

NOT IN QUAY'S LINE.

The Mushroom Club Business Has No Interest for the Senator

SO HE ISN'T GRIEVING OVER IT.

Quiet Conferences Held by Him With Watres and Other Leaders.

CONFIDENT OF REPUBLICAN SUCCESS.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—Senator Quay, who came up from Atlantic City yesterday with his wife and daughter, took a late afternoon train for Washington. After breakfast this morning the Senator went to the People's Bank and one or two other places where he had some private business to transact, and about half past 11 o'clock returned to the Continental Hotel, and was closeted for nearly an hour with State Chairman Watres, of the Republican Campaign Committee.

As he left the State headquarters for his own parlors, Mr. Quay was asked for his opinion as to the outlook in the State, but he declined to be interviewed. It was ascertained, however, that while in conference with the State Chairman the Senator talked as though he were confident that the Republican ticket would win this fall, but he would not say so. He will not be reminded of having a thorough organization in all parts of the State as the one requisite for the apathy that appears to exist among the voters.

A QUIET CONFERENCE HELD.

Senator Quay summoned Assistant Postmaster Hughes to the hotel during the morning, and about 12:30 o'clock that official and the ex-National Chairman met in the State Committee rooms and had a brief talk on political affairs, and when the two men separated Mr. Quay said that he would have an interview with the Postmaster general as soon as he reached Washington.

When asked how the State ticket would be affected by the return to mushroom clubs of the fees paid by them, by which it is believed that the State ticket will be a winner at the polls in November, and rejoices that the ticket shows signs of increasing popularity, Mr. Quay said that he had received a letter, which he believed alluded to the matter, but he did not seem to consider the matter any great importance as an element in the campaign.

WILL CAUSE A ROW.

It is believed in some quarters that this winter will generate considerable feeling among the people constituting these clubs, and that the effect will be to greatly injure the State ticket in November. Senator Quay evidently had no taste for the subject, and was glad to discuss the matter with Mr. Watres, but that he had received a letter, which he believed alluded to the matter, but he did not seem to consider the matter any great importance as an element in the campaign.

King presided, and in introducing the orator stated that the tariff and the McKinley bill produces more, and more more about the tariff, than 40 such streets represented by Roger Q. Mills, and more industries than the whole State of Ohio. Congressman Dalzell was received with cheers, and said in part:

I am glad to be here to-night, and I bring greetings to the protection Republicans of Pennsylvania from the protection Republicans of Ohio. I am glad to be here to-night, and I bring greetings to the protection Republicans of Pennsylvania from the protection Republicans of Ohio. Heber Newton, of this city, and Rev. Talk with the average Spiritualist and you will find that his chief grievance against the world is its failure to investigate the phenomena upon which he bases his belief.

SIEGEL THE ORATOR.

The Great German-American Soldier Talks to His Countrymen

ABOUT THE DAY THEY CELEBRATE

Their First Colony in This Country Planted in Pennsylvania.

THE DAY OBSERVED IN WASHINGTON

PORT MADISON, Ia., Oct. 6.—This city is given over entirely to-day to the German Americans, who have thronged here in great numbers in spite of the threatening rain. The trains coming in this morning were loaded down with excursionists. The number of people in the city is about 2,000. Governor Boies came in at 10 o'clock from Keokuk, and was escorted to the hotel by Co. F., I. N. G., of this place. The parade started at 10:30 in the drizzling rain, and consisted of carriages containing local committees, General Seigel, Governor Boies, visiting delegates with bands, floats of business houses and members of various German secret orders. The procession, about one mile long, proceeded to Central Park, where an elaborate programme had been arranged.

GENERAL SEIGEL'S SPEECH.

The keys of the city were delivered to President Stempel by Mayor Hamilton in a neat speech. Governor Boies was then introduced, but he made no speech, simply telling the people that he was here to-day as one among a thousand to pay a tribute to the great German-American hero. Then General Seigel made a speech of an hour's length. He said in substance: "German Day is one dear to our hearts, for on this day the German people landed on the coast and founded a colony. At this time the Turks were knocking at the doors of Vienna and France was expelling the Germans from her borders. Thirty thousand went to Holland and then to England, and about 1800 men were sent to Pennsylvania to found a settlement, where they were made welcome by William Penn. They were the first German-Americans. They assisted in building up the country and displayed solid achievements as the result of their presence.

A CELEBRATION IN THE RAIN.

A few songs and short addresses followed and the great audience, covered with umbrellas, went to dinner. In the afternoon the rain ceased and the sun shone brightly. The parade in the park by the various German singing clubs. This evening General Seigel is holding a public reception at the hotel. Fireworks are being displayed on the Mississippi river, and this is the order of the evening in many halls.

A CELEBRATION IN THE RAIN.

A dispatch from Washington says: German day was celebrated with great enthusiasm by the citizens of this city of German birth and descent. The principal feature of the celebration was a grand parade. The procession was the largest and best seen in Washington for a long time. A contingent of the National Guard of District of Columbia, several benevolent associations and a large number of the Volunteer Fireman's Association participated.

A CELEBRATION IN THE RAIN.

A dispatch from Omaha says: Six thousand people marched in the German parade this afternoon in spite of the fast-falling snow. The storm, however, soon ceased, and the rest of the day proved pleasant. All the German societies of the city and surrounding towns were out with banners and floats, and the procession was an imposing one. The day's festivities closed with a monster meeting at Germania Hall, at which an extensive musical programme was rendered, and addresses were delivered by Udo Brachvogel and E. Rosewater.
