An Ohio Postmaster Shot While Protecting His Property.

SUPPOSED MURDERER WATCHED.

by His Victim.

INTERESTING NEWS OF THREE STATES

PETECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.1 St. MARY'S, O., Sept. 20 .- A deliberate, cold-blooded murder startled the peaceful community of St. John, a picturesque village, situated among the hills, in the eastern part of this county, 16 miles east of this on a springless wood wagon. city, at an early hour this morning. The murdered man is Captain William Herring, Postmaster and prominent citizen of the flowers. She placed her lunch backet beplace. When the report of the terrible effair became circulated hundreds of people gathered the flowers, placed them in her hurried to the scene, and everything was in a state of feverish excitement. Considerable petty theireries have been going on in the village for some time, and several parties are suspected of committing them. Mr. Herring, his wife and daughter retired at about 11 last night. Mr. Herring was soon fast asleep, but his wife lay awake quite a while, as the night was oppressive and hot. At 11:30 their 16-yearold son came home, and, noticing a commotion in the poultry yard, went to the gate to investigate, when he saw the figure of a man, whom he recognized as one of the citiman, whom he recognized as one of the citi-zens of St. John running across the field.

Woing into the house the son procured a Photgun and started in search of the in-truder, but, seeing nothing of him, returned to the house and went upstairs. He first went to his purents' bedroom and informed his mother of what he had seen, but upon being assured that the man whom he saw heren in obsern he retired.

A CHICKEN THIEF CORNERED. At about 1:30 o'clock Mrs. Herring was snddenly awakened by a noise in her room and, looking up, saw her husband at the window, and upon asking him what he was doing he replied that there was some one stealing chickens. Partially dressing himself Captain Herring went out, taking his revolver with him. He had been gone but a short time when Mrs. Herring, who was anxiously swalting developments, was startled by the report of two piscol shots in rapid succession. After highing there for fully a half Lour she mustered up enough courage to remove her son and inform him of what land occurred. The son hurried down stairs, followed by his mother and sister, and, going it the direction of the chicken coop, was hourified at finding his father lying face downward on the ground in front of the barnyard gate. The Captain was dead, both its revolver still firmly grasped in one hand. A large pool of blood stained the earth where he lay, and in which he had been woltering since he received the fatal wound. The builtet entered the breast, went through the appex of the heart, then took an upward tendency, massing through his lurges, cutting his vertebrm in two and lodging in chickens, Partially dressing himself Capheroughly excited. A resident of St. John, the bears a bad reputation, is suspected of aving mardered Herring, and this suscion is strengthened for the reason that he mardered man's son recognized him shillerunning over the field. He is kept and the could derelose surveillance. ider close surveillance. In an interview with Herring's son, your representative learned that the same person and called to see the dead man this mornhad called to see the dead man this morning; that his actions were very strange, and that he walked away by himself without having spoken anything about the affair. The autimely death of Herring has cast a gloom over the whole community, as he was universally well liked. He was a prominent Odd Fellow and Mason and a member of the Reval Arcanam Lodge. He was 63 years cld.

AN UNKNOWN TRAMP KILLED.

Yesterday at Greensburg.

GHEENSBURG, Sept. 20.-[Special.]-After four hours diligent work Foreman Charles Rogers was rescued from under the wreckage of the freight train wrecked this morning. His arm was crushed to a jelly. The ing. His arm was crushed to a jelly. The bravery exhibited by the young man was remarkable. Lying there in awful pain, he calmiy directed and offered suggestions to his rescuers. The mass of wreckage was piled high above the engine and for ten rods about it, and all this debris had to be cleared away before he could be released. Minutes seemed like days to the poor fellow, and he was resigned to the awful fate that seemed certain. Finally, however, the rescuers lifted him out, and a moment later the great pile of debris caught fire from the hot reat pile of debris caught fire from the hot coals in the engine.

The train men say that an unknown tramp was on the train at the time, and all traces of his whereabouts were lost after the wreak, and it is supposed that he was burned to death, if he was not already dead. Fireman Rogers says that he was lying near him, and he distinctly heard the groans of the unfortunate man. The Greensburg fire company was brought to the scene, and by an extraordinary effort the fire was put out.

On his return to the hotel Haley noticed a slight cut on his right hand made by the stranger's teeth. He thought nothing of it at first, but late that evening it began to pain him severely. His wrist began to swell and the swelling extended, until by morning it had reached his elbow. Then a disctor was called and he poulticed the arm. As the swelling still continued, tubes were inserted under the skin, and the matter which had formed in the arm was drawn off at intervals. Last Wednesday night the

The pretty school teacher belt, picked up her lunch basket and continued her journey to school. The morning session being over, she seated herself at her desk and prepared to eat her luncheon. There were several small boys in the room. Miss McDougall put one hand into the receptacle. Then the small boys were startled by a loud scream. Looking up they saw their pretty teacher standing in her chair, while coiled about her right arm they say a yellow-brown thing that squirmed and hissed and shot out a long red tongue. Willie Phelps ran forward, grasped the snake by the tail and tore it from the teacher's arm. Then with a quick toss about his head he dashed it to the floor and stamped on its head until it was dead. Then Willie looked at Miss McDougal. She was lying prostrate on the floor. He dashed water in her face, and, seeing a drop of blood just above the wrist of her right arm, he put his mouth to it and sucked at it vigorously. Then he called upon one of his schoolmates to run to a drugstore, half a mile away, get a pint of whisky, and on his way back inform Dr. Childs of what had happened. A Philadelphia Drygoods Man Shoots Him-

LPHIA, Sept. 20.tails of the Big Freight Wreck | The sound of five shots in rapid succession startled people in the Reading Railroad station at Ninth street, shortly after noon to-day. A rush was made toward the toilet room, whence the ominous sound came, and William J. Peacock, buyer and general manager of the underwear department of Joel J. Baily & Co.'s wholesale house, was found lying upon the floor, bleeding but conscious, and with a smoking pistol by his side. There were four ghastly bullet wounds in his head, and from his throat spurted blood made by the fifth shot, which the suicide's unsteady hand had misdirected. Only a few minutes before the deadly fusilade Peacock had chatted pleasantly with the bootblack in the station, who had polished his shoes, and seemed in his

JOHNSTOWN, Sept. 20.-[Special.]-The remains of another flood victim were found yesterday in the very heart of the city. Workmen were excavating for a new house on the ruined site of a dwelling on Vine street, on the Miller property, when they turned up the unmistakable remains of the first flood victim found for several months. It is thought the bones are those of little Raymond White, son of Alex. White and grandson of John White, who lives oppo

The house the boy, with his mother and several others, occupied was carried by the flood directly over the Miller place from Vine street. Little Raymond was playing in the kitchen at the time, and neither he nor four other inmates were everseen again. The mother was taken from the wreck alive but died soon after. The remains found to day were within a foot of the surface, and citizens here believe there are many such in the city, as the search for the missing was never as thorough as was desired.

Hundreds of Cattle Dying.

HUNTINGDON, Sept. 20 .- [Special] .- A eculiar and thus far unidentified disease has affected the cattle in this and adjoining counties, and in nearly every instance it has proved fatal. The disease manifested itself two weeks ago, and already hundreds of head of cattle have perished from this cause. When attacked the animal's head falls helplessly to its side, and its legs seem to be unable to bear the weight of the body. It is believed that the disease is a form of Texas splenic fever, and was imported here by Southern cattle. The State Board of Health will be appealed to to devise means of eradicating the disease.
