Foreign houses were liber-al buyers, and the German element seems to be especially impressed by the removal of the prohibition against the introduction of American pork into Germany. There were ordinary fluctuations after a strong opening, but before the close prices were up to the highest point, and the bull tide was tion. "The bank statement to-day showed a heavy loss in cash and in surplus reserve, but it had no unfayorable effect upon prices. There was a large movement of money to the interior this week, which counted high in the averages, while the payments for bonds purchased by the Government were not made till late in the week, and so they only figured moderately in the statement. The banks are undoubtedly better off to-night than the statement of average. There-need be little fear that speculation will have any trouble from the condition of the money market. There will be large disbursements by the Treasury in the next two weeks, and before that time we will undoubtedly re-ceive further supplies of gold from Europe. "The season for erep scares on corn is not yet over, but we advise our clients to put little faith in any stories about frost unless there be news of a very serious nature. The best informed grain men say that an enor-mous corn crop is almost assured. It will require damage to present it from being al-most as phenomenal as the wheat yield. Rith rices booming. While this lasts no one need worry about the storus market. "The bank statement to-day showed a
