o'clock, when the match ended. First the 200-yard target was fired at. Two men of each team took position, fired alternately at their respective targets, and after each shot was fired the markers on the indicated the place with dyes. The highest single score that can be made is 5, or "bull's eye," which is indicated by a white disc, and is worth 25 points.

accounts for the sharp spotting of its opponent. Lieutenant Connelly, I. R. P., of the Sixteenth Regiment, is one of the best shots in the Guard. He also has a son on the team who is hard to beat. A good story is told about them. In a recent match Frank had just made a bulls-eye, when his father, who was spotting for him, exclaimed, "You had better be a little careful there, son; you are only about an inch and a half in the black." The average marksman is glad if he can cut the edge, which counts just as much as a deep one.

At the 500 and 600-yard range, the marksman lay prone on the ground, with head toward the target and a coacher beside him, watching every point, to see if the gun was level or if the wind had changed. It is remarkable how the slightest puff of wind will change the course of a bullet, especially at a long range; or, if the wind gauge is set for a strong breeze and it should suddenly cease, the target would be missed entirely.

As the members of the teams finished their scores at the different targets, almost every one would inquire anxiously, "What did you make?" and then put it down for future reference. At the last firing point the scores were called out. A good story is told of the Sixteenth's last man started to shoot he had a bulls-eye.

There were 40 participants in the shoot, seven from each regiment and Troop failed to send a team. Each man had 21 shots to fire, 7 at each range, with a possible score of 105 to make. The highest individual score was made by Private W. G. Graft of the Sixteenth, 84, followed closely by Corporal Bacon, of the Fifteenth, and Sergeant Lynch, of the Fourteenth, with 83. The scores were as good as they might have been, owing to the chopping wind and the scurrying clouds that would throw a shadow on the target every now and then, which did not demerit the high score.

"It is surprising how little interest is taken in this shoot by the local military," said one officer. "We have gone to a great deal of trouble to make it a success, and yet there are not more than half a dozen representatives here outside of the contestants. I told the caterer to provide for about 150, and there are not more than 75 here, shooters and all. It is a little bit discouraging, after the trouble we have gone to."

The members of the different teams making the best individual score will be selected by their respective inspectors to represent their teams for the annual shoot there, which takes place next week. Several cash prizes and the brigade trophy were held by the Third brigade, which finished in the following order: Sixteenth, Tenth, Fourteenth, Fifth, Fifteenth, Battery B, and Eighteenth. The score follows:

CHEEKS A RAW SORE

Little Boy's Suffering from Eczema. Grew Worse Under Sore-tectors. Cured by Cuticura.

For one year my little boy was troubled with eczema. After trying three eminent physicians, the disease grew worse; both cheeks became a raw sore. Then I saw in my own paper, my sister had written of an opinion that if I had not tried CUTICURA, my boy would have died. I bought a box of Cuticura and used it as directed. After using the remedies for two months, he was cured, and is now as fat as any boy. I send you this testimonial, in hopes some poor afflicted one may see this cure and obtain speedy relief. W. J. DRUNKENNESS

It is manufactured in a bottle, which can be given in a glass of beer, a cup of coffee or tea, or in food, without the knowledge of the patient. It is absolutely harmless, and will effect a permanent and specific cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. It has been given in thousands of cases, and in every instance a perfect cure has followed. It never fails. The system once impregnated with the Specific becomes an open possibility for the liquor appetite to exist. It is a most peculiar and powerful medicine. It is sold by R. H.
