POLITICS THROUGHOUT THE STATE AND NATION

[SPECIAL TELEGRAN TO THE DISPATCH.] NEW YORK, Sept. 1 .- Judge Walter Q. Gresham, of Chicago and Indiana, who has been enjoying a two-weeks' vacation in Connecticut, arrived at the Fifth Avenue Hotel last night and held a conference with a number of political friends of the Hoosier State. Those present at the conference were: Judge John M. Butler, C. W. Fairbanks, General J. W. Foster and Colonel Dan Houser, of St. Louis.

It was noticeable that Colonel James H. Rice, ex-Auditor of Indiana, who is at the hotel, was not in the conference. He is a great admirer of the Judge, but being a Democrat he was not invited. If the conference had been social in its nature Colonel Rice would not have been absent. The question asked to-day was this: "Was the conference intended as a Gresham boom or what?"

The evidence goes to show that the configuration of the nature of a class and their next extra was strongly in favor of the nomination of Mr. Wright.

Other Democrats think, almost audibly, that as the Republicans gave the farming element no recognition on their ticket it would be policy to make a strong bid for the granger vote by nominating men possessing the good will of the agriculturists. The argument against putting in the field a ticket of this kind is that it would be recognizing a bad principle to make a discrimina-

Hoosier State, but hitherto President Harrison has had the delegation. It is asserted that with the two forces together the Democrats would have no chance whatever to

Hon. C. W. Fairbanks, of Indianapolis, a big lawyer and several times a millionaire has been working for the Judge's nomination to the Presidency for a number of years. In 1888 he was in Chicago, and did all he could for his candidate. Not long ago he gave a great banquet in Indianapolis, where the Judge, General Alger, Colonel A. L. Conger and many other prominent Republicans met. No one has been able to find out whether the banquet was to boom the Judge, Mr. Blaine or General Alger. A SHOW OF STRENGTE.

Some one who did not wish to be quoted said the conference last night and this morning was merely a preliminary skirmish, and was intended simply to show the strength of the Judge. A reporter asked Mr. Fairbanks if the conference was to boom Judge Gresham for the Presidency. Mr. Fairbanks appeared to be surprised, and said it was purely a social thing and by accident. He said: 'I am in a big hurry to-day, but will see you later."

Judge Gresham was very amiable, but said that he could not talk polities or give an interview on any subject. He said he had enjoyed two weeks' rest in Connecticut and was on his way to Chicago. He thought he would leave to-night. General Foster was inclined to be reticent.

The Indiana Democrats in the city are much interested. They are anxious to have a Republican row in progress in the Hoosier State, but General Foster said that Indiana would go Republican by hard work. General Foster and Mr. Fairbanks will be here sev-

Situation in the Fast. PHILADELPHIA, Sept. Mayor Stuart and Mr. Dalzell were closeted Mayor Stuart and Mr. Dalzell were closeted together for over an hour discussing League affairs. Whether or not Mr. Dalzell succeeded in enlisting the aid of the Mayor could not be learned, but it is well known that at the meeting of the League Executive Committee in July the Mayor favored the adoption of Congressman-Senator Robinson's resolution to exclude the "mushroom" clubs, which the Dalzell men so velocities and the constant of the control of the son's resolution to exclude the "musiroom" clubs, which the Dalzell men so vehemently opposed. After leaving the Mayor, Mr. Dalzell hurried down to the Continental Hotel and spent a listly hour chatting with State Chairman Watres on State politics.

Shortly after Mr. Dalzell left the Mayor, Secretary Lindsay called on Mr. Stuart. The object of his visit was to report to Mayor Stuart, as President of the League, the names of the clubs entered and the amount of money paid to him, and to get a similar from the President of the clubs that have reported at this end of the State, and incidentally to try and enlist the Mayor's support for balzell. Later in the day Mr. Dalzell said that he was on his way to Washingell said that he was on his way to Was ton and thought he would stop over in Philadelphia just to look over the situation. He said that he found things in a very promising condition.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 1.—[Special.]—Secretary Harrity, Attorney General Hensel and Chairman Kerr seem to be favorable to the nomination of Robert E. Tilden has been prominently mentioned as a candidate for the office to which Mr. Wright aspires, but he is understood to be willing to take the nomination for State Treasurer, and the convention on Thursday will no doubt see that he gets the latter. Chairman Kerr said to-night that if Wright were nominated for Auditor General he would uncover the lid and expose the crook-edness which has prevailed in that depart-ment. what?"

The evidence goes to show that the conference was premeditated. A week ago Otto Gresham, the bright son of the Judge, and young Oliver Morton, his political admirer, were in the city, and remained several days. The supposition is that they arranged for the meeting last night and this morning.

ENVELOPED IN MYSTERY.

They were mysterious and had nothing to say for publication. Three days ago they suddenly departed, not together, but one shead of the other. This morning Judge Gresham and General Foster had a long talk. It is known that General Foster is a friend of the President's and for that reason it is surmised that the conference may have been for the purpose of coming to an understanding about Indiana.

Judge Gresham has many friends in the Hoosier State, but hitherte President Harrison has had the delegation. He was met by a committee of representative citizens and was enthusiastically received all along the line. Major McKinley has many admirers in this section of the State, among Democrats as well as Republicans. Major McKinley's effort tonight was a masterpiece and was similar in thought to other speeches delivered during the campaign. The meeting will awaken Republicans here to greater activity. Major McKinley speaks at Pomeroy to-morrow.

When Major McKinley passed through Lancaster this morning, on his way to fill the appointment here, the depot surroundings were crowded with hundreds of people, who on very short notice had assembled to greet him, accompanied by the Cadet Band. A stop sufficient to allow a few remarks from the candidate was made, and after being introduced by Captain J. M. Sutphen, amid the applause of the crowd, he spoke for perhaps ten minutes. He was listened to with interest, and his talk, as well as his personal appearance, made a most favorable impression, as was attested by the hearty reception given him. of the State, among Democrats as well as

me Hotels Dropped Money, but Others Made More Than Ever Before-Even the Losers Will Be on Deck Again

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 1.—[Special.]— The results of the backward season at this resort are being realized now that the August rush is over and the straightening out of financial affairs is in order. There are quite a number of hotels that are behind for the season, but no disastrous failures are reported. Messrs. Neal and Hamilton, the lessees of the big United States Hotel, have wound up their affairs for the season and acknowledge a shortage of $5,000, mostly due to local trades people. They claim that they have enough general supplies in the hotel to more than cover this indebtedness, and that they will open up again next spring.

Congress Hall, another large summer house, of which T. C. Gillette, of Philadelphia, was the lessee this season, has also cheed with an indebtedness of about $0.00. There will be a meeting of Mr. Gillette's ereditors to-morrow, when it is confidently expected that Coon Brothers, the Philadela commission merchants who own the hotel, will make a favorable arrangement to liquidate the claims. D. H. Lewis, proprietor of the Hotel Cambridge, is short about $5,000, but will continue and endeavor to pay up next year. Mr. Lewis was formerly pro-prietor of the Hotel Cambridge, at Chester, Pa. The Ingomar is also in difficulty to the extent of $5,000. The lessees are Carl It. The Notorious Robert Ray Hamilton Scandal Now Revived.

A PLAY WITH A MAUDLIN PLOT,

In Which the Fair Adventuress Figures as the Injured Heroine.

THE DEBUT MADE IN A JERSEY VILLAGE

PERFORM THE PERSON TO THE DISPATCH. BOONTON, N./J., Sept. 1.—That curious woman who calls herself Mrs. Robert Ray Hamilton, but whom the courts decided to be Mrs. Joshua Mann, has once more shuffled the cards, and has made a new deal in the entertaining if uncertain game of adventure which she began so many years ago. In this small New Jersev town she made her debut as an actress to-night in a play embracing the centering about the incilents of her life with Robert Ray Hamilton.

Months ago it was known that some one had written a play for her which was to be called "The Habertons," and it was also known that Haberton was selected because it would suggest to the public the fact that the play would deal with the Robert Ray Hamilton episode. When the famous suit was brought to such an ignominious close, and Mrs. Mann found herself known by her true name, and fully exposed in the fraudulent child affair, she took herself out of sight. She has been spending the months of retirement in restoring her shattered nerves and in developing that histrionic talent which every adventuress is confident

A FAIR ACTRESS . That she studied assiduously and with some intelligence was shown by her per-formance to-night. Charley Gardiner, who formance to-night. Charley Gardiner, who has managed several sensational enterprises, was selected as manager for this. During the last two months rehearsals have been frequent—almost as frequent af the changes in the actors. Among the first moves Gardiner made was to change the title of the play. He decided that "The Habertons" was not as attractive as it might be and substituted "All a Mistake," relying upon the publishing of the name, Mrs. Robert Ray Hamilton, in big black type under the title to put people in mind of what was "Ail a Mistake."

Boonton was decided, upon as the place for Mistake."

Boonton was decided upon as the place for the debut in order to give the actress a chance to work off her stage fright before appearing before a city audience. About 250 people came out to see her in the evening, and it may be said in the beginning that Boonton was well content with the performance. It was up to the Boonton average.

formance. It was up to the Boonton average.

To one familiar with the ruin of Robert Ray Hamilton and the way in which his name was dragged through the mire, the play was simply an additional horror. The plot is mixed, and even the violent struggles of the author of the play to make a spotless heroine fail. Robert Ray Hamilton is masqueraded under the name of Roland Miningston. Josh Mann is called hon Vanieck. Evan Mann is called Nadine, a friendless orphan surrounded by low and vicious persons. Nurse Donnelly may be strainedly described in a Mrs. Preston, who is a drunken housekeeper for the Livingstons.

THE MAUDIIN PLOT. THE MAUDLIN PLOT.

To strip the characters of their names in the play, Robert Ray Hamilton is made to meet and love Eva Mann, thereby enraging his bosom friend, Josh Mann, and his castoff sweetheart, who has no counterpart in real life. The wicked Josh, or Van Teck, as you please, hires a man to personate a priest and thus, when Robert Ray and Eva think they are married, they are not. Eva finds out the truth through the drunken house keeper, thinks Robert Ray has deceived and a second and genuine marriage takes place.

They go to the seashore, followed by the To strip the characters of their names in machinations of some villians. The drunken housekeeper rushes in with a knife and tries to stab Eva; Robert Ray interferes and accidentally stabs the drunken housekeer. Crowd rushes in, Eva takes the blame and Robert files—which is a new and much revised version of the story of the crime for which Eva did time in the Trenton Penitentary. The last act does not pretend to follow the facts, unless it is intended as a sort of prophecy. For in it Eva is about to marry Josh, because she thinks Robert Ray is dead, and would wish him to marry his bosom friend. But Robert Ray comes back in the nick of time; and villian Josh sneaks away exposed, takes poison and dies.

Eva Mann certainly makes up well. Her stage presence takes ten years from her life and much of the hardness from her face. She has also been trained well. But when it comes to reading the lines Eva Mann is not there at all.

AN ENTERTAINING CONTRAST. If ever a play demanded tragedy the sky-piercing sort, this play requires it. Eva Mann expressed the tremendous passion in her gestures, while her voice had about as little excitement in it as a glass of rain water. The contrast was highly enter-rain water. The contrast was highly entertaining.

Then there was the high back of a plush sofa. It offered no resting place for her elbow in a gesture of face-buried-in-hand grief, and Mrs. Mann bit her lips with wrath because the elbow slipped and scraped down the back. When she said, "Oh, that Robert were here in the spirit," she waved her arm and body frantically, but maintained an even tone set aside in good society for observations about the weather. When the cast up her eyes and tried to blush it was a cause for a far from polite titter even in the Boonton Opera House.

But the shame of it was sickening to those who knew the story. It would be hard to recall a similar attempt to make capital out of disgrace and to repay the honorable, though misdirected, kindness of agentleman by dragging his private character in the publicity of the stage. The company is about of the barn-storming average with one or two exceptions, who are a triffe above it. Mrs. Mann's gowns would not create a sensation in a city stage. Of them it is sufficient to say that she wore a tea gown at a dinner where the men did all in their power to convince the audience that it was a full-dress affair. o convince the audience that it was a full-

HARRISON MAY HAVE TO ADVERTISE

FOR MINISTER EGAN. Not a Word Yet Received at Washington From Our Chief Representative in Chile -The Latest Intelligence From South

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1. - [Special.] What is the matter with Egan?" is the query on every lip at the State Department, and not only at the State Department but everywhere. Up to 10 o'clock to night the officials of that anxious department say that not a whisper is heard to indicate that such a person as Egan is in existence. Acting Secretary Wharton of the State Department a person as Egan is in existence. Acting Secretary Wharton of the State Department visited Acting Secretary Soley of the Navy Department to-day to get news from a Minister of the State Department, but the always obliging and polite Mr. Soley could afford no consolation to the disconsolate Mr. Wharton that he advertise offering a reward for information in regard to the whereabouts of one Egan, a person of stoutish boild, medium size, full light brown beard, and a slight Milesian accent, but the Acting Secretary hinted that if he did so the amount of the reward promised would be very small.

The slience of Mr. Egan begins to grow ludicrous to others than the officials of the State Department. No explanation can be offered save that he may have been killed in the riots, or that he may have been killed in the riots, or that he may have non away with Balmaceda, or that the rioters may have destroyed the telegraph wires, or a dozen other such inconsequential things. The fact that information from any source is very meager excuses Egan, as any difficulty in the way of others communicating would of course extend to him.

The anxiety at the State Department grows with every passing hour of silence, and if the later hours of to-night bring nothing the mental tension to-morrow will be tremendous. At the Press Club there is serious talk of forming an expedition to start out to discover the missing Minister, and practically the whole club has voluntered to go if the Department will furnish special trains, steamers, poker chips, cigars, Appolinaris, etc.

AN INCREASE ILLEGAL ALLEGHENT'S PUBLIC BUILDING SITE

Side Will Have to Make Up the Exist.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 .- [Special]-Assistant Secretary Crounse to-day submitted to Solicitor Hepburn, of the Treasury Department, the question of the construction of the law making appropriations for the Allegheny public building. Mr. Hepburn was not long in making up his mind. He. informed the Assistant Secretary that there could be no doubt in regard to the meaning of the two acts making appropriations. The first provided $65,000 for the acquirement of the site. The second appropriated $35,-000 for the beginning of building operations There could be no increase of the amount for a site except by a new action on the part Therefore, if the people of Allegheny have not enough enthusiasm or local pride to supply, as Pittsburg did, and as many other cities have, the difference between the appropriation and the amount necessary to acquire an eligible sight, there will remain but several undesirable courses to pursue. Either a site will have to be accepted which will be unsatisfactory to the city and the government, in an out of the way place, or the matter will have to be referred to Congress, with the chance of a refusal of an increase, or possibly a repeal of acts already passed,

It is now decided flinally and for all time that only $65,000 can be used for the purchase of a site. Assistant Secretary Crounse is averse to investing even this amount in a site which would not be satisfactory to the authorities, whose duty it is to make a selec-tion, nor to the public at large in Allegheny. Secretary Foster entirely agrees with his assistant. They think it better to keep the money than to use it in the acquirement of theroffers or suggestions from citizens of Allegheny, they are ready to hear them. Otherwise the whole matter will doubtless be pigeon-holed, at least until Congress shall

A NEW INSURANCE SCHEME.

▲ Il Accident Claims Against a Railroad Assumed by a Company.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—[Special.]—During 1889 no less than 113 persons were killed or maimed by the Long Island Railroad Company. For injuries to persons the road was compelled to pay that year $39,679 93. Other "legal expenses" took $29,886 25. The situation was not pleasant. Employes were urged to be more cautious, and so far as possible, avoid the accidents. Apparently the warning was given with good effect, for the warning was given with good effect, for the year following, 1890, there was a marked decrease in the number of killed and wounded. More passengers, it is true, were wiped out of existence, but fewer employes were injured and only a third as many people were run down on the tracks.

But the satisfaction of the railroad authorities was of short duration, for the faminages awarded to these victims and their friends increased from $25,670.98 to $69,850. Legal expenses showed a slight increase. May 28, 1891, there was admitted to transact business in the State the American Casualty Insurance and Security Company, of Baltimore. This corporation was "to transact the business of making insurance upon steam boilers, and upon pipes, engines and machinery connected therewith or operated thereby, when a explosion and accident occurred, and against loss or damage to life or property resulting therefrom, and to make inspections of and issue certificates of the company laid the matter of insuring against accident therefor before the directors of the Long Island Railroad Company, agreeing for a certain sum to assume all the functions of the claim department of the railroad. It was agreed, in short, that the inspector should settle claims against the Long Island Company contest them when necessary and finally, if beaten, pay the damages. The sum for which the Casnalty Company consented to do all this is said to be not less than $60,000 a year. So far as known the Long Island Railroad is the first to try this system of insurance. the year following, 1890, there was a marked

AUSTEN REID MURDERED.

TWO FRIENDS ATTEMPT RESCUE

And Each of Them Feels the Keen Blade of O'Malley's Big Weapon.

THE SECOND VICTIM VERY BADLY HURT

A Ross' Grove picnic ended with a mur-der yesterday. Austen Reid, with his dancing partner on his arm, received two fatal stabs, and as the final note of the music for the last set died out his life went with it. Two of Reid's friends, who came to his assistance, were attacked in a similar manner, and one of them, Joseph J. Farbacher, fell, badly wounded. Patrick O'Malley, the wielder of the murderous weapon, is under arrest. He and Miss Pettigrew, whose charms caused the deed, are locked up in the prison of Etna borough.

Members of Steuben Lodge, A. P. A., of Etna, were all at Ross' Grove yesterday attending the annual pienic of the organization. Others came from Sharpsburg, among whom were Austen Reid, Joseph J. Farbacher and Frank Baird. O'Malley was there all day with his best lady friend, Miss Pettigrew, of Hites' station.

A CLIMAX DUE TO JEALOUSY. According to reports Reid was also some-what fond of Miss Pettigrew, who is just 18 and fairer than many maidens. Their dry was not of the meek sort, and Reid had preceded him, however, and O'Malley was compelled to stand by while Reid and the girl whirled about the floor. He stood watching them, following them with his eyes as they glided about. Finally when the dance was over and Reid had offered his arm to the young lady to lead her from the crowd, the disappointed youth could curb his jealonally no longer. Stepping up to Reid he said:

"What do you mean by taking my girlt"
"Oh, go find another," Reid replied, laughing.

"On, go find another," Reid replied, laughing.

The words had scarcely left his lips when O'Malley, flushed with rage, sprang at him, they grappied and fell, with Reid underneath. He struggled to rise, but O'Malley, with an oath, plunged a long knife twice into his side. Farbacher and Baird, attracted by the the noise, came up just in time to see their companion breathe his last. They both caught O'Malley to pull him off his prostrate victim, when the knife flashed again. ONE MAN STABBED TWICE. The first blow struck Baird on the chin. He imped back to avoid a second blow and the knife again descended, striking Far-bacher in the back. Still another plunge landed in rarbacher's back, sticking between the shoulders.

Farbacher fell on the platform beside Reid and the red-handed O'Mally started coolly to walk away through the crowd. The whole tragedy had occoured in less than a minute and officer Foster had only had time to run to the place when O'Mally emerged from the crowd and started away. The officer caught him, however, and brought him back. Later he had difficulty in saving him from violence at the hands of the crowd.

in saving him from violence at the hands of the crowd.

Physicians were soon in attendance, but Reid was dead long before they arrived. His body was taken to Holzbeimer's undertaking rooms in Sharpsburg, and the other two young men who had been stabbed were taken to their respective homes. Officer Foster took O'Malley and Miss Pettigrew to the Etna lockup for the night. The Coroner's inquest on the case has been set for Friday morning at 10 o'clock. The prisoners will be committed to jail this morning until that time.

THE RELIGION OF SUICIDE Many Agnostics Following the Example of the Late Dr. Stuart on Principle. BRADFORD, Sept. 1.—[Special.]—Elias Heas-ley, aged 65 years, is the latest victim to the suicidal mania which seems to have fastened itself upon a certain circle of followers of suicidal manis which seems to have instened itself upon a certain circle of followers of the learned agnostic, Dr. Stuart, who committed suicide after custing up an uneven belance of life. The respected doctor voluntarily departed a month ago. A few days later Frank Davison, an acquaintance, took poison enough to kill a horse, but was called back by a physician and a stomach pump, saturday Charles Cannon, another cynical unbeliever, suddenly decided that all was vanity after 85 years' fruitless experiments, and took an ounce of vulgar rodent remover. His funeral took place to-day.

One of the most interested readers of the doleful tale of disappointment was Elias Heasley, aged 60, a forlorn old chap who lived with his son near here. Elias was also a member of the circle of inndels here, promoted by the honored Stuart, and after reading the story of life and death, thought he had enough of the former and would try the latter. With a nickel's worth of rough on rats as the means and death as the end, the old gentleman made a complete success of first last, and died this morning in terrible agony. An indirect cause of Elias' sudden decision was he did not like to live with his daughter-in-law.
