SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.) WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 .- Ex-Attorney-General Garland will appear at the next term of the Supreme Court of the United States as counsel for the defendants in a most remarkable criminal cause, which comes before that body on a writ of error. It is what is known in Northern Texas as the "Marlow Mob Cases," in which a kinsman of Mr. Garland is involved with the defense. The Court will be called upon to

The official records in the case, now on file in the Supreme Court, disclose an astounding conspiracy which led by gradual estounding conspiracy which led by gradual steps a whole community into a series of criminal transactions. This conspiracy was of the hacks with them and drove off. They hatched by peace officers and county officials and included prominent citizens, Indictments were found by the wholesale against the conspirators and such of the participants in the mobs as could be identihed. A trial in the United States District Court followed, at which three men, all peace officers, were found guilty and sen-tenced to long terms in the penitentiary. The story of these cases in all its strange and tragic details is now told for the first

ACTORS IN THE TRAGEDIES.

The four sons of a Texas doctor were the chief actors in the tragedies. They were Boone, George, Alfred, Charles and Lewelleyn, typical honest trontiersmen, dead shots and expert cattle men. Late in Augast, 1888, the first step was taken in the series which led to the sanguinary fray at Dry Creek. Two deputy United States Marshals, Ed. W. Johnson and Sam Cris-well, went into the Indian Territory and ar-rested four of the Marlow brothers, the father being dead, on a charge of stealing 33 horses from Ba-Sin-Da-Ba, a Cadde Indian. This stealing was alleged to have taken place in 1885. George was temporarily absent on a trading expedition.

Johnson and Criswell had not been es pecially fortunate in preventing the raids of the rustlers or in arresting them after-ward. They determined therefore to arrest ward. They determined therefore to arrest somebody on a charge of horse stealing, swear them into the penitentiary and make themselves popular with the cattlemen. They carried the four Marlow boys, Alfred, Charles, Boone and Eph, to the jail at Graham. When George Marlow returned he, too, was thrown into jail. Johnson and Criswell then industrically discominated criswell then industriously disseminated the opinion that the Marlows were cut proats, horse thieves and rustlers generelly. They succeeded, in fact, in making the impression on the public mind that each of the Marlows was a "bad man." Their idea was to get up a mob and kill the

The Marlows were treated with every indiguity. Finally they escaped, went back to the Denson place, were arrested again and this time chained in pairs. The mob came, Charley Marlow knocked one down with his fist and he afterwards died, while went up to the part of the country where his sweetheart lived. He made his presence the part of the country where his sweetheart lived. He made his presence the part of the country where his sweetheart lived. He made his presence the part of the country where his sweetheart lived. lead pipe, kept the whole mob at bay. Finally the mob gave up defeated. Then the leaders got together again and fixed up the leaders got together again and fixed up the details of the next attempt. This was to have the brothers removed to Dallas and to lie in wait at Dry Creek and deliberately nurder them from ambush as they were being taken through. Just before reaching Dry Creek the vehicles, in charge of men who were in with the conspirators, were stopped, and the guards made a show of friendliness. But the assertions of the guards did not deceive Charley Marlow. As their hack emerged from the creek bed and climbed up the ascent he saw the trees and bushes on the south side of the lane, the moon, now the south side of the lane, the moon, now well up, shedding a bright light over the scene. "Boys," he said, "we'll all be killed in 15 minutes. The mob is biding somewhere in that brush." THE COWARDLY ATTACE.

Hardly were those words out of his mouth when the leader of the mob rose from the bush and shouted: "Halt! Hold up your hands!"

A sheet of flame leaped out from the ushes, the reports from a score of rifles rang out upon the still sir, a crowd of armed men sprang through the open gate and ran yelling to the foremost back. Martin, the driver, scrembled hastily down and to the heads of his horses, crying as he went:
"The scoundrels are in there. Kill 'em

At the first alarm Charley and Alf jumped over the side of the hack away from the mob, hobbled as fast as their shackles and chains would permit to the shinckles and chains would permit to the hack where the guards were, and each soutched a Winchester from one of the guards. George and Eph followed the other two. As they struck the ground a man with a rifle in his hand passed them. George Marlow sprang on his back, bore him to the ground, and seized his rifle and recolver. revolver. Passing the pistol to Eph he cooked the gun and, as the man arose and started to run, George shot him in the back. The mob, passing to the front and rear of the two backs, fired a volley point blank upon the Marlows, who were standing back to back. The battle of Dr. Cesab he to back. The battle of Dry Creek had begun. The Marlows fired a volley into the ranks of the mob. One man tell, but crawled off. Another, shot through the pistol hand, dropped his weapon and jumped up and down cursing.

FIGHTING FOR TREIR LIVES. The mob, disconcerted by finding the Mar-lows armed and fighting with unshaken courage, retreated to the brush. In a few minutes the mob made another rush, firing as they came. Alf Marlow fell stone dead with a bullet in the brain. Eph Marlow also fell. George was shot through the right hand. Charley was unburt. One brother in each chained pair had been shot down. The other two were rendered only the more desperate. Undismayed they fired shot after shot into the ranks of their foes, George resting his rifle on his wounded right arm and working the lever of the magazine with his left hand. Two of the mob fell in the road and lay where they dropped. Others, wounded, ran off shouting and cursing with pain. Again the mob took to the brush.

George called to Charley, but there was no answer. He called to Alf, but he was dead. George stood there alone, sorely hurt, his pistol hand shot through and use-less, chained to his dead brother. In his fury he dared the mob to return to the at-'Come on again, you cowardly assassins We've got plenty of arms and ammunition and nobody hurt! Come on, you cowards!" One man of that panic-stricken mob turned back. It was Frank Harrison, conwounded and numbed at the first volley of

"I'm going back to have it out," was Harrison's reply.
"Don't go; you'll be killed," continued the other.

A DUEL TO THE DEATH.

Frank Harrison did not heed the warning. He walked quickly through the woods and clumps of bushes, passed through the gate and stepped out into the road. George Marlow saw him coming. He dropped his riffe, the magazine of which was empty, stooped down and picked up the pistol which he had given Eph at the beginning of the fray. As he straightened up Harrison halted. The two men faced each other for a moment in silence. Then raising their pistols, they fired simultaneously—then again and again. At each shot George Marlow advanced a step, dragging after him the dead body of the brother to whom he was chained. At the fourth fire Frank Harrison leaped into the air and fell lifeless in the road, shot squarely between the tyes.

So intently was George Marlow watching rank Harrison's advance that he failed to see a tall man step from the shadows of the trees hardly ten paces away, and raise his pistol to shoot him. Charley had regained consciousness. He fired quickly upon the tall man, hitting him in the leg. Then began a duel between these two, Charley Marlow and Eugene Logan, the former lying on the ground, the latter standing. They emptied their six-shooters at each other without fatal effect. Charley was struck twice, the bullets ploughing ugly farrows in his scalp. Logan was hit three times, and was badly hurt. The last time Logan was hit he fell, but he had strength enough left to crawl into the center of the brush. The battle of Dry Creek was ended.

George looked inquiringly at Charley,

George looked inquiringly at Charley, who directed him to hunt for a knife. Searching the dead body of one of the mob he found a big claspknife. This he gave to Charley, who had the use of both hands. Charley then unjointed the shackled ankles of his dead brothers and freed himself and determine a most interesting point of constitutional law relating to the rights of went to the Denson farm, arriving shortly before day, and barricaded their home.

COOLER HEADS SAW THROUGH IT. Over 100 men were soon at the cabin, under the leadership of the releatless conspirators. All sorts of counsel was offered, until at last Marion Lassterand some of the cooler heads saw the animus of Collier and his fellow conspirators. No attack was made, and finally the brothers surrendered to Captain Morton and were taken to Dallas. When the March term of the court came on George and Charley Marlow, who had recovered from their wounds, were put on trial on the original indictments charging them with stealing 35 horses from Ba-Sin-Da-Ba, the Caddo Indian. As there was no widence against them they were acquitted. Shortly after the battle three desperadoes arrived in Graham from the Indian Terri-tory. They drove up to the Court House and there took a big bundle out of their wagon and carried it in. When the wrap-pings were removed the blosted body of a man was discovered. "There's Boone Marlow's dead body. We killed him in the Indian Territory, and we've brung him here to git that reward,"

FATE OF BOONE MARLOW.

It required a Coroner's inquest to decide whether it was Boone Marlow's body or not.. Finally it was decided that it was, and the reward of $1,500 offered by the conspirators at the time of the killing of Sheriff Wal-lace was turned over to the three despera-does, Beaver, Derrickson and Harbolt. These three men have since been indicted in the United States Court for the murder of Boone Marlow.

At the time when the dead body was exposed to view it was noticed by physicians that the wounds in Boone Marlow's body did not look as do gunshot wounds inflicted an alleg hole.

An investigation was afteron a live body. An investigation was after-ward set on foot by the United States authorities, and testimony was obtained which indicates that Boone Marlow was murdered under peculiarly horrible circum-stances. According to this testimony, Boone Marlow had a sweetheart in one of known to her. He kept in hiding, only venturing out to see her and to get food that she would leave for him. The girl had a reckless and vicious brother. He learned

The trial of the conspirators and mob leaders was an eventful one. It was held at Graham, in the United States Court of the Northern District of Texas, 60 miles from a railroad, and lasted 30 days. Judge the Northern District of Texus, 60 miles from a railroad, and lasted 30 days. Judge A. P. McCormick presided. People flocked in from all the surrounding counties. Everybody entering the little court house was searched for deadly weapons. An anteroom next to the door was filled with six-shooters and bowie knives and Winchester rifles.

The lawyers on each side were among the leaders of the Texas bar. The case is now before the Supreme Court on a writ of error, and the points involved will be determined for the first time. The defendants were indicated under two sections of the civil rights act, popularly known as fendants were indicted under two sections of the civil rights act, popularly known as the the "KuKux act." The first of these sections provides that if two or more persons conspire to deprive a citizen of the United States of the enjoyment of a right secured to him by the Constitution and laws of the United States, they shall be liable to imprisonment not to exceed ten years and to a fine not to exceed $5,000. The second of these sections provides that if, in second of these sections provides that if, in the pursuance of any such conspiracy, any other crime is committed, the person com-mitting it shall be liable to such punishment, in the United States Courts, as the laws of the State in which such crime is committed prescribed for such an offense.

THE THEORY OF THE CASE.

These sections are respectively No. 5,508

These sections are respectively No. 5,508 and No. 5,509 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. Judge McCormick, in his charge to the jury, set forth the theory on which the case rests, as follows;

"When a citizen is committed to the custody of the United States Marshal, or to a State jail by process issued from one of the courts of the United States, to be held in default of half to await his trial or accommend. fault of bail to swait his trial on a criminal charge within the exclusive inrisdiction of the national courts, such citizen has a right, under the Constitution and laws of the United States, to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury, and until trial, or discharged by due process of law, has the right under said Constitution and laws to be right under said Constitution and laws to be treated with humanity and be protected against all unlawful violence while he is deprived of the ordinary means of defending and protecting himself."

This case is the pioneer of this view, and the decision of the Supreme Conrt will be awaited with great interest by layman as well as by lawyers. Recently the three convicted men and all the others indicted have been admitted to bail. How this was have been admitted to bail. How this was accomplished is a most interesting phase of the story. Behind it is also a long and curious history.

B. A. Burr, of Harper county, receiver in the Honeywell case through which Judge McKay, the Alliance Judge, became famous, have filed a petition in the Supreme Court asking for a mandamus compelling Wounded and numbed at the first volley of the Marlows, he had just recovered himself. He had been reclining on the ground with his back against a tree. When he heard George Marlow's challenge he rose and drew his pistol.

"Where are you going?" said another of the moh. A BEAUTIFUL SCENE

The First Saturday Night at the Exposition a Complete Success,

DESPITE UNFAVORABLE WEATHER.

Interest Taken in the Show That People Wait for a Year to See.

SOME OF THE LEADING EXHIBITORS

The first Saturday night of the Exposition arrived in a shower of rain, or, rather, in a severe thunderstorm. It was rather dis couraging to the management, but the bravery with which the people found their way down to Duquesne way, by cars, cabs and other vehicles, and on foot when it was not convenient to ride, was flattering to the attractions offered in the great show. There was a fair attendance last night, in spite of the awful weather. Pittsburgers, or a large number of them, have become accustom to consider Saturday night as the great holiday time of the week, and they flock to the Exposition as naturally as ducks take Prof. Cappa and his band were the main attraction last night. It may be that the mud and misery outside emphasized the light and comfort within. At all events, the music of the beautiful Seventh Regiment Band never sounded so sweet since the Exposition opened as it did last night. The gaily-dressed crowds, moving slowly up and down the hall in rhythm to the strains of reed and brass and strings, and the soft hum of voices through the softer passages of the music, had a delightful effect. Everybody seemed to be there for pleasure, and they were getting it. The wet weather had affected the theaters, but it was hardly felt at the Exposition. And this, too, in spite of the building being further from the center of the city than most of the playhouses. But the people want the Exposition, wherever it may be.

In Mechanical hall the girls at the cigar factory were making up their little bundles of cigars, and, decorating them with gaily-colored ribbons, were handing them to the bashful swains who blushed in the faces of the pretty girls who bestowed the gifts when the most investigates. attraction last night. It may be that the the pretty girls who bestowed the gifts upon them. The busy hum of machinery, the whirling of wheels, and the flapping of great belts, added to the fires from the glass houses, made it a beautiful as well as bewildering scene.

Hopper Bros. & Co.,

In their display of elegant, luxurious fur-niture, are, as usual, taking the prominent place in the estimation of the delighted place in the estimation of the delighted public. Let your eye rest here and there upon some of the handsome objects. Most impressive is a sideboard of antique oak, in which the actual boldness of the apparent simplicity of form is astonishing; the richness of the carving, the massive beveled mirror, the intelligent arrangement of the drawers, closets and cabinets to hold large and small silver—well, the ladies who have seen it all wish it belonged to them. A parlor cabinet of mahoganized cherry is as tasteful and handsome as possible; in fact, it would only be appropriate in a room of surpassing richness. The library is not forgotten, as may be seen in the inviting leather-covered lounge and the restful-looking great square arm chair; and for a part of the drawing room there is the exquisitely dainty suit of four pieces covered with the new furniture material, satin damask, and all the fancy knicksatin damask, and all the fancy knick-knacks and small objects which are neces-sary to give just the proper tone to the whole affair, are all to be found in their places, just as if they were meant to stay there permanently, but already people are trying to secure different articles for their homes at close of the Exposition, for they know how very desirable those goods are.

A NOVEL DISPLAY MADE BY

Rosenbaum & Co., of 510 to 518 Market

This beautiful display commands instant attention from the visitors to the Exposition, for it is the only one of the kind in the building; the articles are of the handsomest and the arrangement above criticism. It is amusing to watch the faces of people when they realize that the figures are wax, and not living beings that sit in chairs or wave fans about to distract the unwary. Rosenbaum & Co. propose to keep up this interest in their exhibit during the continuance of the season by bringing new delights from week to week from the mammoth establishment on Market street to charm still further those who know and appreciate handsome, tasteful and fashionable fancies for the autumn. There is such a multitude of fine goods at the Rosenbaum stores that they will not be missed from the stock, yet it is just such things which show how immense the trade of that house is. It is a stock of proportions like this which can stand such a drain upon it as would be an impossibility to the upon it as would be an impossibility to the majority.

OIL WELL SUPPLY CO.

Complete Outfits for Oil, Gas or Artesia Wells. This extensive organization, whose display is located in upper end of Exposition grounds, is capable within itself to furnish from its own manufactories and shops everything necessary to drill oil, gas or artesian wells of any kind, and fit them up to produce and to supply the pipes and connections for taking away the products found. They manufacture engines, boilers, tubing, casing and pipe, drilling tools and fittings of all kinds. All the major and minor accessories of their craft are fully illustrated in implements employed in carrying on such business. Practical minds, interested in modern appliances devoted to an industry so important as drilling for oil, gas or water, will appreciate this display. The offices and warerooms of the company are at Nos. 91 and 92 Water street, Pittsburg. This extensive organization, whose dis-

Entering the central door of main building and looking to the right you will see the elegant display of this firm under its dome of Nile green and silver, and it is one of the most brilliant and striking of the whole Exposition. Such an array of choice, select wares would command attention anywhere, composed as it is of jewels, silverware in the newest designs, including their celebrated "Fort Pitt" souvenir spoons; brilliant cut glass, novelties in lamps direct from Europe; lovliest bric-a-brac in charming cabinets and artistic bits of sculpture in Italian marble, all adding to the beauty of this display. Brie-a-Brac.

Stevens Chair Co. A delightful exhibit. First and foremos of course, is the favorite reclining chair, which combines in one elegant piece the equivalent of five articles of furniture. The upholstery is beautiful and in various at-uphoistery is beautiful and in various at tractive styles.

This firm has built up a very fine trade in desks, which are here shown in oak, cherry and walnut. For taste, finish and thor-ough utility these are unsurpassed, and, if you inquire, you will find the prices are as attractive as the goods.

N A SOLID BASIS-THE FAR-FAMED HOUSE OF HOPPER BROS. & CO. rests upon a foundation unshakable, never varying from the principle of honest trading. This vast establishment sells either for Cash or on Easy Time Payments, more to your advantage than all the rest of the cash, time and credit houses to be gathered up in a day's journey. This popular firm has more resources, more goods, better, richer goods, and much cheaper than you can obtain elsewhere. Trade with the business firm whose name is a guarantee of good faith. A single investigation will convince the most skeptical that for FURNITURE, CURTAINS and CARPETS no house in this State can successfully compete with this firm, which does everything in its power to retain its customers and get new ones. In fact, for popularity, they are "out of sight."

ARE YOU

OF THOSE WHO HAVE NEVER TRIED OUR CLOTHING?

We are striving for your patronage, and we have made enormous efforts this season to be deserving of it. All through our establishment the line of action has been one of improvement -larger assortments and better values than ever before. The earmarks of this effort are plainly visible in our stock of FALL OVERCOATS, SUITS, HATS and FURNISHINGS, for Men, Boys and Children, which is now complete and open for your inspection. We invite comparison of our values, barring none, and are willing to leave the result to your fair judgment. Call and see the feast of new things we have-you'll save by
