IT IS A YEAR OF GREAT PLENTY.

So Say the Reports From Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia.

FARMERS DOWN ON CARELESS SHOOTERS

There is hardly a man in the city who does not intend, or hopes to be able to take at least one day off from the business grind this fall, and spend a few delightful hours in the woods and fields after the standard game of this section—quail, pheasant and squirrel. The great difficulty has always been where to go. This knowledge is possessed by but a few, and has been jealously guarded, the game preserves of the three States being practically at the mercy of the "market shooters" and despised "pot hunters." while legitimate city sportsmen, off only for a day, are obliged to be content with a hard tramp, rewarded only by an oco often sorely tried by a lot of hoodlums uzing away all over the place, shooting re calves than game, and utterly careless to the farmer's greatest fear during the fall months-a forest fire.

Come may be shot in Pennsylvania as follows: Quail from November 1-to December 15; pheasants, October 1 to January 1 Equirrels, September 1 to January 1; rabbits, November 1 to January 1; woodcock, June 1 to January 1.

The open season in West Virginia is a follows: Quail, November 1 to December 20; pheasants, November 1 to January 1; oodcock, July 1 to September 15; wild turkeys, September 15 to January 1; deer, September 15 to December 15. In regard to localities, Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia seem to offer the greatest sdvantages as to quail, though reports from all points this year seem to indicate an even greater abundance than last year quall were extremely plentiful, and this season they are reported more abundant than ever. The heavy snows of last winter were very hard on the birds, but owing to the poor hunting weather, there were more than the usual number of old birds left over for breeding purposes. In the neighborhood of Amity, Beallsyille, and all along the southern edge of the county, quall are as blentiful as last year, when a fair day's hooting consisted in bagging 125 quall, with occasional phesasat. Quall are also red pientiful near West Middleton, with mirrels, while rabbits are so numerous if Washington and Greene counties it ly worth while to shoot them unless taken along to do the carrying.

A local hunters here, Sam McKennan, Margerum, Charley Balley, Jim Wylie, Messes, Our and Grier, seem to prefer county of the extreme eastern edge Virginia for quall, though many big are daily seem within a few minutes' walk of this city and around Taylorstown. As for pheasants, the man after that wary game is advised to try the Hickory gas field, as they are reported rather plentiful on the rather hostile to hunters, as they have been abused terribly in the past, reckless shooters tramping down crops and leaving bars lying on the ground until the farmers are thred.

The Farmers Seriously Object

GREENSBURG, PA.-The grangers of this county have been badly treated in the past, and have organized for the protection of game and themselves. Not a Sportsman's Paradisc.

Exit, PA .- Whatever this county may have been in the past, it is not now a sportsman's been in the past, it is not now a sportsman's paradise. Rabbits are very plenty, but bords more scarce than ever. Duck shooting on the pay promises to be splendid sport this fall. Teal, gray duck and "butter balls re reported to be simply swarming, while a occasional canvas back and focks of costisome wood duck will amply repay all lianters for a little disappointment in qualitation of the properties of t

Where Small Game Abounds.

Mences, Pa.—Small game in the county is very abnadant. Rabbits are too plentiful to furnish sport. For the past two years an effort has been made to foster birds, and as effort has been made to foster birds, and as a result quail are more plentiful than for many years. The chestnut ridges and thickers also promise good pheasant shooting. Seritrels are becoming a thing of the past. For handsome black has disappeared and the gray is weakening, owing, as some say, to a cross with the reds, which are numerous. The sarrners have taken a hostile armade to foreign hunters during the past trave cours, and as a result game has wondered the past trave formed clubs, posted their groupes, and offer to prosecute intruders.

me of the Best Pheasant Shooting. JOHNSTOWN, PA .- Quall are few in this see tion, and squirrels are thinning, but Cambria offers the best pheasant shooting in Western Pennsylvania, so old hunters say. Wild curkeys are also numerous. Their food in the woods at fulls season is rather scarce, and large flocks can be seen frequently in fields, where they are after grain. They are sery with, however, and, like the pheasant, has best be, taken when snow is on the fraunt. They county is overrum with rabouts and are destroying orchards and young reas, and farmers will be glad to accord a matter a day's shooting on the premises, and farmers will be glad to accord a fanter a day's shooting on the premises, and farmers will be glad to accord a counter a day's shooting on the premises, and seeming semewhat jealous of their birds, lowever. ennsylvanta, so old hunters say. Wild

A Hearty Welcome Offered. Theresta, Pa.—Ten years ago the man who shot a mibbit in these woods was a hero, but to-day they swarm the woods, and no one an explain the remarkable increase. Squirris have left this section, but may come in any day. Two years ago they could be killed with a stick, last year they were rare, and they near the same. Nuts are plentiful, however and they may swarm in on a day's note, as they often do. Notwithstanding to rang, in the midst of the nesting season, hidd destroyed probably thousands of manne, this willy bird promises to be his year in great abundance. In fact, not will be the aportsman's parameants, no matter in which direct place, or any other place in he may take. Quali are few here, though time was when the woods were full of them, but hawks, foxes and hard winters have proved too much for poor little "Bob White," and he has left. There are no restrictions what-ever placed on the hunter here, and he will receive a cordial invitation to come in, and help himself to the best the land affords.

Hig Game in West Virginia. Wheeling, W. Va.—The prospects for small game in this vicinity are excellent, particularly birds, while rabbits are even more numerous than last year. Little hunting is done for small game in the upper Panhandle counties, most of the local hunters going into Washington county, Pa., along the headwaters of Wheeling creek, or into Belmont and the lower end of Jeffersonville county, O. In this State, however, in the neighborhood of Cameron, Littleton and Fish creek, from Martinsville, on the river, to Cameron, splendid shooting may be had, rabbits, squirrels and birds being plentiful. Within a radius of ten miles of this city farmers are hostile to the hunters, but in the counties of Wetzel and Tyler, the eastern portion of Marshal, Marion and others there are no objections made. Information gleaned from the country press of the interior of the State shows that deer, hears and other large game are far more plentiful than for several years past. ous than last year. Little hunt-

Bear, Deer and Foxes. Sr. GEORGE, W. VA .- There are still in this section thousands of acres of wild land, inhunters are cleaning up their old rifles for a turn at both, which are reported very numerous a few miles from here. Small game merous a few miles from here. Small game is reported plentiful, and this means plenty of foxes, while berries and herbage for deer and bears are abundant, and the latter will not cross the Allegheny Mountains into Virginia for tood this year, as they have frequently been obliged to do. The people of the interior, if taken in the right right way, are glad to extend every privilege to hunters from a distance. They are neither surly nor suspicious, and any visitor, with good intentions and a good gun, can easily secure a guide and take a day's hunt and encounter more wild large game in this section than any of the Eastern States.

A Chance to Shoot White Rabbit: LOUISVILLE, PA,-Squirrels are woefully scarce here, but a few · miles drive over the state line into Ohio promises plenty of sport, as the "bush tails" are reported scampering as the "bush tails" are reported scampering over every tree top and fattening for the broiler. While not in great abundance, quail and rabbit shooting this season will be fair, and farmers are not hostile to a good fellow. This district excels in a rarity that is well worth the day's hunt to get—the celebrated white rabbit, a great big, white, fat hare, scarce, it is true, but still to be had here, and he is a proud hunter who brings in two or three of the 20-pound fine fellows for the spit. Conneaut Lake furnishes the duck shooting, and every report from there indicates that this season will equal or even excel last.

Where Grouse Can Be Found.

WARREN, O .- Wise game laws and careful farmers resulted in bringing a great var ety and abundance of small game into Trumi ull county this season. Quail are especially plentiful, as the spring and summer seasons plentiful, as the spring and summer seasons were very favorable, and the cherry "Bob White" can be heard in every fence corner. They are well grown and strong. The hardy grouse also wintered in good shape, and some satisfactory pheasant shooting can be had. Rabbits are numerous as usual, and hounds and ferrets are required to keep down the prolific "cotton tail." Farmers are posting their lands, but a gentlemanly request to be accorded hunting privileges is usually cheerfully given. The superb woodcock is very numerous here. All squirrels are scarce.

HOLLIDAYSBURG, PA.-The nimrods heres outs have the blues over the poor game prospects for this fall season. The extensive forest fires that prevailed in Blair sive forest fires that prevailed in Blair county early last spring destroyed the pheasants and wild turkeys while breeding. The quali are comparatively scarce, and the farmers object to hunting on their bottom lands. There are no squirrels this year. The mountains are full of ground hogs, but raccoons are few in number. The favorite hunting grounds for local sportsmen are the Brush, Tussey and the Allegheny Mountains. The Farmers' Alliance is split on the hunting question, but the majority of farmers have posted on their grounds a sign announcing that they will enforce the trespass laws.

BEDFORD, PA.—Sportsmen are getting everything in readiness to make an onelaught on the squirrels. The season which opens on Tuesday promises to be the best for years. There will be more gray squitrels than for many years. The old hunters say that quail, pheasanto and rabbits are unusually plenty this fall. Everything points to an unusual good fall for sports. All game, including turkeys, far exceeds last fall, which was considered the best for years. With but few exceptions the farmers of Bedford county are generous as to hunting on their grounds. In fact comparatively few farmers have notices up prohibiting hunting, and permission is readily granted when asked. for years. There will be more gray squirrels

Plenty of Small Game but No Big Game. CHARLESTON, W. VA.—Small game is re-ported far more numerous than for some ported far more numerous than for some years past, owing to the mild winter and favorable breeding season. There is an unusually heavy fail of nuts reported this year in the West Virginia forests, and small game, especially squirrels, are migrating this way. For 10e miles surrounding this city squirrels are swarming and tame. Quall are increasing, and pheasants are plentiful, but only found in the thick wooded districts. The pheasants are reported very plentiful up the Elk and Gauley rivers. Rabbits are as numerous as usual, as are all small game, especially in the region north of the Great Kanawha, rather on the south side.

Quail Raising Two Broods.

NEWARK, O .- Quail are plentiful here this year, many old birds having been left over last year for breeding purposes, and shooting will be splendid. It is said by farmers that quail are raising two broods this sca-son, which is something remarkable, and means they will be plentiful next year also. Rabbits are swarming, but as usual pheas-ants are very scarce. Farmers will readily grant hunting permission to gentlemen, not hoodlums. . 6

Have Notices Up Everywhere.

SHARON, PA .- Quail and rabbits were more plentiful last year than for ten years back. It was a common occurrence for a hunter to out single handed and bag from 20 to 30 qual. The prospects for quall this year are about the same as last, and if anything a little better. Farmers report that hunting will be better than for years, but are greatly opposed to hunting, and on every farm you will see a sign inscribed with "No Hunting on This Farm."

All Kinds of Game Plentiful. Mansfield, O.—Game prospects were never better here. Farmers report quall, pheasants and rabbits in larger quantities phresants and monits in larger quantities than ever before, owing to the light snows of the past few winters, which knocked out the hated pot-hunter. Cranberry Marsh, ib miles north of this city, is alive with rab-bits, and farmers are rather favorably dis-

Hunters Are Not Wanted.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O .- Game is very scarce here. Most of the potters here are English and Welsh, and all born sportsmen. There-fore, the district is hunted out and farmers are antigonistic, many of them posting or advertising in the papers that prosecution will follow intrusion.

Good Game of Every Kind.

WELLSBURG, W. VA .- Farmers report small game remarkably plentiful about the cleared fields and low thickets, quail and pheasants being found without trouble, and the rabbit erop surpasses that of any previous year. Farmers are rather unfavorable to hunters.

Farmers Inclined to Be Lenient. WELLSVILLE, O .- Quail are plentiful, and pheasants well worth a visit to this locality. Faamers are rather unfavorable, but inclined to be lenient to good people, owing to the abundance of rabbits, which are becom-

It Requires Special Permission. WESTON, W. VA.—Small game, pheasants qualland rabbits are more plentiful here than ever known, especially pheasants. Farmers are rather hostile, but special per-mission can easily be secured for a good day's hunting.

Quail of Small Size. Uniontown, Pa.-Game of all kinds is more plentiful than it has been for years. The fields and thickets are alive with quall, quail in many places was materially inter-fered with by the heavy rains at that time, hence the majority of the quail will be small in size this fall. Many farmers are very strict in regard to hunting on their grounds, but there are many places where they will not be interfered with in the least.

Squirrels Abound Near Son SOMERSET, PA.-The hunting indicati are fair this season in this section. In the western part of the county where last year western part of the county where last year the gray squirrel was a rarity, the woods now abound with them. Sportsmen who are fond of wing shooting will find no lack of sport in the northern and eastern part of the county, where quait and pheasants are reported in great numbers. The prospects for rabbits throughout the county are probably brighter than for years past. Hunters who are well informed on the game prospects say that wild turkey will be found in great numbers at different points of the county, especially along Laurel Hill. Sportsmen find but little opposition from the land owners where game abound, and at many places the price of a dinner or horse feed secures a license to hunt at liberty.

The Game Protective Society's Work. FRANKLIN, PA .- Owing to the vigilance of the Game Protective Society the outlook for plenty of game this fall is very flattering. plenty of game this fall is very flattering. Squirrels are plentiful and pheasants much more numerous than for several seasons. Quail are very scarce in this section, but this season they have become more numerous. There is an understanding among the sportsmen in this section that no quail be killed until 1892, in order that they may become plentiful and in hopes of propagating this game bird. Rabbits are so plenty as to be a nuisance, and the necessity of their extermination is a subject very seriously considered by our farmers.

Farmers Require an Introduction that the prospects for small game this season are excellent. Quail and rabbits are reare excellent. Quail and rabbits are reported in large numbers throughout the county, while there is a much larger showing of pheasants than was anticipated by hunters. The damage done in the past by reckless hunters in destroying crops and willfully injuring property has caused farmers to strictly enforce the law of trespass against strangers. Sportsmen possessing letters of introduction have no difficulty in securing permission to hunt over the grounds and are most hospitably entertained.

Good Chance for 'Coon Hunting

Not the Hunter's Paradise. Du Bois, Pa.—Game in this region is very scarce, and the hunter who would expect to find this region a sportman's para-dise would make a great mistake. Rabbits and foxes furnish a bulk of the sport for the majority of those who take any delight in a chase. Quall are very scarce and also the peasants, but occasionally a flock can be seen at the beginning of the season. In addition to these there are some woodcock found in the sandy marshes and along the streams north and east of the city.

Farmers Enjoy the Sport.

Hunters Are Not Welcome. BUTLER, PA .- Game in this vicinity is un-

Farmers Object to Pot Hunter ZANESVILLE, O .- The game prospects her ants are reported as exceedingly abundant owing to the fact that last winter's snows were light and many old birds were left over. Coyies of quall may be raised in every field and rabbits are swarming. Farmers complain bitterly of the pot hunter, but the legitimate sportsman will find good treatment in most any direction from this city.

MILLERSTOWN, PA. - Game seems to be scarce in the surrounding country, and since woodcock brought to this place. Hunting a woodcock brought to this place. Hunting this year cannot be compared with last, as game is much more scarce. Last season rabbits were killed by the dozen, while pheasants and quail were equally abundant. The farmers all say that there are very few rabbits and small game this year, and their sons have to put in the time killing raccoons, which are plentiful.

Lima, O.—The prospects for quail in this ocality are excellent and fine sport is promised at the opening of the season. Pheasants are not so plenty, but there will be fully as many, if not more than last year. Rabbits are reported to abound, and sportsmen anticipate great hunting this year. Farmers are not disposed to let the hunters go through their premises—that is, a majority of them; however, many of them enjoy having the boys come if they will only stop and ask permission, and often go along with them.

In some sections of the country farmers are de-cidedly opposed to persons hunting on their premises, and have organized to punish those who trespass on facility grounds. But this is not the rule.
